

[EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

sherrie chenault <sherrie.chenault@route4us.biz>

Tue 9/28/2021 7:49 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Important,

Please take a good look into the critical race theory. It teaches black children that they are victims and teaches white children that they are inherently racist. Is this something that we want to teach our children. Our country has come so far in a direction that has led to equal opportunity for all and this teaching undermines all of what we have done. Do not let our children carry this attitude imposed by the critical race theory into our future. Please decline the critical race theory as it will negatively impact our children.

LIVE LIFE TO THE FULLEST ,

Sherrie Chenault <3

(505)787-9173

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Wade Frazee <wfrazee@portaleschools.com>

Wed 9/29/2021 8:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please DO NOT replace the current Social Studies curriculum with the proposed standards. The primary stakeholders (parents/guardians) haven't had time to go through them. The proposed standards are 129 pages long with extremely vague language. The average parent not only doesn't know about the proposed changes but would have a very hard time interpreting the language. The parents that I do know of who have looked at them are enraged about Critical Race Theory being pushed by the PED! Also, parents don't know how to make their voices heard on this topic. They don't have the advantage of the email that I'm responding to.

100% of the Social Studies teachers that I know along with administrators and school board members are totally against this being taught in our schools. The only people who want this change are a few elite, unelected personnel at the PED along with our governor who is totally out of touch with New Mexicans.

This is nothing more than a covert action aimed at indoctrinating our children with Critical Race Theory beginning in Kindergarten. And parents will be none the wiser that this has passed and that their children are being indoctrinated with Leftist ideology. When we, as educators, secretly teach children, and ideology that their parents don't approve of we are in essence abusing that child and running rampant over parental rights.

This effort will be publicly exposed!

Wade Frazee
Portales High School
Social Studies Teacher

FW: [EXTERNAL] Alamogordo Public Schools Petition re 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

Wed 9/29/2021 10:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

 2 attachments (2 MB)

Alamogordo Public Schools BOE Petition re 6.29.11 NM Social Studies.pdf; ATT00001.htm;

From: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

Sent: Wednesday, September 29, 2021 10:33 AM

To: Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

Subject: Fwd: [EXTERNAL] Alamogordo Public Schools Petition re 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

FYI

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Kenneth Moore" <kenneth.moore@alamogordoschools.org>

To: "Sena, John, PED" <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

Cc: "Tagle, Colleen" <colleen.tagle@alamogordoschools.org>, "Judy Rabon" <judy.rabon@alamogordoschools.org>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Alamogordo Public Schools Petition re 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr. Sena,

Please see the attached petition from Alamogordo Public Schools Board of Education for entry into the public comment file regarding the proposed repeal/replacement of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Kenneth R. Moore, Ed. D.
Superintendent
Alamogordo Public Schools
1211 Hawaii Ave.
Alamogordo NM 88310
Office: 575-812-6001
Cell: 575.520.5061

Board of Education
1211 Hawaii Ave.
Alamogordo, NM 88310

Office: (575) 812-6001
Fax: (575) 812-6003

Judy V. Rabon, President
Ryan Sherwood, Vice-President
Carol Teweleit, Secretary
Angela M. Cadwallader, Member
Anthony Torres, Member

Petition of the
Alamogordo Public School District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school boards, administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

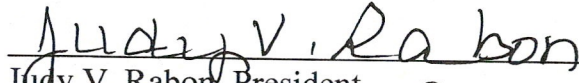

Whereas, the Alamogordo Public Schools District Board of Education (the“Board”) deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now, therefore, the Board, by approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Additionally, following the approval of the requested extension, the Board asks the NMPED to consider hosting a statewide work session in order to better understand the proposed changes and to adequately answer questions that chosen representatives from each school district may have.

Respectfully submitted on September 23, 2021,

Alamogordo Public Schools District Board of Education

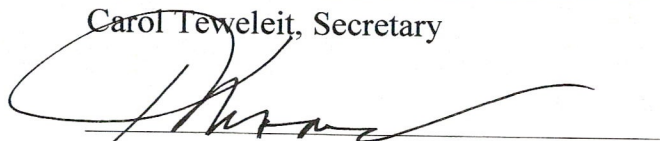

Judy V. Rabon, President

Ryan Sherwood, Vice President

Carol Teweleit, Secretary

Kenneth R. Moore, Superintendent

[EXTERNAL] Capitalism and self determination

Thomas Pascuzzi <drtom@goprivatemd.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 7:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Missed the section on the values of self determination, small government, and the virtues of capitalism.

This is exactly why we are moving out this state after 30yrs of paying outrageous taxes such as GRT, taking our college student out of UNM, our high school students out of APS and moving to Texas!

Bonus Point: the move saves 8% GRT on my businesses, that's been about a $1 million I've paid in over 30yrs.

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies

Vera Sage <veraone137@gmail.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 8:41 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Teach the constitution and the REAL law. How about educating the children on their natural human rights? Quit spewing lies and propaganda. Teach them that public SERVANTS are NOT rulers, or even leaders. They are our employees and they are doing a HORRIBLE job and need to be removed from office. Fired👊. Permanently. Like 'lake of fire'- type fired. 😊

"Jacques Attali was an advisor to François Mitterrand (former President of France) and wrote this in 1981:

"In the future it will be a question of finding a way to reduce the population. We will start with the old man, because once he is over 60-65 years old, man lives longer than he produces and it costs society dearly.

Then the weak and then the useless who do not contribute anything to society because there will be more and more, and especially finally the stupid.

Euthanasia directed at these groups; euthanasia must be an essential instrument of our future societies, in all cases.

Of course, we will not be able to execute people or organize camps. We will get rid of them by making them believe that it is for their own good.

Too large a population, and for the most part unnecessary, is something economically too expensive. Socially, it is also much better for the human machine to stop abruptly rather than gradually deteriorate.

We won't be able to pass intelligence tests on millions and millions of people, you can imagine!

We will find something or cause it; a pandemic that targets certain people, a real economic crisis or not, a virus that will affect the old or the elderly, it does not matter, the weak and the fearful will succumb.

The stupid will believe it and ask to be treated. We will have taken care of having planned the treatment, a treatment that will be the solution.

The selection of idiots will therefore be done by itself: they will go to the slaughterhouse alone. "

This fragment is excerpted from his book "Brief History of the Future", published in France in 2006"

You should teach children how jet fuel can't melt steel beams and show them the videos from the public where no planes hit the towers, they just blew up like a bomb went off. Also show them how building #7 was reported on msm as having collapsed all while the building was still standing in the background at that moment. About 15 minutes after the propaganda broadcast, the building was blown up with a bomb.

The planned-demic will go down in history as the largest psy-op and hoax ever perpetrated on humanity. It worked so well that people injected themselves with a literal bioweapon. Antibody Dependant Enhancement caused by spike protein based coronavirus injections. ADE's - the new AIDS. Many will not survive an encounter with a wild coronavirus now, you know, like the common cold.

[EXTERNAL] feedback on social studies curriculum

Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>

Thu 9/30/2021 10:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr Sena,

On a new social studies curriculum.

The establishment of some grand new curriculum that reflects the 109 year history of New Mexicans is a complete travesty in thinking. Making it in someway seem culturally relevant makes it a complete distortion of reality because of attempting to confine it to some simple minded time frame as if nothing existed before culturally. Before ever embarking on formalizing anything I suggest looking at Mexican history and the impact the Spanish had when they conquered what was at one time New Mexico by reviewing Carl Lawrence's "The Cross and the Sword". Without the relevance of that history the only culture relevance you would have is to the Native American history of our state which way predates it becoming a state.

I understand the desire to come up with some seemingly socially just curriculum but that is no different than attempting to make all of life fair.

Justice is defined as: Treatment without favoritism.

Social Justice is defined as: Treatment with favoritism.

Therefore, Social Justice is Unjust.

My suggestion is to base social studies on what is offered in the most credible history book ever written and studied to establish factual time frames and human behaviors, the "Bible". Social Studies is the study of how society behaved. Sure we all look better and smell better, but it is no different today than the thousands upon thousands of years of history contained within that book (actually 2 books, The Old Testament and The New Testament).

Sincerely,

Rob Wood
3427 Chimney Rock Rd
Las Cruces, 88011
575-635-0803

[EXTERNAL] Proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Anastasia D Andersen <AAndersen@salud.unm.edu>

Thu 9/30/2021 10:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I highly support the repeal of 6.29.11 to be replaced with proposed 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies.

[EXTERNAL] recommendations from a NM social studies teacher

Joy Thornhill <joyk17@gmail.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 11:09 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have two recommendations the updating of the New Mexico Social Studies standards.

1. CREATE and PROVIDE more resources for teachers to actually deliver the NM S.S. standards.

The biggest impediment to teaching NM history for example, is there is only one book for K-12 and it is very outdated both factually and culturally -Marc Simmons' book.

Suggestions:

Use creative problem-solving to find and hire a local historian to create an updated culturally relevant NM history textbook.

Use the brain pool of NM teachers and hire them to create high quality content to teach the four strands. Place comprehensive content for each of the four strands: history, civics, geography, and economics on an open source website.

The biggest challenge to teaching the New Mexico social studies curriculum is the near ABSENCE OF RESOURCES to deliver our vast curriculum.

2. DO NOT ADD, BUT SUBSTITUTE/IMPROVE the standards already there. The four strands are already so voluminous it is unlikely all of them will ever be covered in a single school year by a single class. If updating the curriculum per se will occur, here are suggestions from a veteran of teaching the 4-8 NM SS curriculum:

Suggestions:

You will be defeating your own goal of getting new concepts taught if you simply add new standards.

Remove standards. Combine standards.

Do NOT just add more on.

The next biggest challenge to teaching the New Mexico social studies curriculum is that it is A MILE WIDE AND AN INCH THICK. There is already too much to teach well, and almost too much to teach at all.

Thank you for considering these recommendations

Joy Thornhill

Joyk17@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] KEEP CRT OUT OF OUR SCHOOLS

Richard Hood <richie.hood@fnb4u.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 3:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please keep Critical Race Theory out of our schools. This liberal ideology and indoctrination has no place in the education system.

Richard D. Hood, Jr.

Ruidoso Market President

First National Bank

(575)257-8337 | Office

(575)808-9763 | Cell

(575)257-3812 | Fax

451 Sudderth

Ruidoso, NM 88345

Richard.Hood@fnb4u.com

NMLS# 479238

“Doing the Right Thing For Our Customers And Our Community Since 1956”

"All discussions, proposals and terms for any loan, extension or renewal of credit are not binding on the Bank or any borrower unless the terms or proposals are approved by the Bank's senior management, loan committee or Board of Directors and contained in a written commitment or similar written agreement signed by the parties to be bound."

The information transmitted may contain confidential material and is intended only for the person or entity to which it is addressed. Any review, retransmission, dissemination or other use of, or taking any action by persons or entities other than the intended recipient is prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please delete the information from your system and contact the sender.

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment Social Studies Curriculum

Maggie McConville <indigoheat99@gmail.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 3:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I think the new standards look pretty reasonable.

My concerns are how assignments are designed to explore themes and concepts. For instance, in 8th grade (last year) my daughter was asked to write a diary entry from the POV of Pocahontas.

I found this assignment a bit outdated, culturally insensitive and perhaps off-target when discussing colonial occupation and historical figures.

So, when we look at the 8th gear standards for:

Theme 1: Geography & Indigenous Peoples of North America

8.30. Support a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of Indigenous peoples of North America, and Indigenous Peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems.

I have to wonder - will there still be an outdated diary entry or will the standards explore different assignments to build empathy??

For...

Theme 2: Age of Exploration and Exploitation

8.32. Identify key explorers, places, and ideas from major European nations of the 15th century, and be able to describe their accomplishments.

I wonder why we only focus on accomplishments??? And never bring up atrocities?

Christopher Columbus' is known for discovering the Americas but we ignore the abuse, enslavement and genocide of indigenous people by he and his brothers.

One thing Theodore Roosevelt is known for are his conservation efforts and setting aside roughly 200 million acres for national parks - but about 86 million acres were taken by removing indigenous people from tribal lands.

I am hopeful that these new standards will also include updated assignments/suggestions to build empathy and understanding and that we give more balanced representations for key historical figures during lessons than we have in the past.

Thank you for all that you do,

Margaret McConville

[EXTERNAL] Repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, and replacement with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Mayson Rhodes <maysonrhodes@gmail.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 3:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am the parent of two children enrolled in Las Cruces Public Schools. I would like to express my strong support of the contemplated action noted in the subject line of this email.

I believe that my children should learn history accurately, which includes the appropriate cultural, racial, and gender-based context in which that history occurred.

Thank you,

Mayson Rhodes
3804 Garnet St, Las Cruces, NM 88012
(575) 415-1571

--

Mayson A. Rhodes

Phone: (575) 415-1572

Email: maysonrhodes@gmail.com

Please excuse any errors in spelling, grammar or punctuation as I am emailing from my iPhone to facilitate timely communication.

[EXTERNAL] Changes in curriculum

Michelle Sandoval <mrsandoval67@gmail.com>

Thu 9/30/2021 6:34 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have read the proposed changes and believe these to be in the best interest of providing my children a well rounded and factual education basis. Arming my children with critical thinking skills is a well desired skill in becoming a responsible and inclusive adult.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to comment please feel free to call me at the number below should you have any questions.

v/r

Michelle Sandoval

505-235-4534

[EXTERNAL] Equitable review of social studies curriculum

Ken Browning <kbrowning44@comcast.net>

Thu 9/30/2021 10:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good evening,

For the sake of continued success and advancement of our national identity and values, I strongly recommend leaving out the exploratory and political nature of the proposed changes to the state of New Mexico social studies curriculum. The methods for research and opinion should be developed in higher education institutions and not steered by public schools that ALL taxpayers fund. Public school is in place to provide a baseline of information and understanding for ALL students and is NOT in place to sway their political beliefs or imply that our nation is in need of some kind of drastic change.

Thank you for taking a politically neutral approach to this curriculum.

Ken Browning

[EXTERNAL] Feedback

toni garcia <phantom00916@yahoo.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 6:50 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am not in support of the proposed changes to the social studies standards. My biggest concern is the constant pushing of "identities". As a parent, we taught our children that every human is made in God's image and has value because they are handcrafted by God. Every person. And they are to be treated as such. Our opinions about their choices do not matter when it comes to treating the person with respect.

As a parent, I do not appreciate the possible opening of topics related to various chosen identities, especially in the very young grades. It is my responsibility to breach those topics with my children when I feel it is time, not a well intentioned teacher's privilege. Similarly, as a teacher of young students, it is not my place to breach these topics with children before their parents or the children are ready. Furthermore, unless all viewpoints, biblical included, are welcome at the table for older kiddos, it is not a fair and unbiased discussion. It is nothing but indoctrination.

As both a parent and a teacher I stand firmly against the proposed changes. I appreciate your time and hearing my concerns.

