

The purpose of this tool is to help educators understand each of the grade level standards and how those standards connect to the students' overall preparation for college and career readiness.

Standards are defined as the most critical prerequisite skills and knowledge. This document is color-coded to reflect both anchor and priority standards. Though previous emphasis was placed on priority standards to address lost learning due to COVID-19, New Mexico teachers should note that moving forward, while priority standards allow for acceleration of learning, all standards should be addressed in instruction throughout the school year.

In this guide you will find:

- A breakdown of each of the grade level standards within the Writing strand, including:
 - Vertical alignment guidance
 - Essential vocabulary related to the standard
 - Identification of anchor standards as identified by the CCSS and priority standards as identified by NMPED

Key
	Anchor Standard	Anchor standards, as identified by the Common Core, are denoted with an anchor icon. Anchor standards are the fundamental skills we want students to have when they graduate. The College and Career Ready (CCR) and grade-specific standards are necessary complements—the former providing broad standards, the latter providing additional specificity—that together define the skills and understandings that all students must demonstrate. Anchor standards appear from Kindergarten to 12th grade and are aligned to what colleges and workplaces expect students to be able to do.
	Priority Standard	Priority standards, as identified by NMPED, are denoted with red highlighting. Priority standards are the most critical prerequisite skills and knowledge a student needs. This does not mean that these are only standards required to be taught, just these are the standards that will allow for the acceleration the students of New Mexico need during this time.

Argument writing establishes a writer's position on a topic	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● analysis – a detailed examination of the using sound reasoning and evidence. Argument writing has many purposes – to change the reader’s point of view, to call a reader to action, or to convince the reader that the writer’s explanation, or purported version of the truth, is accurate. Writers use legitimate reasons and relevant evidence in a logical progression to validate the writer’s position or claim(s). By the end of twelfth grade, students understand how to write arguments in support of claims that examine important topics or texts and include plausible reasons and pertinent, adequate evidence.

components of a subject to understand its meaning and/or nature as a whole

- argument – value statement(s) supported by evidence whose purpose is to persuade or explain
- audiences – the people who watch, listen to, view, and/or read something presented via an artistic medium
- biases – prejudice(s) in favor of or against an individual or group; partiality or preference that prevents objectivity
- claim(s) – an assertion(s) of the truth of something, often a value statement; generally, an author uses evidence to support the assertion of truth
- cohesion – the action of forming a unified whole; the quality of being united logically
- counterclaims – claims that rebut a previous claim or value statement, generally supported by evidence contrary to that which was presented to support the original claim
- editing – the process by which an author improves a text by correcting errors in grammar and/or conventions, (e.g., grammatical, structural, etc.), verifying the precision of language, eliminating redundancy, etc.
- evidence – facts and/or information (quotes, statistics, graphs, etc.) presented together as a body of support for a claim or value statement
- formal English, style, task, and use of – English language usage that adheres to grammar and style conventions, is appropriate to task, purpose, and audience, and is objective and free of bias; When spoken, formal usage generally consists of clear enunciation, consistent eye contact, and appropriate vocabulary. When written, formal usage generally consists of coherent organization, complex grammatical and syntactic structures, and domain-specific vocabulary
- norms and conventions of the discipline – refers to the generally accepted rules and practices regarding style, format, publication, etc. of particular disciplines or fields of study which are distinct from (and often in addition to) the conventions of standard English (e.g., Academic theses generally have prescribed chapters.)
- objective tone – a neutral tone an author adopts that maintains distance from the topic under

Students Who Demonstrate Understanding Can...

- form opinions on topics rooted in evidence-based research and effectively express why their topic/claim warrants a discussion.

- create a written argument that is rooted in sound logic and by extension demonstrate an understanding of content.
- consider arguments that are in direct opposition to the one taken and use the opposing evidence to effectively strengthen the argument.
- effectively structure their writing by employing clear transitions between claims, both simple and complex sentence structure, and a varied level of vocabulary.
- demonstrate an understanding of the audience they are presenting to and effectively structure their argument to suit the intended audience. (i.e. appropriate jargon, use of rhetorical devices, etc.)
- present information in a confident tone that utilizes formal writing styles, while demonstrating an understanding of the writing conventions specific to the student's topic/claim.
- write a conclusion that strengthens the argument by reiterating the main points without being repetitive.

Clarification Statement	Vocabulary for Teacher Development

Informative/explanatory writing communicates information. It has many purposes – to increase the reader’s understanding of a topic, process, or procedure; to provide clarification on a topic, process, or procedure; and/or to answer “what,” “how,” and “why” questions regarding the topic under study. Writers use previous knowledge and information from primary and secondary sources in their pieces to increase the reader’s knowledge of a given topic. By the end of twelfth grade, students understand how to write informative/explanatory texts to investigate and clearly and accurately communicate multi-faceted ideas, concepts, and information through the effective selection, organization, and analysis of content.