Respectfully,
Toni Garcia

Sent from Yahoo Mail for iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Comments

Yesenia Rubio <yeseniarubio53@yahoo.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 8:44 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon, I believe it's time to change the whole thing about what is taught in school. With new technology and the world evolving, why learn about things that happened many centuries ago. Kids these days want to learn things that will help them survive when they get out into the real world. A lot of families are in poverty and that means that once kids hit 16 years old they need to find themselves jobs to help the family out economically. My point is why have kids go to school for 15 years to learn things that will not teach them how to survive in the real world. Kids should be taught basic things such as writing, reading, math, science, English, typing, computers, welding, farming, mechanics and cooking, these things are an everyday things that kids will use all through their lives. Kids these days are so bored of what is being taught that they give up and drop out of school to either be a bigger burden on families or find jobs at an early age to help their families. We just got to rethink how we must teach our children to keep them in school learning real things that are needed and not bored them to death. For example if you are happy doing your job that you chose, that means you will be great at your job because you love it. Same thing applies to learning. Let's make learning more enjoyable for kids to want to learn and stay in school. School should be cut at 16 years old so they can be able to grow up doing what they enjoy. I hope that you don't get me wrong, I'm a person who loves school and to learn, but I want to learn things that will help me out in the real world not things that happen several centuries ago that I won't be using it in real life. Let's get on the ball to help our kids stay in school to learn and enjoy it. I have seen too many kids bored, dropping out, getting a boring no good paying job and becoming parents at an early stage. A concern parent and substitute teacher that cares to keep her kids in school for their life skills to learn how to survive the real world. Hope somebody out there listens and really does something to help kids stay in school. I am tired of hearing kids say. "Why do I have to learn this if I'm not using in real life" it's just a waste of time going to school for so long. It's so sad but true.

Thank you

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] The proposed changes to PED social studies will increase divisiveness and widen the already biased outlook of our children. It is important that we narrow the gap between racial bias not widen it further.DJ Schenck MD

Deborah Schenck <rowdydoc@live.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 10:10 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

[EXTERNAL] Updated Social Studies Standard

Marc & Sally <smgriffin1236@gmail.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 10:33 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The 4 pillars of the social studies curriculum - civics, economics, history, geography, are critically important areas of study for all students. The proposed changes to the curriculum will require moving resources and time away from the core pillars. Perhaps more importantly, I believe the proposed changes are a response to the social political narrative and the pressures for change being applied to our institutions. The learning of different ethnicities and cultures are currently an integral part of history teaching. Furthermore, the proposed changes have an underlying theme that the United States is systemically racist. I don't believe this, as I believe most Americans, of all ethnicities, do not believe. I believe the vast majority of citizens believe this country is the most free and provides the most opportunities of any nation on Earth. And history and our current society reflects this. There are many reasons why many in this country fail to take advantage of the boundless opportunities and find themselves in despair, but the blame cannot be placed on a false narrative of the many forms of injustice. The United States truly is a melting pot of ethnicities and cultures accepting and appreciating one another's individual uniqueness. Our children's education is important. Let's not allow our educators to become distracted from their mission by an ideology movement which is destructive and unfair to society as a whole.

Respectfully,
Marc Griffin

Fw: [EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Fri 10/1/2021 11:03 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: CHARLIE AMEZQUITA <charliea450@aol.com>

Sent: Thursday, September 30, 2021 8:46 PM

To: Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I Absolutely Oppose Critical Race Theory Being Indoctrinated Into My Children At Public Schools.

Fw: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Fri 10/1/2021 11:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: Dominica Barabe <ds.felice01@gmail.com>

Sent: Thursday, September 30, 2021 8:07 PM

To: Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I strongly support our children learning about our diverse and amazing history as Americans and especially New Mexicans- the good and the not so good. I love our state. I care for the people here.

I am wary of the current proposed changes because of how they are written, how they can be interpreted, and the resources that the PED has used to build up their framework of guidelines for our children.

For example, from the "Teaching Hard History" resource, it is noted as saying a K-2 child should learn that "freedom is being able to decide what your life should look like without outside interference."

What does this mean? What can it mean? It could mean very basically that we are in charge of our own destiny. Or it can be taught to our children that even parents have no place to "interfere" with what their life should look like. Whether this refers to their gender identity, faith beliefs, etc.

Simply put, I am wary about how some of the content can be understood and taught, especially in light of similar curriculum being implemented in other areas of the country. For example, in California their social studies curriculum was just recently written up to have the students learn about other indigenous groups. This includes however that the students chant songs and dance to Aztec gods as a "power up" while in class. I definitely don't agree with this and find it very offensive as this was a form of prayer for the Aztecs. A group of people known to be avid warriors who practiced human sacrifice and cannibalism on a massive scale.

How is COVID going to be interpreted? Are those that are unvaccinated going to be discriminated against or shamed? And how are the "struggles" of LGBTQ+ persons going to be taught? Is gender fluidity going to be promoted? Are our LGBTQ+ friends going to be put on the same level as our brothers and sisters who have been discriminated based on their ethnic background? Will the struggles of people of other faith backgrounds be addressed? For example, how Catholics were barred from living in certain colonial states and denied the privilege of participating in politics? (And perhaps even the reason why New Mexico didn't become a state for so long..due to it's large Hispanic Catholic population?)

There is much to ponder and discuss. In summary, I am wary of the curriculum being implemented and the very real possibility of a specific ideology being pushed on our children under the guise of "social studies."

If a decision does not bring joy, we are not on the right path.

Sincerely,

Dr. Dominica Barabé
Mother & Pediatric Physical Therapist

[EXTERNAL] American Culture

Peggy <HPL1949@protonmail.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 12:25 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Why do you keep trying to teach our children how different they are from the other kids sitting around them...and they should be kind to others who look different (gees)? We have an American culture with hundreds of subcultures, blended all together to make Americans unique from Swedes, Australians, Chinese, etc. Why does our educational system continue to try to divide Americans with its insane identity "politics", intersectionality, critical race theory, racial reconciliation, Chicano liberation, red power, etc.? We have a unique American culture/history/government/etc.; teach it and be proud of it instead of trying to destroy it.

New Mexico's education system continues to rank (and falling) in the bottom of all states. (And the U.S. ain't a shining example of great education either.) Maybe stop doing what you're doing and try something different? Teaching critical race theory and all the other garbage will only make us (New Mexico) move from 48th to 50th in 2021, if we're not already there. If you're not embarrassed about our educational system continuing to fail, then maybe most of you should find another occupation.

I don't have children in school any longer, but when I did, I was known to pull them from classes where the teacher should have been doing something besides teaching. "My way or an F," isn't teaching. I hope that administrators and teachers are being evaluated for teaching and not indoctrinating/propagandizing (CRT) and being held accountable for failing our kids.

Today, if I had school-aged kids, I'd be homeschooling, that's how failed I think our public school system is.

Critical race theory is a failed theory; it is not supported by data (real data, that is); it does not pull together any experimental results, providing any explanation of anything. I personally have lots of theories about lots of things, but I don't think they should be taught to our kids anymore than I think CRT should.

Each of you are welcome to go through life with race-colored glasses, if that's what you choose to do, but please give our children the chance to grow and develop with glasses of their own choosing.

Peggy Hoffer
155 Pena Blanca Loop
Las Cruces, NM

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies standards

Janice Snell <jsnell@bsin.k12.nm.us>

Fri 10/1/2021 1:58 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I was wondering if you are doing away with US Government? It is definitely not the same as Civics

--

Janice Snell
Social Studies Department Chair
Graduation Coordinator
Bloomfield High School
520 N. First Street
Bloomfield, NM 87413

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Proposed Social Studies Standards

Bednarz, Sarah W <s-bednarz@geos.tamu.edu>

Fri 10/1/2021 2:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (18 KB)

Comments regarding the proposed New Mexico Social Studies Standards.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

See attached document. Please let me know that you received these.

Thank you,

Sarah Bednarz

Sarah Witham Bednarz

Professor Emerita of Geography & Presidential Professor for Teaching Excellence

Fellow, American Association of Geographers

Department of Geography

Texas A&M University

2321 Via Granada Place NW

Albuquerque, New Mexico 87104

Email: s-bednarz@tamu.edu

Cell: 979/229-7247

Twitter: @sarahbednarz

Google Scholar:

<http://tinyurl.com/pw6eer4>

Comments regarding the proposed New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Prepared by Dr. Sarah Witham Bednarz, professor emerita of geography, Texas A&M University

2321 Via Granada Place NW
Albuquerque, NM 87104

I have expertise in geography education and have reviewed the geography component of the proposed New Mexico social studies standards. Here are my observations, questions, and suggestions.

- 1.21 In the document the expression “man-made” appears. Could that be better expressed as human made? Also, 1.21 is not directly related to the theme of Location, Place, and Region since it is really focused on human-environment interaction. Would this be better as “how people and societies modify the environment to create places to meet their needs.”
- In general, Theme 13 is missing some key components throughout the standards. Interaction is best explained to young learners by its component parts, i.e., humans depend upon the environment, they modify the environment, and they adapt to the environment.
- 2.24 Generate a definition for your region of the US by identifying unique features. The use of verbs should be consistent across standards and be clearly measurable or observable for assessment purposes. Generate is amorphous. “Define the unique human and physical characteristics of the place you live.” might be more age-appropriate.
- 2.26 Describe ways in which individuals and groups use or save natural resources. Would it be clearer to phrase this as use and conserve instead of use or save?
- 3.11 Analyze how human settlement and movement impact diverse groups of people and how the cultural aspects of a region spread beyond its borders. The second part, after and, is ambiguous. People carry with them their culture when they move. Migration has political, economic and cultural effects. Maybe better to ask about the effects of migration? Just stop after people? There really are no borders to regions per se so it is not accurate to ask about something spreading beyond its border.
- 4.11 Describe the different groups of people (Indigenous and explorers/pioneers) that have settled in New Mexico throughout history and describe their traditions and effects on New Mexico culture. First, is there one New Mexico culture? Should culture be plural throughout the document? Second, I suggest instead of “effects” frame it as “...and describe their contributions to New Mexico cultures.”
- 4.23 Explore how geographic factors influence locations of settlements and use of natural resources (land, water, minerals, plants, animals) to meet their basic needs. This needs wordsmithing; geographic factors do not have basic needs. And “explore” is not a measurable verb. Better to say, “Explain (or describe) the geographic factors, including natural resources, that influence the locations of settlements.” The teacher will make the point that people need resources to live and settle where those resources exist (humans depend on the environment).
- 5.27 May I suggest that learning state capitals is a giant waste of time? How about the locations of major cities in North America (to include Canada and Mexico).
- 5.28 Examine how the physical environment influences human population distribution and land use. Again, need a measurable verb, e.g., explain or describe. And it is important to be careful about environmental determinism, the tendency to say that geography is destiny. This is ok, using the term influences.
- 6.19 Identify how natural forces shape Earth’s environments and regions. I believe this is the first time physical geography is introduced explicitly. Might I suggest you add the term “climate” to regions so it is clear students should be familiar with the forces that influence climate, e.g., elevation, relation to large water bodies and/or mountains, latitude, etc.

- 6.25 Compare environmental and geographic attributes of locations of the earliest human settlements. Characteristics is a more neutral term than “attributes” which people tend to think of as positives.
- 6.29 Describe how the people impact the local environment. This is a terrific opportunity to review human-environment interaction using the ideas of dependence, adaptation, and modification. It might even be clearer to use the term modify, e.g., “...how people modify the local environment.” Or, “...how people depend on, adapt to, and modify...” And probably best just to say “how people..” and not say “the” people. Or to acknowledge how different people impact the environment in different ways, “Describe how different peoples....”
- 6.49 Use maps to represent the movement of key religions and philosophies over time. May I suggest this would be clearer changing the verb from “represent” to “show” or “trace” or even “describe.” It might read, “Describe the movement of key religions and philosophies over time using maps and other graphic representations.”
- 6.50 Compare the transportation innovations made to travel over challenging routes and establish trade routes. This needs wordsmithing for clarity. Perhaps, “Describe how innovations in transportation technologies affected trade and the movements of people
- 7.24 Describe how environmental events affect human activities and resources.
-

FW: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Implementation Delay Petition

Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

Fri 10/1/2021 3:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (51 KB)

Social Studies Standards Petition for Extended Public Comment.pdf;

From: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

Sent: Friday, October 01, 2021 3:36 PM

To: Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

Subject: FW: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Implementation Delay Petition

FYI

From: Gerry Washburn <gerry.washburn@carlsbadschools.net>

Sent: Friday, October 01, 2021 2:33 PM

To: Steinhaus, Kurt, PED <Kurt.Steinhaus@state.nm.us>; Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>; Sandoval, Katarina, PED <Katarina.Sandoval@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>; Shoup David <dshoup@ciconstructors.com>; David Shoup <david.shoup@carlsbadschools.net>; Ron Singleton <ron.singleton@carlsbadschools.net>; Simon Rubio <simon.rubio@carlsbadschools.net>; Chacon, Robbie <robbie.chacon@hubinternational.com>; Robbie Chacon <robbie.chacon@carlsbadschools.net>; David Lewis <david.lewis@carlsbadschools.net>; Cindy Romero <cindy.romero@carlsbadschools.net>; Shan, LeVern <lavern.shan@carlsbadschools.net>; Spencer, Eric <eric.spencer@carlsbadschools.net>; Allison Hervol <allison.hervol@carlsbadschools.net>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Implementation Delay Petition

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Secretary Steinhaus,

Carlsbad Municipal Schools Board of Education approved a resolution today petitioning the Department to delay the implementation process for Social Studies Standards. The petition is attached to this email.

Carlsbad Municipal Schools is committed to the delivery of a guaranteed and viable curriculum in all subject areas. This year's rollout of new comprehensive Social Studies Standards has resulted in concerns within our community about the intentions, thoughts and work that may be embedded in the new Social Studies Standards.

Carlsbad and all New Mexico school districts are just making a return to in-person learning. This return has come with many mandates that have added to the educational challenges before us. We join a number of districts throughout the state in asking for time for our communities to heal and focus on educating children. As the Secretary of Education you have sought to understand and appreciate what is happening outside of Santa Fe and our District appreciates the effort you have put into that learning.

We are asking that rather than rush to implement a new set of social studies standards, that the NMPED pause the implementation of these standards. This will give all districts more time to focus on learning gaps and allow all of us to focus more time on healing the social, emotional issues students and staff are experiencing.

In joining with other school districts from across the state in asking for a revision, delay or suspension of the timeline we are also asking for timely action on this request. We believe it is the right thing to do for Carlsbad and districts across the state. Delaying the Social Studies Standards timeline process for at least a year would allow us to focus on education and the health of students, which is what is most needed now.

Respectfully,
Gerry C. Washburn
Superintendent

This is a staff email account managed by Carlsbad Municipal Schools. This email, including any attachments, is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) regarding the business of the Carlsbad Municipal Schools and may contain confidential and privileged information protected by federal and state law. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure, or distribution is prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender by reply email and destroy all copies of the original message.

Petition of the
Carlsbad Municipal School District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (PED) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards for social studies that are taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous COVID 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the COVID 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

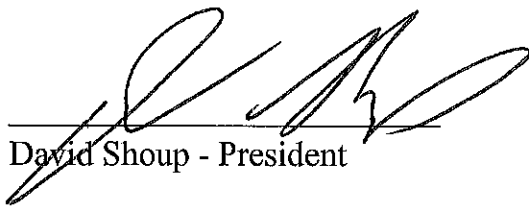

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Carlsbad Municipal School District Board of Education (the “Board”) deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public an evaluation period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

Carlsbad Municipal School District Board of Education

David Shoup - President

[EXTERNAL] Curriculum Rule Changes

Roxanne Darling <roxannedarling@gmail.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 3:46 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I read the article in the Santa Fe New Mexican today and looked briefly at your website - found in the comments!

Thank you for these updates, which I support. No one has a perfect family nor a perfect history but we can only improve if we study the whole stories form the past and strive to create a more fair and mutually respectful community.

Thank you,

Roxanne

—

Roxanne Darling
40 Kachina Rd
Santa Fe, NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Rebekah Manning <rmanning621@gmail.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 4:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hi,

I am a parent of an almost 4 year old little boy. We live in Albuquerque, and he will attend school in the district. I was thrilled to hear that the state of New Mexico had updated the social studies curriculum, and I am even more thrilled after reading more about it to see that a more culturally aware and equity based curriculum is going to be taught. Both my husband and I graduated from New Mexico public schools and our experiences with social studies in particular ranged from passably culturally sensitive, to terribly racist and xenophobic. I'm pleased to see that teachers have examined this, found it to be lacking, and done something to fix it. Please send my thanks to those 60 teachers who made this happen.

Regards,
Rebekah Manning

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

Gabriele C. Heinz <gabrieleheinz10@gmail.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 4:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.

I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name: Gabriele & Erwin Heinz

County: Colfax and Valencia

[EXTERNAL] Regarding "PED accepting comments on updated social studies standards"

Jorge Esguerra <jorge.esguerra@oscillation.us>

Fri 10/1/2021 7:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon:

I would like to comment on the proposed Social Studies Standards, and this except from the KRQE article related to it:

(From <https://www.krqe.com/news/education/pushback-over-proposed-social-studies-curriculum/>)

"The state wants to add Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies as well as an inquiry component where students can take what they've learned and look deeper into it. The department said the new components will help students learn about the state's diverse backgrounds and develop a higher level of thinking. "

If these "ethnic, cultural and identity studies" are consistent with the "social justice" topics (i.e. the hypersensitive and "woke" trends) which have overrun universities, corporations, social media and the like, I respectfully disagree that they are a pathway to a "higher level of thinking."

As is demonstrated daily, there is very little constructive debate or thought surrounding ethnic, cultural or any other "identity." At the national level, the message is dominated by the loudest, most obnoxious, most power-hungry self-promoting fanatics from the media and political classes. And unfortunately that message flows down to the community level via strongly asymmetric political preferences of educators and education organizations.

The irony is that "finding yourself" used to be an educational, personal and fulfilling experience undertaken by someone ready to take that journey. I claim that it is a valuable experience and an independent pursuit. These days people are bombarded with repetitive, narrow portraits of who and what they are-- or maybe who and what they are expected to be in the case of very young people.

If you could guarantee that the vast majority of teachers teaching social studies could be coldly objective and could refrain from pushing their personal ideologies in class, I would have no issues with the change in the curriculum. If the students were adults, and had some choice on whether or not the class was worth paying for or attending, I would have no issues with the change in the curriculum. If the students were smart enough and confident enough to be skeptical when it mattered, I would have no change issues with the curriculum. But the reality is that we are talking about a captive audience of children, and education professionals lean overwhelmingly to one side of the (simplified) political spectrum-- maybe influenced by their own unique experiences.

And unfortunately there is overwhelming evidence that schools have not been objective and apolitical when teaching impressionable children. Especially in recent years.

So no, I do not recommend injecting even more subjectivity into education. It cheats students of the opportunities to discover themselves and their own histories through their own unique experiences and exploration, and instead seeds their minds with an abbreviated, generic curriculum has been created by the few (likely) politically homogenous educators who will have assembled it.

In a sentence: You're offering Cliff's Notes for select students' ethnic, cultural and other identities--depriving them of the opportunities to ask their own questions and struggle for their own answers.

Respectfully,

-jorge.

[EXTERNAL] Concerned student

Isaac Barela <barela_i@icloud.com>

Fri 10/1/2021 8:27 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a graduate from NM public schools who went on to pursue a Degree in Political Science from CU Boulder, I am appalled. I was also a previous intern for the Lujan Grisham administration during her time as a representative. The new standards for which student civics is held to is disgusting. Critical race theory is racist and my children will not attend ANY institution that teaches such. They will receive a private education proceeding forward. What a disgrace this administration is to think that the indoctrination of children is socially acceptable. Shame on the Governor for her support of radical liberalism and college level indoctrination tactics.

It is called Critical Race Theory for a reason, because it takes a certain level of critical thinking to comprehend it. That is present in College and not in elementary school.

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Curriculum Changes

Jamie Berry <jamieberry@mac.com>

Sat 10/2/2021 7:25 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello.

I'm sending this in regard to the proposed curriculum changes being presented by NM PED.

This is clearly a thinly veiled attempt to introduce Critical Theory (race, gender, sexuality, political theory) into our schools, at every level, statewide. It's troubling, and it is further troubling that there is no indication of where the curriculum originated. The answer is a resounding, 'No!'. This has no place in K-12 education, and it is of dubious value even beyond that.

It is absurd to suggest taking our students further away from basic skills in a state where more than half of our kids can't read or do math at level. This proposal does nothing to nurture academic excellence or improvement. We can do better for our kids, and we will continue to reject proposals of this nature.

Sincerely,

Jamie Berry

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Social Studies Curriculum

Aubrey Montoya-Nodine <aubreymontoyanodine@gmail.com>

Sat 10/2/2021 10:10 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a parent with 2 children attending APS, i actively agree with the proposed changes. I also would like to see diverse perspectives on history and think it's important to include the valuable and immense contributors of our American history including indigenous people and LGBTQ people. I would ask that you disregard those who politically oppose these changes and incorrectly label "critical race theory" as propaganda. Teaching our children a full, accurate and updated history will only benefit them and better prepare them for college, and to be informed citizens. As a voter, taxpayer and parent I fully support any rule changes that give these students a better education and the most resources possible.

Thank you, and I hope you consider my comment.

Aubrey Montoya-Nodine
aubreymontoyanodine@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Social Studiea changes

Elizabeth Hoffman <elizabethhoffman01@yahoo.com>

Sat 10/2/2021 12:16 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Do NOT include critical race theory in our schools. It's divisive and false. I don't not want my children learning this garbage

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

Cheryl Van Gilst <cherferg62@msn.com>

Sat 10/2/2021 2:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.
I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name:
County:

Thank you.

Cheryl Van Gilst

[EXT] I Say No to Critical Race Theory being Taught in NM School - FeedBack, Rule, PED

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

RONALD NESS <rnln65@msn.com>

Sat 10/2/2021 5:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.

I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name: R Ness

County:

Valencia

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Re: Fwd:

Rory Rank <rlrank@nmsu.edu>

Sun 10/3/2021 10:09 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attached is a response to revision history and disregarding the truth. Another book you should read is by Mary Grabar, 76 , Debunking The 1619 Project, Exposing the Plan to Divide America. Further, read Dr MLK Jr Powerful Letter from Birmingham Jail (1963) and Dr MLK JR dream speech (no truth ,no justice) Dr MLK Jr said : I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a Nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by content of their CHARACTER. I have a dream today! Read book- King Rules by Alveda King. Darkness cannot drive out darkness only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate: only love can do that. Jesus Christ is the truth and light. God bless Rory Rank

From: Rory Rank <mr.rory.rank@gmail.com>

Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 2021 5:50 PM

To: Rory Rank <rlrank@nmsu.edu>

Subject: Fwd:

WARNING: This email originated external to the NMSU email system. Do not click on links or open attachments unless you are sure the content is safe.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rory Rank <mr.rory.rank@gmail.com>

Date: September 14, 2021 at 1:36:32 PM MDT

To: Rory Rank <rlrank@nmsu.edu>

CRT a Misnomer

Since 1945, America has been the anti-racist nation (book by Kathleen Brush). The Critical Control Theory is a model by Saul Alinsky as how to create a socialist state (a book the Road to Serfdom by F.A. Hayek). The Critical Control Theory is about obtaining POWER-POLITICS-PREFERENCES versus the Critical Freedom theory of Principles and People (we are endowed by our creator with certain unalienable rights that among these are life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness - these are self-evident truths that all men and women are created equal). CRT and the Critical Control Theory is about Condemnation, Conformity, Cancellation, Captive, Collectivism, Cheating, Coercion, Centralization, Chains, Censorship, Categorical Imperative, Cancel Culture, Corruption, Confusion, Chaos, Conflict, Complaining, Confiscation and no Character. Read the Books by Shelby Steele -Shame, The Content of Our Character, and White Guilt. Also read the books, Blackout by Candace Owens, Red, White and Black by Robert I. Woodson SR, 1620-a response to the 1619 project by Peter W. Wood, the Hate Crime Hoax by Wilfred Reilley the War on Cops by Heather Mac Donald, and American Marxism by Mark R. Levin.

Critical Control Theory-How to create a socialistic state by Saul Alinsky is based upon tyrannical control before one can obtain a socialist state. The first and maybe the most important are:

1. Health Care-control healthcare (COVID 19 was used to control people and dismantle civil liberties)
2. Poverty-increase poverty to control the poor to make it easier to control the voting for entitlements.
3. Debt-increase the debt to an unsustainable level that way create dependance and more control.
4. Gun Control. Take away the second amendment, so law abiding citizens are disarmed and punished and controlled by a police state.
5. Welfare- allows control of every aspect of life (food, housing, income, travel and freedom)
6. Education -CRT is state-sponsored racist, divisive, violates the Civil Rights Act, and Constitution. CRT teaches young Americans to hate their past, present and fear the future by ordering students to hate—as Hillary said irredeemable and deplorable. CRT affects the integrity of education through misinformation, disinformation and deception. State control education will produce falsehood and lies, while real education produces grace and truth. By controlling education, the state will control the indoctrination and false narrative of history.
7. Religion -control 1st amendment by outlawing God, CRT hates God and wants to dismantle the family and make the State God. The state wants a Godless society and remove the free exercise of faith and belief in freedom of conscience.
8. Military - Control the social engineering with CRT, destroying the morale and mission (Duty, Honor, Country)
9. Property -the taking, redistribution and control of your property by the state. No rights for Farmers, Ranchers, and private homeowners. The state takes /steal your guns so no private defense of person, family, and property.
10. Class warfare -divide and conquer by control over population with taxing -working for state gain.

In conclusion, read the book by Richard Bookhiser: Give me liberty, a history of American's exceptional ideal! Individual liberty requires individual responsibility with God over Conscience
God bless Rory L Rank

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social studies curriculum revision

Ashley Padilla <ashleypadilla88@gmail.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 1:55 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon,

I am writing as a public commenter and parent of young children. I am opposed to the changes in the social studies curriculum. I do not believe that it is beneficial to the children or their families. Social identity is not something that should be taught in the public school setting. Children should not be subject to certain beliefs and ways of society and self identity through the school system. Religion should not be taught in the public school system either. If bibles are not allowed at school and God is not allowed, then teachings of Christianity, Muslim and Jews should be prohibited for instruction in the classroom. Diversity and inclusion will be learned through life experiences and does not need to be taught at the expense of trying to sway our children to conform to society and socialist beliefs. I will not allow my children to be subject to this new standard of teaching such as this new revised social studies. It takes away from important historical events and replaces them with self identity, diversity and social groups. Nothing good will come from changing the curriculum, other than support all of the democratic party to support their socialism.

Ashley Padilla

[EXTERNAL] Public input to revision of social studies curriculum: LGBTQ history

Douglas Price <dpricefam@gmail.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 2:01 PM

To: Robinson, Judy, PED <Judy.Robinson@state.nm.us>; FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Ms. Robinson,

Approximately 4.3% of adults in the U.S. identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender or queer (LGBTQ).

LGBTQ Family Fact Sheet \(census.gov\)

Given the insignificance of the LGBTQ movement in American history, its inclusion in the proposed revision of the social studies curriculum appears to represent the activism of very small minority. Given the abundance of highly significant information necessary for an understanding of American history and the very limited amount of time in school, this topic should have no place in required studies.

Sincerely,

Douglas W. Price

[EXTERNAL] CRT in Public Schools

Lisa Cook <loadnlisacook@gmail.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 4:22 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Sir/Madam

Please let me express my opinion against CRT training in our public. The attached letter from the Holland Sentinel expresses my opinion.

<https://www.hollandsentinel.com/story/opinion/letters/2021/08/14/letter-critical-race-theory-disgrace/8124819002/>

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Anti CRT Teaching/Training

Lisa Cook <loadnlisacook@gmail.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 4:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

CRT is American Marxism; it pushes resentment, blame, guilt, fear, silence (as in censorship), and compliance. It is a disgrace — don't buy it.

https://gcc02.safelinks.protection.outlook.com/?

url=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.hollandsentinel.com%2Fstory%2Fopinion%2Fletters%2F2021%2F08%2F14%2Fletter-critical-race-theory-disgrace%2F8124819002%2F&data=04%7C01%7Crule.feedback%40state.nm.us%7Ca7e69e8d6d59450d35e208d986bce6d9%7C04aa6bf4d436426bfa404b7a70e60ff%7C0%7C0%7C637688968152470676%7CUnknown%7CTWFpbGZsb3d8eyJWIjoiMC4wLjAwMDAiLCJQIjoiV2luMzliLCJBTil6Ij1haWwiLCJXVCi6Mn0%3D%7C2000&sdata=v%2F%2F7%2Fq9mpMxm8kw1j5KqBZKDZvliwj3OFb809abWsqE%3D&reserved=0

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

Lauri Reed <LJREEDNM@msn.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 6:17 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.

I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name:Lauri Reed

County: Valencia

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone

Get Outlook for Android

[EXTERNAL] Comment on Social Studies proposed changes

Dominica Barabe <ds.felice01@gmail.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 6:28 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attn: John Sena and Whom It May Concern,

I strongly support our children learning about our diverse and amazing history as Americans and especially New Mexicans- the good and the not so good. I love our state. I care for the people here.

I am wary of the current proposed changes because of how they are written, how they can be interpreted, and the resources that the PED has used to build up their framework of guidelines for our children.

For example, from the "Teaching Hard History" resource, it is noted as saying a K-2 child should learn that "freedom is being able to decide what your life should look like without outside interference."