- analogy – a comparison drawn between two things for the sake of clarification or explanation
- analysis – a detailed examination of the components of a subject to understand its meaning and/or nature as a whole
- audiences – the people who watch, listen to, view, and/or read something presented via an artistic medium
- cohesion – the action of forming a unified whole; the quality of being united logically
- concrete details – information, examples, data, etc. used as support or evidence for claims, generally during an argument or a persuasive or informational essay
- domain-specific vocabulary/words/phrases – Tier 3 words and phrases that are considered unique to a particular subject or discipline that are not typically used during informal conversation
- editing – the process by which an author improves a text by correcting errors in grammar and/or conventions, (e.g., grammatical, structural, etc.), verifying the precision of language, eliminating redundancy, etc.
- extended definitions – definitions that move beyond basic dictionary definitions to deepen understanding through the use of description, classification, synonyms and antonyms, etymology and history, etc.
- formal English, style, task, and use of – English language usage that adheres to grammar and style conventions, is appropriate to task, purpose, and audience, and is objective and free of bias. When spoken, formal usage also generally consists of clear enunciation, consistent eye contact, and appropriate vocabulary. When written, formal usage also generally consists of coherent organization, complex grammatical and syntactic structures, and domain-specific vocabulary
- formatting – the physical presentation of written work used to highlight the organization, categories, and topics, and to provide consistency to the look of the work (e.g., font size, headers, etc.)
- graphics – pictures, graphs, etc. (i.e., visualizations), generally used to illustrate or further explain a topic
- norms and conventions of the discipline – refers to the generally accepted rules and practices regarding style, format, publication, etc. of particular disciplines or fields of study which are distinct from (and often in addition to) the conventions of standard English (e.g., Academic theses generally have prescribed chapters.)

- objective tone – a neutral tone an author adopts that maintains distance from the topic under consideration so it is free of bias, prejudice, and personal opinion (i.e., such a tone is generally adopted during informational writing, the purpose of which is to explain or inform, not persuade)
- purpose – the reason for a particular action or creation (e.g., literary work or speech); the reason for which something exists (e.g., to persuade, to inform, to express, and/or to entertain)
- relevant evidence, observations, ideas, descriptive details – details and other elements that are closely connected and appropriate to that which is being considered, argued, or explained; when making claims, authors choose evidence, details, etc. that are closely related to the idea being expressed by the claim
- revision/revising – the process of rereading something that has been produced and making changes in order to clarify the meaning, improve cohesion, and evaluate the effectiveness of information and evidence, etc.; distinguished from editing, which is largely related to correcting errors
- strengthen – to increase the rhetorical and/or argumentative impact of a written or spoken work by revising for concision, clarity, and cohesion; providing better and/or more evidence as support for claims and value statements; eliminating wordiness, redundancy, and confusion; etc.
- syntax/syntactic – relating to the arrangement of words and phrases in order to create well-formed sentences, tied to generally accepted rules of grammar and conventions of style
- text – anything that students can read, write, view, listen to, or explore, including books, photographs, films, articles, music, art, etc.
- topic – the subject or matter being discussed or written about in a text, speech, etc.
- transition(s)/transitional words – words and phrases that are used to indicate a shift from one topic, idea, point, step, etc. to another; words that connect one element (e.g., sentence, paragraph, section, idea, etc.) to another, allowing an author to highlight the nature of the relationship and/or connection between them

Students Who Demonstrate Understanding Can...

- present topics and ideas that are rooted in evidence-based research and effectively express complex ideas as well as presenting information in a clear manner.
- use evidence obtained through research in order to develop and present a topic that is clear and coherent.
- effectively structure their writing by employing clear transitions between main ideas, use both simple and complex sentence structure, and a varied level of vocabulary.
- demonstrate an understanding of the audience they are presenting to and effectively structure their writing to suit the intended audience. (i.e. appropriate jargon, use of rhetorical devices, etc.).
- present information in a confident tone that utilizes formal writing styles, while demonstrating an understanding of the writing conventions specific to the student's topic/information.
- use language that is both appropriate and specific to the topic.
- write a conclusion that strengthens the argument by reiterating the main points without being repetitive.

Both sets of reading standards ask students to be able to read literary and informational text and analyze the information from the given text. This can come in the form of critiquing the text under investigation, critiquing an idea presented or asserting a new claim in light of the investigation. In all cases, when students make claims about a text they are analyzing, they will need to draw directly from the text to support claims made about the text.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● analysis – a detailed examination of the components of a subject to understand its meaning and/or nature as a whole ● evidence – facts and/or information (quotes, statistics, graphs, etc.) presented together as a body of support for a claim or value statement ● style – the voice of the text under investigation. This includes syntax, word use, and structure ● text – anything that students can read, write, view, listen to, or explore, including books, photographs, films, articles, music, art, etc.