What does this mean? What can it mean? It could mean very basically that we are in charge of our own destiny. Or it can be taught to our children that even parents have no place to "interfere" with what their life should look like. Whether this refers to their gender identity, faith beliefs, etc.

What do I believe our children should be taught in relation to Freedom? That freedom is the ability to act as one ought to or should. Our children need to understand that freedom is precious and comes with a responsibility to do what's right.

Again, I am wary about how some of the content can be understood and taught, especially in light of similar curriculum being implemented in other areas of the country. For example, in California their social studies curriculum was just recently written up to have the students learn about other indigenous groups. This includes however that the students chant songs and dance to Aztec gods as a "power up" while in class. I definitely don't agree with this and find it very offensive as this was a form of prayer for the Aztecs. A group of people known to be avid warriors who practiced human sacrifice and cannibalism on a massive scale.

How is COVID going to be interpreted? Are those that are unvaccinated going to be discriminated against or shamed? And how are the "struggles" of LGBTQ+ persons going to be taught? Is gender fluidity going to be promoted? Are our children going to be taught to deconstruct their identity and reconstruct them according to a specific ideology? Are our LGBTQ+ friends going to be put on the same level as our brothers and sisters who have been discriminated based on their ethnic background? Will the struggles of people of other faith backgrounds be addressed? For example, how Catholics were barred from living in certain colonial states and denied the privilege of participating in politics? (And perhaps even the reason why New Mexico didn't become a state for so long..due to it's large Hispanic Catholic population?)

There is much to ponder and discuss. In summary, I am wary of the curriculum being implemented and the very real possibility of a specific ideology being pushed on our children under the guise of "social studies."

If a decision does not bring joy, we are not on the right path.

Sincerely,

Dr. Dominica Barabé

[EXT] I Say No to Critical Race Theory being Taught in NM
School - FeedBack, Rule, PED

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

Diane Watts <dwattsnm@gmail.com>

Sun 10/3/2021 8:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.
I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name:
County:

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

Wreatha Sturgill <wisturgill@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 12:33 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards. I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico.

I taught high school for 30 years and Critical Race Theory by any name is blatant and pernicious racism. It is wrong morally, historically, and (despite it's name) critically. The color of our skin does not determine our abilities, our willingness to learn, or the way we treat others. This terrible racist nonsense perverts what people like Dr. Martin Luther King fought for. He believed in judging people not by the color of their skin but by the content of their character. Every child taught this will be injured by it. Don't just allow the radical racist mob to force this on the children and families of our state.

Sincerely,

Wreatha Sturgill

[EXT] I Say No to Critical Race Theory being Taught in NM
School - FeedBack, Rule, PED

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School

judyvernon.jv@gmail.com <judyvernon.jv@gmail.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 7:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.
I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name:
County:

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Letter CRT to PED

Chris Jones <cjones@aztecmechanical.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 10:34 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Nansi Martin <nmartin@aztecmechanical.com>; Rich Apodaca <rapodaca@aztecmechanical.com>; Celissa Apodaca <capodaca@aztecmechanical.com>

 1 attachments (102 KB)

Critical Race Theory Letter to PED.PDF;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

CRT comments. Thanks

Excellence in Design/Build for 43 Years!

Chris Jones, Vice President
AZTEC MECHANICAL, INC.
(505) 884-2770 office
(505) 881-0252 fax
www.aztecmechanical.com

AZTEC MECHANICAL, INC.
MECHANICAL DESIGN/BUILD

2509 COMANCHE NE
ALBUQUERQUE, NM 87107
PHONE: 505-884-2770
FAX: 505-881-0252
E-MAIL: CJONES@AZTECMECHANICAL.COM

OCTOBER 4, 2021

ATTN: JOHN SERNA, POLICY DIVISION

NEW MEXICO PUBLIC EDUCATION DEPARTMENT
300 DON GASPAR AVENUE ROOM 121
SANTA FE, NEW MEXICO, 87501
FAX: 505-827-6520
PHONE: 505-570-7816

RE: UPDATING SOCIAL STUDIES STANDARDS WITH THE CRITICAL RACE THEORY

DEAR: MR. SERNA

THOSE IN FAVOR OF ADOPTING THE CRT (CRITICAL RACE THEORY) ARGUE THAT TEACHING STUDENTS ABOUT CRT IS AN IMPORTANT STEP IN CORRECTING THE INJUSTICES THAT THE BLACK COMMUNITY HAS ENDURED.

THE FIRST PROBLEM I SEE WITH THIS ARGUMENT; IT IS NOT THE PLACE OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM TO CORRECT INJUSTICES. THAT IS THE JOB OF THE DEPT. OF JUSTICE, LAW ENFORCEMENT AND THE GOVERNMENT. EACH SCHOOL DEPARTMENT COULD END UP HAVING ITS OWN PERCEPTION OF ANY INJUSTICES PROVING MORE CHAOTIC THAN AN IMPORTANT STEP IN CORRECTING INJUSTICES. THE EMBRACING TEACHER WILL TEACH WITH THAT PREJUDICE, WHEREAS THE NON-EMBRACING TEACHER MAY NOT TEACH AT ALL AND ALL WITHIN THE SAME SCHOOL, AND NO, IT CANNOT BE CONTROLLED WITH A FIXED AGENDA.

RELIGIOUS ISSUES, SEX ISSUES AND RACIAL ISSUES ARE BEST ISSUES HANDLED BY PARENTS WITH THEIR CHILDREN, WHO HAVE THE RIGHT, DUTY AND RESPONSIBILITY TO DO SO. IT IS NOT THE RIGHT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM TO TEACH CRT, BECAUSE EACH FAMILY HAS ITS OWN SET OF VALUES WHETHER PERCEIVED RIGHT OF WRONG BY THOSE OUTSIDE OF THAT FAMILY.

NOW, AS TO THE CRT ITSELF; IT IS AN ACADEMIC DISCIPLINE, FORMED IN THE 1990'S, AND BUILT ON THE INTELLECTUAL FRAMEWORK OF IDENTITY-BASED MARXISM. FOR YEARS IT WAS RELEGATED TO OBSCURE ACADEMIC JOURNALS AND A FEW UNIVERSITIES. NOT SUCH A SOLID FOUNDATION IS IT? MARXISM HAS PROVED A FAILURE EVERYWHERE. IN THE PAST DECADES CRT HAS GAINED ACCEPTANCE IN SOME OF OUR PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

THE FRAMERS OF CRT ARE MASTERS OF LANGUAGE CONSTRUCTION AND HAVE COINED EUPHEMISMS SUCH AS "EQUITY," "SOCIAL JUSTICE," AND "DIVERSITY

EXCELLENCE IN MECHANICAL DESIGN-BUILD.

.....

October 4, 2021

Page 2

AND INCLUSION" INTO THIS THEORY, BUT NEVERTHELESS IT IS STILL AND ALL JUST A THEORY.

A DEEPER LOOK INTO CRT LEAVES ONE FEELING THE DOCTRINES ARE MORE DIVISIVE THAN CORRECTING, MORE DEMEANING THAN ENTREATING, AND MORE CONVICTING AND ACCUSATIVE THAN ENLIGHTENING AND REASONABLE. IN SHORT CRT WILL PRODUCE MORE HATRED, SUSPICION, ANGST, ANIMOSITY AND RAGE THAN IS WILL DO ANY GOOD.

FEW BLACK PARENTS WILL BE IN FAVOR OF HAVING THEIR CHILDREN TAUGHT THEY ARE VICTIMS AND EVEN FEWER WHITE PARENTS WILL BE IN FAVOR OF HAVING THEIR CHILDREN TAUGHT THEY ARE SUPREMACISTS AND OPPRESSORS. CRT EMPHASIZES THE DIFFERENCES MUCH LIKE THE PROPOSED BLACK ANTHEM, WHAT FOR? IT IS TO NO BENEFIT.

CRT IS REALLY A POLITICAL/RACIAL THEORY AND HAS NO PLACE IN OUR SCHOOL SYSTEMS. IT CAN ONLY LEAD TO MORE DIVISIONS WITHIN OUR RACIALLY HYPERSENSITIVE SOCIETY, AND WILL ULTIMATELY LEAD TO UNNECESSARY VIOLENCE, UNLESS STOPPED RIGHT HERE.

MUCH OF WHAT I HAVE MENTIONED ABOVE IS FROM IMPRIMIS A PUBLICATION OF HILLSDALE COLLEGE MARCH 2021 VOLUME 50 NUMBER 3. IT CAN BE READ ON HILLSDALE.EDU. <https://imprimis.hillsdale.edu/critical-race-theory-fight/>

RESPECTFULLY,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Chris Jones", with a stylized flourish extending to the right.

CHRIS JONES
VICE-PRESIDENT

[EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory (CRT) courses proposed to be taught in NM public schools.

outlook_0D3611C5D5BE1075@outlook.com <ldrobertson705@gmail.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 4:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To: John Sena, Policy Division, New Mexico Public Education Department

This subject material in CRT course details is not appropriate for instruction in K thru 12 grades and can cause harm to the students in their relationship with their peers. It is demonstrated that it causes more division between races and raises more conflicts between parents and teachers, declares that one group is an oppressor and the other is the oppressed. It is dividing multicultural families, communities, school boards and parents, states; and the country. The political influence within this "Theory Only, not fact" must stop creating hate between all these factions or we will have permanent damage to our civil liberties and eventually our Republic as we know it. Please don't let this go further as a course included in New Mexico public schools policy. We need to be teaching more love and brotherhood for police, ethnic groups, and each other rather than inciting differences and demeaning each other.

L. Dennis Robertson
920 Jubilee Blvd SW
Los Lunas, NM 87031

Sent from Mail for Windows

Virus-free. www.avast.com

[EXTERNAL] Social studies changes

Amanda Hall <bacahall1986@gmail.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 5:27 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

CRT should not be taught. Nobody with morals wants their children taught about LGBT.

[EXTERNAL] Artesia Petition

John Ross Null <jrnull@bulldogs.org>

Mon 10/4/2021 6:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (95 KB)

Artesia Board of Education Petition to Delay Social Studies Standards 9.23.2021.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon,

Please add the attached petition from the Artesia Board of Education to the public comments regarding the social studies standards.

Thank you very much.

J. R. Null, Superintendent

John Ross Null, Superintendent
Artesia Public Schools
301 Bulldog Boulevard
Artesia, NM 88210
575-308-3687
jrnull@bulldogs.org

“Superior Quality Education for All Students”

CHILDREN FIRST!! City of Champions

Petition of the
Artesia Public School District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

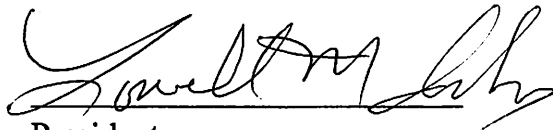

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Artesia Public School District Board of Education (the "Board") deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to at least July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

Artesia Public School District Board of Education

President

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies Standards

Ashley Guerra <arcguerra21@hotmail.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 7:28 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern:

I am writing to inquire about the revised Social Studies standards. The Albuquerque Journal had an article entitled "Weigh in on social studies standards" dated 10/4/2021. In this article Wendi Miller Tomlinson states that "the revised standards, which the New Mexico Public Education Department posted on its website on Sept. 2"

I have looked for these new standards on the PED website and cannot locate them. Can you please provide me with information on how to find them? I desire to be informed in order to provide feedback by the November 12th submission date. Thank you for your assistance with this request.

Sincerely,

Ashley Guerra

[EXTERNAL] MIG proposed changes yopublic school social studies curriculum

Patty Kotur <PAKotur@hotmail.com>

Mon 10/4/2021 7:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NO NO NO! Proposal riddled with CRT. Progressive democrates AKA communist/socialist are assaulting the fabric of America's belief that United We Stand and instead educating to divide - Divided We Fall. VOTE those decisive politicians out of office!

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

[EXTERNAL] New Mexico History

lerodconsulting@comcast.net <lerodconsulting@comcast.net>

Mon 10/4/2021 8:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 2 attachments (84 KB)

Don Diego DeVargas Oped.docx; Essays on New Mexico History.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am sending this as a source of information for the “Update” of Social Studies. The sources for the information, which I consider the origins of New Mexico history, are as follows:

Based on transcriptions and translations of the original manuscripts found in Archivo General de la Nación, México; Biblioteca Nacional de Mexico, Archivo Franciscano, Mexico; Spanish Archives of New Mexico, Santa Fe, New Mexico; Archivo General de las Indias, Guadalajara, Mexico; The Royal Academy of History at Madrid, Spain; General Archives of the Indies, Seville, Spain.

Pioneer Historians: Gaspar Perez Villagra, W. H. Prescott, Hurbert Howe Bancroft, Herbert Eugene Bolton, George P Hammond, Agapito Rey, Adolf Bandelier, Manuel Espinosa, Fray Angelico Chavez, John Kessell, Jerry R. Craddock, Gilberto Espinosa

May the Divine Will of God be forever in our hearts.

Lorraine Rodriguez

Governor Don Diego DeVargas in His Own Words

We owe a debt of gratitude to the many historians who have documented for posterity the history of our beloved Land of Enchantment. Historian, John L. Kessell, professor emeritus of history at the University of Mexico spent two decades compiling, translating and editing letters written by Governor Don Diego DeVargas from 1691 to 1704. The subjects of DeVargas' letters are both administrative and personal. With scholarly research assistance and multiple funding sources, the translations were completed under the Vargas Project and printed by the University of New Mexico Press from 1989 – 2002.

The DeVargas letters describe, in painful detail, his activities as Governor of New Mexico and his personal relationship with his families. From these scholarly translations, we follow DeVargas' life, joys, struggles and sufferings during his short life from 1643 to 1704. He was 61 year old when he died in New Mexico, a land which he described as "remote beyond compare." One historian states that DeVargas was buried under the altar in the San Miguel Mission Chapel. Another historian states that DeVargas was buried in the chapel within the complex of the Palace of the Governors. Either way, DeVargas was buried in Santa Fe.

DeVargas was 45 years old when he was named Governor for the Province of New Mexico. Having paid for the honor of being named Governor, DeVargas was named to the position in 1688, but didn't actually take the reins of government until 1691. Under the conditions of his contract with the Council of the Indies, DeVargas was to personally fund the re-entry and resettlement in their entirety. Much of his money was earned from the mines in Zacatecas, Mexico, along with loans which were made to him through connections which he and his family had with wealthy and powerful people.

Recovery of the Northern Province was the primary goal of the Spanish Crown and the Viceroy in Mexico. Being a descendant of honorable soldiers, who served the Crown of Spain and were rewarded with the prestigious honor of the Order of Santiago, DeVargas too was a soldier. DeVargas had proven himself time and time again on the battlefields of Spain and New Spain. It was natural to him, first and foremost, to recover the lost province to the North which was lost during the Pueblo Revolt of 1680.

The Pueblo Revolt of 1680 was led by Pope who successfully commandeered the Pueblo Indians to drive the Spanish from the land and to destroy every trace of their culture and their religion. Approximately 400 Spanish, men, women and children were killed, 21 Franciscan Friars were martyred, homes were burned along with the Mission Churches, Church goods were seized, the altars were desecrated, and the Indians dressed themselves with the vestments of the priests to further mock the Catholic Faith. Pope, who became the titular head of the Pueblos, told his people to bathe in the river to rid themselves of the waters of Baptism.

Ralph Emerson Twitchell, Esq. vice-president New Mexico Historical Society in his Leading Facts of New Mexico History, published in 1911, writes that:

"Pope said that one day, while down in the kiva of Taos, there appeared unto him three figures of Indians who were always present there. They were named Caidit, Tilim, and Tlesime, who sent forth fire from every extremity of the body; they were messengers from the infernal regions; he had talked with them, had received their counsel, and he had been advised to unite all the Indians in a common league against the Spaniards.”

Pope received from these three figures all of the plans for the revolt, the knotted rope, the enlisting of the Indians, the threats of death if they didn't cooperate and the date of siege, August 13, 1680. (The revolt actually took place on August 10, 1680, the Feast Day of San Lorenzo, the Spanish Protomartyr of the Catholic Church. The plot was revealed to two Franciscan Friars; Fr. Antonio (Carbonel) Bernal at the Missions of San Cristobal and Fr. Fernando de Velasco at Pecos. Word was given to Governor Otermin who dispatched messengers in all directions to warn the friars and the settlers to flee to Isleta, Santa Cruz de la Canada or Santa Fe. The Pope got word that the plot had been revealed and ordered the revolt be carried out immediately, that was August 10, 1680.)

While the 21 Franciscan Martyrs killed during the Pueblo Revolt is widely known, there were 51 Franciscan Friars martyred by the Plains and Pueblo Indians in New Spain between the years 1542 -1731. In his book, St. Francis and Franciscans in New Mexico, by Rev. Theodosius Meyer, OFM published in 1926, of the 116 Franciscans martyred by the Native Americans in the United States, 51 of those were martyred in New Mexico. These martyred Franciscans were poisoned, burned alive, killed with poisoned arrows and stone hatchets, dismembered, and in all, brutally slain. They were all buried in New Mexico, some in the Mission Churches, some in the Rio Grande, and some were dismembered and their parts scattered. It is upon their blood that the Catholic Church in New Mexico was born. It is interesting to note that the cause for canonization of the other 65 martyred Franciscans in other states has begun, but no cause for canonization has been initiated by the Archdioceses of Santa Fe for these 51 New Mexico Franciscan Martyrs.

During the Pueblo Revolt of 1680, 2,500 citizens, both Spanish and Indian, left the Province of New Mexico and found shelter at the Convento of Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe Mission in what is now El Paso. Fr. Francisco de Ayeta, who was in charge of the supply wagons to Santa Fe, provided the exiled citizens with food and clothing. It is coincidental, that Fr. Ayeta, accompanied by Fray Nicolas Lopez Jardon, was on his way to Santa Fe with the supply wagons. The Friars met the exiled group in El Paso. With the wagons full of supplies, they were able to provide sustenance for the weary exiles. While the exiled, impoverished citizens may have been remembered by God on their arrival at El Paso, they were thereafter pretty much forgotten by the Spanish Crown and the Viceroy in Mexico. For the next 12 years, they lived in abject poverty and were spread throughout 5 missions surrounding the Guadalupe Mission in El Paso.

Twelve years after the Pueblo Revolt, the newly named Governor Don Diego DeVargas prepared to recover the Province. He planned two trips to Santa Fe. The goals for the first trip were to survey the condition of the Province and to reconcile with the Pueblo Indians. The goals for the second trip were to reinstate Santa Fe as the seat of government for the Province and resettle the exiled citizenry into their homes.

DeVargas' first entry into the Northern Province was in the fall of 1692. He took ___ soldiers, 3 Franciscan Friars, Fray Francisco Corvera, Fray Miguel (de Luna) Muniz, and Fray Cristobal Alonso Barraoso. He left El Paso without the 50 additional soldiers which had been promised to him by the Viceroy, but who never arrived. The trip took four months. His greeting, upon meeting the Indians in their pueblos was, "Praise be the Blessed Sacrament." DeVargas visited 23 pueblos and met with their leaders, assuring them that they would be forgiven for the revolt if they pledged allegiance to God, to the Crown of Spain and to himself as Governor of New Mexico. He promised to make peace with the plains Indians who were still making raids on the Pueblos, and acknowledged the Pueblo Leader's authority over their own people by presenting them with a blessed cane. The cane represented self-governance for the Pueblos.

The Friars who accompanied DeVargas on his first trip, Baptized those who had been born after the revolt, performed marriages, blessed the sick, administered Absolution and encouraged the Indians to return to the Faith. Some of the Indians and soldiers who accompanied DeVargas in his first trip, found their families who had been left behind during the revolt. These families were found living with the Indians and were peacefully returned to their families. DeVargas ordered that these captives (Spanish and Indian) of the Pueblo revolt be returned to El Paso to join the other exiled citizens.

The activities that took place during DeVargas' first trip are well documented in his own words, factually stated and provide a picture of the heart and soul of DeVargas, his military skill and his short comings. In DeVargas' mind, this first trip was successful in that the Pueblo Indians peacefully pledged the allegiance DeVargas had asked for. On Saturday, December 20, 1692 DeVargas entered El Paso triumphant. All was accomplished without a shot being fired or a single person being hurt. All of Mexico and the Crown of Spain rejoiced. Don Diego DeVargas was a hero. The church bells in the Cathedral of Mexico City rang out. The Viceroy immediately deposited funds from the Royal Treasury for the resettlement of the Northern Province.

It was for this first trip that DeVargas prayed to Mary, the Mother of God, for help. Although DeVargas carried Nuestra Senora de Los Remedios on the royal standard, Don Diego fell in love with La Conquistadora the minute he saw her. He prayed for her help in a peaceful repossession of Santa Fe. He promised her that if the expedition was successful and peaceful, an annual novena would be said in perpetuity to honor her; to remember the peaceful re-entry into Santa Fe for generations to come. DeVargas first trip to the Province was, in fact, peaceful. True to his word, an annual novena would be said in her honor in perpetuity.

Fray Angelico Chavez tells us that Governor DeVargas first laid eyes on the statue of La Conquistadora when he journeyed to El Paso in _____. La Conquistadora originally came from Spain, was carried to Mexico, and was in Mexico City when Fray Alonzo Benavidez found her and brought her to Santa Fe in 1626. During the Pueblo Revolt, the statue was rescued from her throne in La Parroquia (where the Cathedral now stands) by _____, whose husband, Gomez Robledo was mayordomo of the Confraternity of Our Lady of the Rosary (La Conquistadora) during the 1660's and again in 1684 in El Paso. Our Lady stayed in exile with her faithful for 12 years until 1693, when DeVargas' made his second trip to the Province.

Taking the Pueblo Indians at their word, DeVargas truly believed that the re-establishment of the seat of government and the resettlement of the exiled citizens in Santa Fe would be straight forward. His trust was naive. During the time between the two visits, the leaders of the Tano Indians from Galisteo Pueblos, were living in the Palace of the Governors in Santa Fe, had changed their minds about peaceful allegiance to God, the Crown of Spain and to Governor DeVargas. They wanted war to determine the occupancy of the Palace.

DeVargas proceed to prepare for the resettlement trip. He took a census of the exiled citizenry in the five settlements where they were living in and around El Paso. Of the 2,500 citizens that fled during the Pueblo Revolt, after 12 years in exile, only 1006 remained. Need information here

Commentary

Now we step out of the history books to encounter an irrational attempt to rewrite New Mexico history. Newly arrived leaders who have prejudiced that attempt are newcomers who can't possibly appreciate the history behind the unique culture of New Mexico. Mayor of Santa Fe, Alan Webber, a self-proclaimed progressive liberal, came from Seattle in 2003. From San Francisco came Archbishop John Wester, who was named to head the Archdioceses of Santa Fe in 2015. How can they possibly understand?

DeVargas prayed to Our Lady for a peaceful re-entry. He did not pray for a conquest of the Pueblo Indians; he did not pray for a successful war; he simply prayed for a peaceful reentry. Those who do not know Mary, the Mother of God under her many titles would assume that she would deliver death and bloodshed. She, who was given to mankind by Jesus under the cross, would never love one group of people over another. She is the Mother of Mankind. She brings clarity, peace and happiness. She brings Jesus to anyone who opens their heart to her. She came to conquer hearts, not peoples. She came to New Mexico to bring peace among the Spanish settlers and the Pueblo Indians, just as she came in 1531 as Our Lady of Guadalupe to Mexico to bring peace among the Indians and the Spanish there.

For the multi-cultural population of New Mexico, La Conquistadora is our Mother in heaven. La Conquistadora is the oldest statue of Our Lady in the United States. She will always remain in the hearts of the descendents of the first Spanish settlers.

Why shouldn't the descendants of the original settlers remember Oate and DeVargas? Those brave ancestors are in our DNA. Fray Angelico Chavez, OFM, documented their names for all posterity

In his _____; he records the names of the families who accompanied DeVargas on his second trip; the resettlement trip. Their names live on today in their descendants; Chavez, Romero, Sanchez, Trujillo, Garcia, Lopez, Gonzales, Rodriguez, Montoya, Giron, Lucero, Gallegos, Lujan, Archuleta, Madrid, etc., many of whose descendants still live in New Mexico and Southern Colorado.

Is it okay to remember? Absolutely! It is our right, our desire, our obligation to remember those individuals that contributed to the history and traditions of our culture. Should the Pueblo Indians remember? Absolutely, but no one has the right to abolish anyone's right to remember. They do not have the power to erase history. Political correctness, where people judge historical facts from a liberal, progressive lens, is nonsensical, foolish and simply insane. What has happened has happened; good or bad, it cannot be undone. The Spanish descendants will always remember, the Pueblo Indians will always remember. Change is difficult, human beings are concupiscent. Only God is good, but He does always bring good out of evil and chaos.

It should be noted that the Pueblo Indians, as did the Comanche, Ute, Navajo and Jicarilla Apaches ultimately fared well under Catholic Spanish rule. Beginning with the Reglas de las Indias ____ decreed by the Catholic Monarchs of Spain, King Fernand and Queen Isabella, the Indians were to be humanly treated, Christianized and educated. While the Spanish Laws regarding the Indians was often broken, especially under the encomienda system, La Ley de las Reglas remained the law throughout the centuries. The equality in citizenship and freedom for self-governance that the Catholic Spaniards provided for the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico must be contrasted to what the English did to the Indians in the Northeast, where many of the tribes are now extinct. (Alfonso Ortiz, Handbook of American Indians, Vol. 9, Southwest)

The Catholic Spaniard Missionaries, predominately Franciscan, must be given credit for civilizing, Christianizing and educating the Native Indians. With civilization came a life of order and security, with Christianity came the Sacraments of the Catholic Church which provided sanctifying grace to the "pagan" soul, and with education came liberty, (libe-libertas.) Even Regis Pecos acknowledges the work of those missionaries.

Many visitors to Santa Fe find a quiet peace during their stay. What is it that they are experiencing? Why do they keep returning? What permeates the City is the soul of Santa Fe which is based on centuries of Faith of its citizens, thus the name The Royal City of the Holy Faith of St. Francis of Assisi. On any given Sunday, church parking lots are filled with the Santa Feans attending church services. The 420 year old City is home to holy places that still stand today. Fr. Angelico Chavez, OFM in his Penitente Land felt New Mexico was special, one could feel its anima hispanica.

So where do we go from here.? We might consider, that owing to social justice and respect for those who forged a living to create the City of Santa Fe, the statue of Don Diego DeVargas be returned to its place of honor in Cathedral Park. It was removed in the dark of night at the orders of the Mayor who did not have the authority or the right to have it removed. He wounded the spirit of its Hispanic citizens, those who probably voted for him. What a betrayal of the public trust!

We might consider that the Confraternities of La Conquistadora, La Cofradia de la Conquistadora and the Caballeros DeVargas be allowed to continue their centuries-old work in preserving the devotion and novena to Our Lady without threats from the Church hierarchy. The Novena has always been a spiritual event, but over the years has evolved into a secular fiesta, elements which have no bearing on the novena. If the secular parts of the Fiestas are eliminated, so be it.

And, lest the newly arrived activist forget, Mary, the Mother of God under her many titles, is the Queen of Heaven. So, for your own sakes, don't malign Governor Juan de Onate or Governor Don Diego DeVargas (favorite sons) lest all heaven breaks loose, if it hasn't already.

Essays on New Mexico History

We have been called to heal wounds, to unite what has fallen apart, and to bring home those who have lost their way.

(St. Francis of Assisi) (Goodreads.com)

Based on transcriptions and translations of the original manuscripts found in Archivo General de la Nación, México; Biblioteca Nacional de Mexico, Archivo Franciscano, Mexico; Spanish Archives of New Mexico, Santa Fe, New Mexico; Archivo General de las Indias, Guadalajara, Mexico; The Royal Academy of History at Madrid, Spain; General Archives of the Indies, Seville, Spain.

Pioneer Historians: Gaspar Perez Villagra, W. H. Prescott, Hurbert Howe Bancroft, Herbert Eugene Bolton, George P Hammond, Agapito Rey, Adolf Bandelier, Manuel Espinosa, Fray Angelico Chavez, John Kessell, Jerry R. Craddock, Gilberto Espinosa

New Mexico's history is inextricably linked to Spain, Mexico (New Spain) and the Catholic Church.

The world owes a debt of gratitude to the Pioneer Historians who labored for decades to bring the history of New Mexico to life. The struggles of New Mexico's early explorers, the Conquistadores, the Franciscan Friars, the Spanish Colonist, and the Pueblo Indians all played a difficult role as they persevered throughout the centuries to bring to fruition what is now the Land of Enchantment.

In _____ When the Crown of Spain announced that it was searching for someone to lead _____ conquest and colonization of what would come to be known as New Mexico. Excitement welled up among all the citizens of New Spain, rich or poor, young and old. The illusive stories of "golden" cities, fertile lands, civilized populations (wearing silver and gold around their necks), swelled the imagination of the Spaniards like fermented yeast. Everyone wanted in.

Gaspar Perez Villagra was one of those eager Spaniards whose fortune and chance lay with the man who would be Governor of the new territory, Juan de Onate. Gaspar was born in New Spain (Mexico) but educated at the University of Salamanca where he earned a Bachelor's Degree in Letters before returning home. In his writings, Gaspar quoted philosophers without providing references because "everyone should recognize that quote!" Onate knew that Gaspar's family had invested heavily in the expedition and that that Gaspar was intelligent, but a soldier he wasn't. Gaspar's picture depicts him as small of stature, prematurely balding, but full of enthusiasm. Onate accepted Gaspar into his army, gave him the rank of Captain and put him in charge of the commissary.

Gaspar accepted the commissary job, did it well and still had time to accompany Onate "as assigned." While on these "assignments" Gaspar wrote in his journal. In keeping with the style of the time, he wrote notes in rhyme, in "Canto's" much like Dante wrote the Divine Comedy. When the description of an event got too unwieldy, Gaspar's writing would lapse into plain prose. His writing reflected his education. Gaspar was a theologian, philosopher, poet, a historian, a story teller; he simply wrote what he saw and what he experienced. He, one of the "very Conquistadores" of New Mexico documented his experiences with Onate in a detailed "Historia de la Nueva Mexico" which he published in Alcala, Spain in 1610. His eye witness account of these experiences were accompanied with historical, detailed information of dates, names, places, and events.

For 200 hundred years, Villagra's Spanish Historia de la Nueva Mexico, was the basis for information relating to the events of early 16th Century New Mexico. In 1933 the book was transcribed into English by Gilberto Espinosa, a lawyer from Belen, New Mexico. Villagra's Historia was now available in English and became available to a wider audience.

In the late 1800's, Dr. Herbert Eugene Bolton, a young history professor, was blazing a trail to bring to light the history of America's Southern Borderlands (Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California.) He argued that the history of America that was being taught in schools was incomplete without the history of Spain's explorations and settlements of the lands along America's Southern Border. Dr. Bolton's premise was that the Spanish were in "America" decades (1540) before the English landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620. Yet, the early history books on American history were silent on that fact.

In the summer of 1902, Dr. Bolton journeyed to Mexico in search of information to "fill-in" the gaps of the American story. What he found was a "gold mine" of original documents, handwritten manuscripts dating back to the 1600's. Bolton's discovery was not a secret for long. The Carnegie Institution was arranging for the publication of calendars of materials pertinent to the history of the United States existing in foreign archives. Dr. Bolton was given a 15 month leave to gather and catalogue the pertinent archives found in _____.

Dr. Bolton began transcribing and translating these Spanish documents relating to the Border Lands, but the volume was overwhelming. He enlisted the help of his students. It should be noted that according to the rules and procedures outlined by the Crown of Spain, all correspondence (handwritten at that time) had to be made in triplicate, one for the King in Spain, one for the Viceroy in Mexico City, and one for the local province. Some of the documents which Dr. Bolton found were probably the second copy sent to the Viceroy in Mexico. The copies which were kept for the local province in Santa Fe were burned during the Pueblo Revolt of 1680. The King's copy was undoubtedly in Spain.

In 1921, one of Dr. Bolton's Doctorial Candidates at UC Berkley, George J. Hammond received funding to explore the archives at the Archivo General de las Indias, Seville, Spain. Dr. Hammond and his wife spent 1922-1923 in Seville searching through the 300 year old, handwritten Spanish documents. Their efforts were rewarded when they found documents relating to the founding and settlement of New Mexico by Governor Juan de Onate.

Dr. Hammond published his findings as his doctoral thesis, "Don Juan de Onate and the Founding of New Mexico." The work was published by El Palacio Press, Santa Fe, New Mexico USA October 1927.

Decades later in 1953, Dr. Hammond, with the help of his friend Dr. Agapito Rey, Spanish Professor at Indiana University, published a two-volume, 1187 page work on Don Juan de Onate, Colonizer of New Mexico. The books were published by the University of New Mexico Press, 1953.

The voluminous work required the transcription and translation of documents from the original manuscripts. From these original manuscripts, we learn in agonizing detail, the events that took place in the founding and colonization of New Mexico from 1595 to 1628. This information includes the occurrences that took place at Acoma Pueblo on December, 1599 and January, 1600.

A summary of the events which led to the war at Acoma is as follows:

1. Onate asked the Franciscan Friar _____ for a ruling on the issue of a "just war."
2. Onate gathered information from the soldiers who were eye witnesses at the first battle. None of those interviewed mentioned cutting off of the feet, yet in Velasco's letter, he states that the feet of 24 Indians were cut off (it would appear, at that same encounter.) The sentencing itself didn't occur until February, 1599 and called for the mutilization of the right foot for all males 25 years and older. Velasco's letter was written in 1601. Is it possible that his foul mood could have fueled his imagination and the thought of the sentencing came to mind, and he just made it part of his diatribe confusing "24 mutilizations" with the "25 years and older sentence?"
3. Onate instructed Zaldivar not to harm the Indians and to give them three chances for peace.
4. Onate also provided two attorneys for the defense of the Indians at the trial.
5. The Spanish are prolific writers/reporters. They documented everything. It appears unlikely that mutilizations wouldn't have been described, reported and fully documented by someone. The description of the mutilizations would have been gory, not simply a statement referring casually to "24 mutilizations." Certainly an incident such as this would have been reported by the Indians themselves and the Spanish Citizens in those communities.
6. It appears to me that the sentence was meant to scare the Indians, and to prevent other pueblos from doing what Acoma did.
7. Onate's other inhumane crimes were well documented. He apparently did commit them. Why are we left without any description of the mutilization sentence being carried out, if in fact, as history records it, it was carried out.
8. As it appears, only one disgruntled, disloyal soldier wrote a letter which, for 420 years, has made Don Juan de Onate turn in his grave.

I wish I could be in one of your class discussions on this topic. My ancestors came to New Mexico with DeVargas, and it is possible that some came with Onate, but I haven't found proof of that.

Again, thank you for your time. I will keep you posted about how this "defense" goes. Right now all of the government and Church authorities are siding with the Indians. All of these authorities are newcomers to New Mexico.

Again, thank you for your work on the Cibola Project. I started my research on New Mexico years ago. I am attempting to locate every Franciscan Martyred in New Mexico from 1540 – 1725. Of the 116 Franciscans that have been martyred in the US during that time period, 55 were martyred in New Mexico.

Dear Ms. Rodríguez,

Many thanks for your generous words about the Cíbola Project. You seem to be as well informed as I am about the sentence in question. I recall that not long ago the historian John Kessell expressed in print (NMHR, I would imagine) doubts that the sentence was actually carried out. I confess that in view of the fact that the sentence is accompanied by the Oñate's signature in the Acoma trial document it seems to me a hopeless task to attempt to prove it was not carried out. It was not by far the worst atrocity committed at Acoma, which was Vicente de Zaldívar's massacre of prisoners after the battle was over. The Spaniards probably considered the mutilation a lesser punishment than death. If I recall correctly, the mutilated Acomans were to be sold into slavery, but their value as slaves would have been drastically reduced by the mutilation. I am writing from memory, but I believe the mutilation is not among the charges leveled against Oñate in his trial, which does however charge him with having hanged two Acomans without due process. You may have seen the corresponding documents in the Cíbola web site. That is, alas, about all I can offer on the question.

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School sigmasw@comcast.net <sigmasw@comcast.net>

Tue 10/5/2021 12:11 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.

I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

It is racists to teach this garbage.

This is a way to create racists from good people. I don't want this. It is wrong. Have you ever thought that this will lead to genocide in the future?

Name: Katherine McFadden

County: Valencia

Fw: [EXTERNAL] Public comment Social Studies Standards.

Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Tue 10/5/2021 8:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: Flora Sanchez <sanchez.village47@gmail.com>

Sent: Monday, October 4, 2021 8:09 PM

To: Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Public comment Social Studies Standards.

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please Notify of change of meeting

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] New Mexico History

Frances Martinez <francesmartinez@cybercardinal.com>

Tue 10/5/2021 10:41 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena,

It is my understanding that the current Social Studies Standards in New Mexico were last revised in 2009 for Social Studies but they lack the increasingly diverse perspectives and histories of the diverse people in New Mexico. Can we please take that into consideration in an upcoming revision of the standards. Thank you, it will be much appreciated.

Gracias.

Frances L. Martinez
LVCS-RHS Librarian/Facilitator
505-454-2713

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Jim Higdon <jimrhigdon@earthlink.net>

Tue 10/5/2021 12:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I read Ms Tomlinson's essay in the newspaper and I thank her for alerting parents and citizens to this impending educational standards implementation.

I focused mostly on the Economics Standards because my degrees and intellectual interests are in this area.

The Economics Standards are ambitious. I doubt many college graduates, other than those majoring in economics or finance, could meet these standards. Not just in New Mexico but nationwide.

My own formal teaching experience is only with graduate students. I know and am friends with many current and retired primary and high school teachers. I have to say that none of them could meet the high school economics standards you list. So, the teenagers will be exposed to ideas about which the teacher has very limited understanding. More likely the teachers will just focus on the particular beliefs or illusions about economics they personally hold dear.

I did not spend a lot of time with the Inquiry Standards. They, too, are ambitious beyond the skill set of all but the most capable high school teacher. One standard stuck out: F. (2) (d), "using a coherent system or structure to evaluate the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use." I doubt there are 20, maybe not 10, people working for APS who can do that. For example, if this skill were widespread, they wouldn't be forcing face masks on the students.

There is far, far, far, far too much emphasis on group identity as the most important factor in culture. Apparently you want students to come to believe that their belonging to a group, maybe any group, is the most important element in determining how they should live their life. Who they are as an individual is, apparently, much less important. Take this stuff out. Your teaching this idea is ruining our country and causing these students to limit their efforts to achieve a happy, productive life.

[EXTERNAL] CRT in Social Studies 6.29.11 cindy quintana <cindyq5@yahoo.com>

Tue 10/5/2021 1:11 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon-

We are extremely concerned that this Social Justice movement is taking preeminence over what we should be teaching our children. Using "Social Justice" as a means to promote CRT-when we know the roots are Marxist. Which is nothing more than the taking over of our social, political and economic foundations. We know it has never worked and to continue on this path will change the very fabric of our society for generations and destroy in the long term our democracy. We are raising our grandchildren and recall the Civil Rights era, how people of all colors came together and made this Country better. Now, we are using "theories" to prompt hate and separation based on color. Intersectionality-this focus on our differences to separate and not prompt true understanding. This whole process is nothing more than a wolf in sheep's clothing. No one has control of what color they are born into or social class. However, this Country allows possibilities to achieve regardless of the challenges to overcome. This act of teaching "blame" on another race or background is not educating but indoctrinating our children. We are not preparing our children to think for themselves-but to create a "group think" and only one way to see the world around them. How have we forgotten where we were, who we are and how far we have come? We need to go back to our roots and bring back true quality teaching. Why are we promoting "theories" to our children instead of having discussions regarding our history and where we are now. Racism is not in "everything" nor is every white person automatically born.

Sincerely

Joe and Cindy Quintana

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Mike Berve <mberve@outlook.com>

Tue 10/5/2021 2:59 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear PED:

It is your responsibility to educate our children. It is truly your sacred duty. New Mexico graduates are continually in the bottom of most proficiency categories compared to the rest of the nation. Your recommended "8 Guiding Principles" for Social Studies will not improve our children's knowledge of civics or history in any way. Teach our children the facts of history. Leave the interpretation of "diversity" or "equity" to their parents and family. Teach our children Civics through knowledge of the constitution and the structure of our federal, state, and local governments. Leave the interpretation of "social justice" and "oppression", especially in non-historical, current political messaging, to their parents and family. If you waste our children's precious education time by attempting to mold their focus to your so-called "authentic stories", you will be responsible for our children's continued under-achievement. There is plenty of critical thinking our children will need to address by following accurate, un-biased history, especially the history of the many Indian tribes in New Mexico. You don't need to force your opinion of historical context or the need to mend or heal past occurrences. They can think that through when they need to. For now, teach our children the facts without your coercion.

Respectfully,
Mike Berve
Farmington, NM

[EXTERNAL] Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the proposed Social Studies Curriculum

Kim <forbesgayton@aol.com>

Tue 10/5/2021 3:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Thank you again for the opportunity to weigh in on the proposed revisions to the Social Studies curriculum.

From what I see, the proposed curriculum does try to cover a vast array of cultural experiences and historical events. I even see a global component in later years of high school, and that is encouraging, as people and history are not islands unto themselves.

However, I do feel that the civics component, particularly in the United States needs to be reintroduced. While it is lightly outlined in kindergarten and first grade, I see no mention of any student-contributory component to civic duty. It's one thing to be a citizen, but what does a citizen mean today: someone who is either born or naturalized in the United States, and basically, is to obey the laws provided by one's leadership, and vote every two years (for primaries, if one is affiliated with either political party, and every four years for a general election)? What duties, if any, does a citizen have beyond election day, and again, obeying the laws provided to him/her through his/her leadership? Does today's citizen know the branches of government (local, state, and federal) what each is for, how it works, what the checks and balances are between the three, and crucially, how our representatives (not out leaders/dictators) are to conduct themselves in actually representing a constituency?!? Or is citizenship now reduced to (just) showing up to vote on election day, screaming about freedom without consideration of duty and responsibility, and rolling one's eyes upon receiving a summons for jury duty?

I was fortunately, taught civics in my schooling (grades three through six, and beyond) in New York City, and experience what civics entails in my adult life. Unfortunately, I see and experience a distressful atrophy toward civics in social studies, and in the country at large now. Everyone wants and expects a superman to be totally responsible and to fix every available problem we have, while citizens now feel we need to do nothing further than what I have already described above as what a citizen has been reduced to. While I do not have school-aged children here in New Mexico, I would like to see civics re-introduced into the curriculum so students learn that they will have a stake in the country and broadly, the world that they will ultimately inherit.

I concede that given the vast list and important components listed in the proposed curriculum is a lot, and my request adds to it. Still, social studies should not be 'dead' history to students. History and culture as it stands, without any political bent, nor bias, should be taught in school. However, students are not to be left with history just as it was, without being given the insight, opportunity and duty as to what citizenship (civics) is today, so they will not be left to be pawns in someone else's game.

Again, I thank you for the opportunity to weight in on the proposed curriculum. Of course, if you have any questions, concerns, commentary of your own, or need clarification, please feel free to contact me. Thank you and have a great day!

-Kim Forbes-Gayton

[EXTERNAL] social studies feedback

Jim Hale <jwhalejw@gmail.com>

Tue 10/5/2021 3:38 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As an archaeologist and former history teacher I commend you on an ambitious curriculum, especially as spring advances.

1. P 46, Theme 2, Geography 11: when asking students to compare one Mezoamerican and one South American civilization, I think it would be important to include North American civilizations. Many people are unaware of Cahokia, or the Mississippian civilizations. 1491: New Revelations of the Americas before Columbus by Charles C. Mann is a solid popular read about a number of these issues for teachers needing content.
2. History 15: it is an overstatement to presume the relationship of sedentism to the agricultural revolution. Any place with predictable salmon runs allowed for sedentism without agriculture. This means that indigenous people from northern California north to Alaska fit this pattern. This is not incidental, and includes the iconic Northwest Coast tribes with their longhouses and totem poles.
3. P47, Theme 3, Civics 1, 4; History 14, 15: While I applaud the attempt to be less Euro-centric by including the eastern world, and eventually the Middle East, it is also important to include African and American civilizations in this discussion, even if there isn't a rich written record to draw from. It is important to dispel the "primitive people who live in grass huts" mythology that is an implicit part of much racism.
4. P68, Theme 3, History 15: It does not obviously fit in this section, since the source was colonization in Latin America and the Caribbean, but consensus now has it that upwards of 90% of Indigenous people died as a result of Old World diseases like smallpox for which they had no immunity, before any colonists stepped foot on the North American continent. That certainly changes the discussion about Indigenous/colonist interactions (see 1491 referenced above for a discussion).
5. P71, Theme 6, History 14: in discussing the "Indigenous Peoples assimilation story" it's important to be honest about changing US policy towards Native people, a policy that initially included annihilation. Being forthright can help the generational trauma of your indigenous students.
6. A final consideration under HS NM History: there is long standing animosity between local Indigenous people, and those with Spanish heritage. Neither side feels respected for their historical place in the state. The Pueblo Revolt is the perfect example of this conflict, and is a story that continues to be passed down the generations. It looks as though this will be taught in the 7th grade, far too young for students to consider much nuance. Rather than begin NM History with the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, I recommend reteaching the Pueblo Revolt as an example of the tensions between groups of New Mexicans throughout history.

Thanks, Jim Hale

jwhalejw@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Social standard revision

Mike Hinch <mhinch73@yahoo.com>

Tue 10/5/2021 8:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

There is no need to bring indoctrination tactics and critical race theory to New Mexico. We have one of the lowest equivalency testing in the nation and it's not because of the current curriculum. Where is the list of required reading material that will go with this new curriculum?

Michael Hinch

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Proposed curriculum changes

Janet Bullard <jr25bull@hotmail.com>

Wed 10/6/2021 8:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Gov.Lujan@state.nm.us <Gov.Lujan@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The job of the State Board of Education, local school boards, teachers and faculty of all New Mexico's schools is to teach our children "reading, writing, and arithmetic". It is not to indoctrinate children to the radical, Marxist agenda. Any of these entities that are trying to push a curriculum that teaches the racism and hate mongering to our students should be immediately removed from their position. Teaching the values of the United States Constitution should be a priority. Radical leftist agendas have no place in our schools.

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] SAY NO!

Bobbie Scarfe <bobbiescarfe@q.com>

Wed 10/6/2021 9:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a former teacher I heartily say

"NO" to the changes proposed to the PED Social Studies Standards.

Bobbie Scarfe

1107 Miller Rd. LosLunas NM, 87031 505 865-1564

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM School bonnie smith <randyselectric@outlook.com>

Wed 10/6/2021 1:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.

I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name: Randy A. Smith

County:Valencia

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards Feedback

Lisette Swaim <lcbs1976@gmail.com>

Wed 10/6/2021 9:03 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The public schools need to know their place in society.

The public schools have no business teaching things that parents should be teaching their own children.

The standard that needs to be abolished is the Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies which breaks down into Diversity and Identity and Community Equity Building.

At no time should a teacher (who is usually biased) be teaching a child about anybody's identity. A person is born a male or female, period. It's understood that there is a mental illness that is running rapidly throughout the latest generation of children where they think that they are born ungendered or not a sex. This is NOT, nor will it ever be, the responsibility of the schools. It is a parent's job to raise their children and to inform their children of these mental illnesses.

A teacher is not a mental health practitioner. They are not skilled in understanding mental illnesses. The schools are encouraging the new status quo of diversity and equity that is completely skewed. Instead of having teachers teaching this skewed view of those who are dealing with attention-seeking behaviors, how about sticking to the facts and re-normalizing scientific FACTS? Are there scientific anomalies out there? Sure. But those are minimal and the public schools are trying to normalize something that is completely freakish.

If you choose to bring this curriculum to the plate, how will you train the teachers and guarantee these teachers will be unbiased in their approach? You CAN NOT, that is why you need to eliminate it from your plans. If you keep this item as part of your plans, you are encouraging teachers to indoctrinate based on their personal beliefs, mind you mostly liberal beliefs.

STOP reinventing the wheel. NM is 50th in education in the nation and when you are encouraging this trash to be taught that means you intend to stay there. You need to stop Socializing the schools.

They were not created to raise a child. You now provide free babysitting for 3 years up in the state of NM, starting with Pre-K where kids are leaving and entering Kindergarten not knowing their ABC's/123's. Teachers are not doctors, nurses, psychologists, therapists, nutritionists, or anything that you are trying to make them. Their main purpose is to teach. Start making parents become responsible for raising their children. There's not a child who goes hungry in NM like the governor claims. There are kids who come from families whose parents choose not to work and instead live off the government. They receive hundreds of dollars in food stamps and eat better than most teachers in the state. Make these parents be responsible for feeding their children BEFORE they get to school. Send them to school with a brown bagged lunch and STOP with the snacks; more of it winds up in the trash than in the stomachs of these children (I've seen it over the years, first-hand).

The public schools have lost their place in society. Make parents be parents to their kids; stop enabling them! We do not live in a Socialist society but the Liberals continue to push this agenda. America was not built on Socialist ideologies.

Being that the State of NM is being run by Liberals, and has a Union that covers for bad teachers, I already know that this is only a guise to make it "look like you want the public's input" on these standards and potential curriculum. We know that you've already made up your mind. So the question is why do you continue to LIE to the public? What's the point? Do and and watch what happens. You will see more parents pulling their kids from the public schools. You will continue losing money due to the number of kids not enrolling in public schools and the only people who will be responsible for this are the Liberals.

Thank you!

[EXTERNAL] CRT (Social Studies Standards)

Don Licht <sr.licht65@gmail.com>

Wed 10/6/2021 9:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may or may not concern:

I have read over your update social studies standards in disgust.

Most all that have read this update feel the same as I do, this is total child indoctrination and extremely racist. I'm glad to see you have put this plan in writing (and kind of shocked) and as we all know you're not fooling anyone what this critical racist theory (CRT) really is, you can call it whatever you want a spade is a spade. Also most of the educated public is well aware of the reasons why New Mexico (State) is pushing this garbage on our children, just follow the money all the way back to Washington DC. There is nothing wrong with the education system in New Mexico except the lazy and corrupt people in charge of our children's education, which has been ranked near last for years. Other than money and corruption the education system could still be saved and you all owe that to the wonderful children of New Mexico.

So I say NO to indoctrination and yes to education, so if you want to make positive changes to education weed out corrupt people in both the state education department and teachers unions, get rid of radical people in education and that would put our children back on the world stage, highly educated. I still believe the education system still can be revived but CRT will set our children back decades.

I have no problem teaching our children and think we should teach them we are all equal in God's eyes, morals should be taught at home, not by some radical government policy, and CRT has no business being taught to grade/high school children, it's already being taught in college. So do us all a favor and keep it out of grade/high schools in New Mexico.

Respectfully Submitted
Don J Licht Sr

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Kimmara Pattrice <kimmara.jackson@gmail.com>

Thu 10/7/2021 9:05 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

There should be whole semester courses for middle and high school students to teach American History that includes in depth the history of both Native and African American history. The history needs to go beyond the stereotype of Rosa Parks, Dr. King, and the others. Let's dive deep into slavery and the revolts and other events that people tend to gloss over when it comes to Native American and African history. After those courses there needs to be a course on Hispanic heritage. Also for high schoolers a course required for graduation about race relations and Global society.

Elementary school children need age appropriate lessons on slavery and the Trail of Tears, as well as other Native American and African American history. With sections for parents to further discuss at home.

I'm from the Midwest and my APS student has attended school in the Southern states where these lessons are taught starting in Kindergarten. As uncomfortable as it may be for some parents and some teachers, this is our country's history and it cannot be glossed over. Glossing over it causes a lack of comfort and acceptance of your diversity and a lack of sensitivity that our children will carry into adulthood and other parts of the world as they branch out beyond New Mexico's borders.

Let's prepare our children to be not just New Mexico leaders, but world leaders.

Thank you.

[EXTERNAL] Rio Grande Foundation Comments on PED social studies requirements

Paul Gessing <pgessing@riograndefoundation.org>

Thu 10/7/2021 10:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

After a careful examination of New Mexico's proposed social studies curriculum there are numerous components of that curriculum which disturbingly reflect Critical Race Theory (CRT). Large numbers of Americans of all political leanings oppose CRT and its divisive approach to history. Therefore this proposed curriculum needs to be significantly revised or completely abandoned.

CRT is not America's actual history. Rather, it is a worldview, unsupportable by the evidence, in which all of America's key institutions are inextricably rooted in white supremacy. It is an activist agenda demanding the destruction of those institutions.

CRT holds that racism is embedded deeply in American life, unconsciously into white American psyches, and that it is impossible for white Americans to understand their own racism or that of the system, let alone to remove it. The only solution: tearing away the only systems that have ever provided widespread liberty and prosperity. As CRT founder Derrick Bell wrote, "The whole liberal worldview of private rights and public sovereignty mediated by the rule of law needed to be exploded."

1. In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies there is a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces "offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity." This is classic CRT theology. 6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)
2. Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continue focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This, too, is classic CRT as the purpose is to divide people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.
3. There are also numerous examples where a teacher can impose the notion of "justice and fairness," unequal power relations, "past and current injustices", although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also classic CRT as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)
4. Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students "evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S." This is again classic CRT as it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)
5. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. This is another CRT theology component in that America is automatically unjust and inequitable to various minority groups. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)
6. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. No positives regarding gun usage by women or minority groups are put forth. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)

7. In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. Another classic example of CRT as it stresses racial disparity in terms of inequality. 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)
8. Within High school U.S. History, students must examine the short-and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America. How about pairing this with a discussion of Communism and the negative impact it has had in Cuba and other Latin American nations. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)
9. In the 7thGrade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)
10. Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)

The novelist William Faulkner wrote, "The past is never dead. It's not even past." It is true that any social studies curriculum will have its flaws and oversights. History and social studies are inherently controversial subjects. But, selectively "studying" our collective history and requiring it to be taught in a highly politicized and divisive way is wrong and it has no place in our public schools.

All I ask is that New Mexico's schools do their best to objectively teach America's real history. Slavery and conquest are certainly part of that, but so is America as a beacon of freedom for people from around the world. The flaws of our Founding Fathers are worth discussing, but so are the miracles of the Constitution, Declaration, and the eventual fulfillment of the "promissory note" for ALL Americans inherent in those documents.

Millions of people around the world have and would still like to come to America because it is a unique nation founded on the idea of liberty, not slavery as the CRT theorists would insist. New Mexico's social studies curriculum should at least allocate as much time and study to those things that make America a beacon of hope and freedom as those warts which hold us back from building a more perfect union.

--

Paul J. Gessing
President
Rio Grande Foundation
P.O. Box 40336
Albuquerque, N.M., 87196
www.riograndefoundation.org
505-264-6090

[EXTERNAL] NMPED Draft Social Studies for Teachers

Michael Franco <franco23401@outlook.com>

Thu 10/7/2021 12:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED) recently published its draft social studies standards for teachers. Our family finds this proposal full of racist Critical Race Theory (CRT), anti-Hispanic hate, forcing down our throat the “LGBTQI+” agenda, and demonization of police officers, among other frightening curricula.

As a Hispanic household, we hate what the PED wants to teach our children. We are not victims. We live in the best nation in the world, though it is not perfect (no nation is). Why do so many people of the world want to come here?

This proposed social studies makes assumptions based upon race (which is racist in itself).

There are no peoples without sins in their history, including the Native Americans (of which I am 45% Native and proud of that)! The Natives were slaughtering each other, sacrificing humans, capturing and raping women, at war with each other, before the Spanish arrived.

The African Americans were being hunted down by their very own black population and sold into slavery, and were slaughtering each other in wars.

If you're going to lay blame on one or two races and make everyone else victims, why don't you tell the whole truth?

I agree slavery was a great evil, and against the laws of God, but our country (which is a Constitutional Republic, not a “Constitutional Democracy,” as you are teaching) has gradually made progress to address the sins of our country's past. Again, there is no country on earth that has made as much progress on race relations and is still striving to level that playing field.

Why do so many immigrants flood our country if it's as evil and racist as your social studies curriculum teaches? It makes no sense! At least with capitalism, every man has a chance to raise up his stature in society, to open up his/her own business and succeed.

My father began as a janitor and worked his way up to become an airplane mechanic for the airlines. He sent me off to college and I had a great career with the FAA. We refuse to be categorized as victims or oppressors.

Your thinly disguised CRT curriculum can only pit us citizens against each other by viewing everyone through the lens of oppressors or victims, depending on skin color or sexual orientation. This is a lie and plain stupidity.

Please withdraw this shameful change to the social studies standards!

I have visited other countries and it only reinforces my love for this country. Begin teaching our students to respect and value our country as the best place on the earth to live.

Thanks for listening,

Michael Franco
Albuquerque, NM
505-294-5739

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Amy Schroth <aschroth@montedelsol.org>

Thu 10/7/2021 1:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have been an English teacher at a public charter school in New Mexico for over 20 years. I welcome and wholeheartedly support this update to the Social Studies standards, as it recognizes diverse perspectives and presents a more factual narrative of many historical events and movements. The American Bar Association argues that "the predominance of curriculum that excludes the history and lived experiences of Americans of color and imposes a dominant white narrative of history" contributes to racial inequality in education. I see these standards as an attempt to address such issues of equality, as well as to update and modernize many of the topics covered in traditional history curricula, to include events like 9/11, nuclear technology, and immigration.

I have read many of the public comments, and it's clear that there is orchestrated opposition to this shift in focus, with many respondents cutting and pasting identical messages. Many writers use buzz words like "critical race theory" and invoke the teaching of religious beliefs. What our schools need is more critical thinking, not less, and these standards recognize the complex interactions of different cultures, and they ask students to consider and analyze the many consequences of those interactions. I appreciate the group of educators who worked on this update. It's long overdue.

Thanks for your consideration,
Amy Schroth

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Changes to Social Studies Curriculum

Stan Franklin <stanfranklin99@gmail.com>

Thu 10/7/2021 4:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

As a parent, grandparent and former elementary school teacher, I implore you to please stop the implementation of additional pillars to the Social Studies Curriculum. The addition of these pillars is nothing more than a guise for teaching Critical Race Theory.

Critical Race Theory has Marxist ideologies. Ideologies which promote cultural division, prejudices, and racism. When you categorize people as oppressors and victims for things that happened in the past, you are focusing on problems that at one time were dealt with through legislation. The United States has dealt with racism as early as the 1770's where our forefathers who were born into a culture that allowed slavery, realized that this was wrong, and abolished slavery in 9 of the 13 colonies. The Civil Rights Act of the 1960s did away with segregation. But once again, our society is experiencing segregation, and discrimination. Western Washington University has "blacks only" dormitories. Atlanta GA is segregating second graders by race! This is all because of the Marxist Ideology of destroying a country all in an effort to promote socialism!

CRT is nothing more than a promotion of Marxism. Marxism creates division which causes conflict, which weakens a country, which creates a situation to which the government supposedly is the only answer, which leads to Socialism!

Even now, our Attorney General considers those of us who will fight to defend our children, as domestic terrorists!!!!

Annette Franklin
505-869-6090
2015 Wasmer Circle
Bosque Farms, NM 87068

[EXTERNAL] In favor of proposed new standards

Katie Bruell <ktbruell@gmail.com>

Thu 10/7/2021 5:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Thank you for rethinking our social studies standards to include a more full picture of the true history of our state and country. For too long everything our students learn has been focused on the point of view of white people. I appreciate you working to bring more voices and perspectives into the curriculum in the service of history and truth.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Erick Druva <edruva@montedelsol.org>

Thu 10/7/2021 8:52 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

It is vital to update our history so we can teach more accurately. Otherwise we will repeated history.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Revision

Andra Stradling <andrastradling@gmail.com>

Fri 10/8/2021 5:11 AM

To: Romero, Andres G. <andres.romero@nmlegis.gov>; Soules, William P. <bill.soules@nmlegis.gov>; FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Neville, Steven P. <steven.neville@nmlegis.gov>; alonzo.baldonado@nmlegis.gov <alonzo.baldonado@nmlegis.gov>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Educating children a serious matter.

Should you decide to read the 36 pages of the NMPED state revised curriculum , you may want them to revisit this suggested revised curriculum .

Start with the suggestion that the Constitution be rewritten....

And calling our "Democratic Republic" a Democracy.

I feel a definition Critical Race Theory is imperative in any discussion about CRT and its varied forms in public school.

CRT ignores what Frederick Douglass said of President Abraham Lincoln: Most Americans of all races have "risen above their prejudices," striving to bring American practice into accord with American principles regarding justice.

CRT demeans African Americans by stripping them of all agency, treating them as simply inanimate objects, helpless victims of impersonal forces. It also essentially absolves politicians of bad policy.

CRT is nothing more than a return to 1850s-style racism as espoused by John Calhoun and Chief Justice Roger Taney in his infamous Dred Scott decision.

It is divisive; it fosters racial hatred by trafficking in racial stereotypes, collective guilt, racial segregation and race-based harassment. It rejects Martin Luther King's hope that we should be judged, not by the color of our skin, but by the content of our character.

I say unequivocally! NO! To any form of Critical Race Theory, or whatever name you choose to give it! Teach History, not victimhood.

The establishment of some grand new curriculum that reflects the 109 year history of New Mexicans is a complete travesty in thinking. Making it seem culturally relevant makes it a complete distortion of reality because of attempting to confine it to some simple minded time frame as if nothing existed before, culturally. Before ever embarking on formalizing anything I suggest looking at Mexican history and the impact the Spanish had when they conquered what was at one time New Mexico by reviewing Carl Lawrence's "The Cross and the Sword". Without the relevance of that history the only culture relevance you would have is to the Native American history of our state which way predates it becoming a state.

I understand the desire to come up with some seemingly, socially just curriculum. The negativity in this curriculum cannot tell the whole story of the greatest of nations.

Read the revision. Where are the positives?

Andra Stradling
Flora Vista, NM 87415

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Andrew Butler <updownquark@gmail.com>

Fri 10/8/2021 8:31 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

My name is Andrew Butler. I live in Las Cruces and have 4 children aged 3 to 10. The school-aged ones are currently homeschooled, but we may consider public schooling in the future.

I noticed the article in the Sun News where PED is asking for feedback on revisions to the social studies curriculum. I read through the goals that have been set and I only wanted to say that I heartily approve, and wanted to encourage you to keep these standards.

I anticipate a large amount of negative feedback on some of the new themes, especially "social justice", "diversity", and "divergence from a singular cultural script". I believe that without proper emphasis on these themes, the study of history is worse than useless--it becomes simply a justification and glorification of one culture's history over others.

Of course we must always strive to treat feedback from both sides of an issue as equal before considering the arguments themselves, but I anticipate that much of the feedback you receive will be hate-filled and abusive. I merely encourage you to not back down in the face of hate.

Thank you for your time. I need no reply to this message.

Andrew

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: Proposed replacement of the NM Social Studies curriculum

Maggie Tyndorf <maggie.tyndorf@gmail.com>

Fri 10/8/2021 11:27 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I read the proposed outline for the replacement of our Social Studies curriculum with quite a bit of trepidation. I am the mother of four children, two of them currently in the Carlsbad Municipal Schools system. I have a B.A. in Anthropology and was raised overseas in Africa, South America, Indonesia and India. I was taught to learn the language and respect the culture of everywhere I lived. I also grew up appreciating the United States of America and the unique freedom and rights every of U.S. citizen. I have ancestors that fought in the Revolutionary War and settled in this country on both sides of the Mason Dixon line. My husband is a Polish Canadian green card holder whose grandparents immigrated to North America to escape combined Nazi and Russian atrocities. He has relatives in both the US and Canada. Like many other families, our history is rich, interesting and proudly shared with our children. We teach our children to appreciate everyone on their own merits, regardless of race, religion or culture. This is OUR job as their parents, not the school or the government's job.

This new curriculum is troublesome. It is grooming our children to be activists as soon as they enter Kindergarten. I believe young children are "color blind" and naturally do not look at color or culture. However, this new curriculum forces them to identify differences as young as 4 and 5 years old and lays a groundwork that expands through High School. For a state that is failing its kids in Reading and Math and falls VERY far behind on a National Level, the last thing the Department of Education should be doing is considering revising its Social Studies curriculum to include this very progressive agenda. Our kids have lost a lot of learning with the pandemic; we should be concentrating on recovering that loss and finding new and qualified teachers, not focusing on a new Social Studies curriculum.

That being said, this new curriculum is color coded. Having read through all 122 pages offered, there is sufficient reason to be alarmed at some of the changes. Simply put, they need to "Strikethrough" all the Red (Inquiry) and Orange (Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standards) sections. There is a large amount of Purple that also warrants a closer look. Any section that is marked as "Critical Consciousness and Perspectives" or "Historical Change, Continuity, Context and Reconciliation" needs to be examined thoroughly to make sure these areas are taught factually and objectively with no ideological bias. For example, replace such phrases as "different people" with 'ALL people'. Proposed "Strikethroughs" would include getting rid of the High School level Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies class. This is a class typically offered at a college or university level of education and should remain there as an elective option should a student be interested in following a career that would include this interest.

At any rate, this whole curriculum change is moot if we cannot get our students to High School with higher Math and Reading proficiency levels. New Mexico...HELP OUR CHILDREN please!!!

Sent from Mail for Windows

--

Maggie J. Tyndorf

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC

Shiv Desai <professorsrdesai@gmail.com>

Fri 10/8/2021 3:35 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

<https://www.srca.nm.gov/parts/title06/06.029.0011.html>

The link above is what I will be providing feedback on.

Thank you for the hard work put into this document. I strongly recommend less is more. I also would like to see more Indigenous history in the standards and discussions of sovereignty. There is discussion of the impact of colonization, but I think settler colonialism would be a better idea. You mention the Long Walk but I did not see the mention of Indian Boarding Schools as well as the forced adoption of Native children. One theme should be the different processes of educating and/or forced assimilation of Native children. I also think it is important to point out how Indigenous forms of government influenced the founding government here in US. An example would be the Great Law (Iroquois Nation).

I would like to see a discussion of the structural impact of slavery. How it impacted the laws, economic, political systems, norms and culture even more. You mention Dr. King but there were so many other leaders in the Civil Rights movement. I would love to see Bayard Rustin, Fannie Lou Hamer and others. I would love to see more on student walkouts in Birmingham, LA, and RGV. What were they fighting for and what inspired this call for action.

Finally, I would like to see more discussion on New Mexican's relationship with land.

--

Sincerely,

Shiv

"Education is the most powerful weapon which you can use to change the world."

Nelson Mandela

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

Arleen Standiford <arleen.standiford@gmail.com>

Fri 10/8/2021 6:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a social studies teacher at a middle school in New Mexico. I support the CURRENT New Mexico standards and do not want to throw out the standards we currently have for a new set of standards that have not been thoroughly reviewed by New México's social studies teachers across the state. Please permit me to give you four reasons.

- 1) These "new" standards are a copycat of critical race theory and I do not support revisionist history.
- 2) They are too wordy and too vague. It reminds me of the Common Core (CC) English Standards. At the beginning of the school year, I downloaded and printed both the CC English and Social Studies for my lesson planning and the CC standards used a ridiculous amount of paper while the social studies standards were manageable. More is not always better.
- 3) We are a unique state with a unique heritage that deserves to be told. We don't need a cookie cutter version of a national standard that waters down our rich heritage.
- 4) You have not given social studies and other stake-holders teachers sufficient time and resources to really go over these standards. This smells of a top down distribution and we New Mexicans are better than that. That is not how we do things here in New Mexico.
- 5) The only thing worth salvaging from the "new" standards is the focus on the processes and inquiry; however, this could be summed up in less than one page and added to the current standards.

Please at least table this and ensure that New Mexico social studies teachers are able to get the time we need to go over them. We have been extremely busy with Covid and want to meet to discuss this. Please also make the links easier to access. The online version is very cumbersome to reach and loads very slowly.

Thank you,
Arleen Standiford
Carlsbad

[EXTERNAL] RGF offers comments on PED's critical race theory laden social security standards weeziesdream via PrintFriendly <no-reply@m.printfriendly.org>

Sat 10/9/2021 7:00 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

weeziesdream@gmail.com sent you an article

Keep CRT out of our schools, stop teaching division and start creating unity for our kids and our country.

RGF offers comments on PED's critical race theory laden social security standards

Please see the following comments regarding the Public Education Department's proposed social security curriculum. (Here is a PDF of our comments). See the actual comments below the discussion of HOW to submit your own! PED is NOW accepting public comments and will do so until November 12, 2021 at 5 p.m. (MDT). There will be a public hearing Friday, November 12 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. (MDT) at...

Read More

[EXTERNAL] Opinions on Changes in Social Studies Curriculum

Richard Williams <rtw88220@yahoo.com>

Sat 10/9/2021 7:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning.

We are against changes in the Social Studies Curriculum for New Mexico Schools that would include anything teaching of Critical Race Teaching, CRT, which denigrates teaching of how America was formed, how many of the founding fathers put their lives on the line to stand in defiance of the King of England who wanted Americans to be under his complete control. We need to have a true history of America, not some slanted anti-good feeling about how America was formed. We do not need the public financed school system, in which, we pay taxes to preach hate of America and to make our children feel bad that we are Americans living in this great country. We want our opinion heard and listened to. We do not want this to be another NM Secretary of State meeting in which it was a foregone conclusion, already fixed, to not listen to anyone but to pursue the Democrat agenda and ignore the rest of us citizens of New Mexico who do not want another type of King of England telling us what to do. Again we do not want to see any changes in teaching our children about our great country that we are proud of.

Richard and Emilia Williams

[EXTERNAL] Changes in Social Studies being taught in NM Schools

Richard Williams <rtw88220@yahoo.com>

Sat 10/9/2021 8:24 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; johnsena@state.nm.us <johnsena@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning.

1. What is the rush to force New Mexico Schools to teach Critical Race Theory to be taught to our children? It is anti-American. No what name is used by the Public Education Department, it is being used to teach our children to hate America and to be ashamed of our great history, our leaders that put their lives on the line to defy the King of England and his dictator rulings.
2. Our children should be taught how great America is. If it is so bad according to CRT, why are there so many people trying to come into the United States to get away from dictatorships from around the world?
3. 3 whole minutes to give a person's view at the November meeting. Does that mean you have already made up your minds and this is just window dressing to pretend you listen to us taxpayers who through taxes and bond issues pay and pay so our children will have a good education, not a anti- American, anti-freedom, anti-capitalism, pro-socialist agenda.
4. We are against any changes in teaching of Social Studies in NM Schools and want to know also what your rush is to force the schools and our children to agree with the Democrats plan for a one party system.

Thank you for your time.

Richard and Emilia Williams

[EXTERNAL] Changes in Social Studies teaching, meeting on November 12,

Richard Williams <rtw88220@yahoo.com>

Sat 10/9/2021 8:51 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; johnsena@state.nm.us <johnsena@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning.

You pick November 12 for us to have a 3 minute presentation, when guess what November 11 is Veterans day, Many people will take off Nov.11 on Thursday and take off also Nov 12 to be with family, leave town. Is that why you all picked that day for public comment? Basically so few with show up to your already plan to force CRT into our schools?

What is the rush to have false teaching into our schools? Remember we are the taxpayers who vote for bond issues, higher taxes to have our children taught how to read, write, arithmetic, not Anti-American rhetoric.

3 minutes, will you even listen or is this a foregone conclusion to brainwash our children to hate America, hate capitalism, vote for a one party political system?

We are against any changes to any teaching in our schools that promote hatred of America.

If you really wanted to hear opinions, you would allow for more than 3 minutes and you would not rush to shove this down the taxpayers throats.

Thank you for your time.

Richard and Emilia Williams

[EXTERNAL] Comments to NM PED Proposed Social Studies Standards K-12

Rick R <rreynaud23@gmail.com>

Sat 10/9/2021 9:41 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Soules, William P. <bill.soules@nmlegis.gov>; Sandoval, Katarina, PED <Katarina.Sandoval@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>; Bannerman, Vickie, PED <Vickie.Bannerman@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (120 KB)

6.29.11-NMAC_Social-Studies_Integrated_9.28.21_WebFinal MARKUP RICK.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear NM PED, here are my comments. I have attached a marked-up copy to my email that I hope you can include in the record, but if not here is my Summary:

Begin remarks:

These standards contain history based on a negative view of our Nation. Here's an excerpt-example from the proposed U.S. Anchor History High School standards:

“Evaluating what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States;”

So we don't have a “just” economic system in the U.S.?

The U.S. is and has been the standard of excellence for true Justice in the world, economically and otherwise. The U.S. Constitution, the greatest achievement of mankind, is derided by these historical revisions. This is the basis for my voluminous objections to these revised standards.

My overall recommendation: Scrap this and revert back to the previous Standards. If the standards are to be re-written, then the divisive and utterly non-productive ethnic/identity standards must be dropped. Negative assessments of this nation proclaimed as “matters of fact” must not be tolerated.

V/R

Rick Reynaud, Parent and Concerned Citizen

Las Cruces, NM

End remarks.

Summary of my Marked-up review of the proposed Standards, attached. This is not definitive.

Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. 1 of 6 major strands for each grade level from K to 12. Delete this strand for southern NM (Las Cruces). What if one parent is white and one hispanic? It's about a century too late for NM PED to implement this in Las Cruces. “Ethnic, cultural and identity” is divisive and should be off limits in public education.

Equity/inequity: at least 10 instances. Either define “equity” at each occurrence or delete.

Ally: 3 instances, ally is a divisive political term which means whites who support the nebulous term “equity”, and if you don't support - then you're not an ally.

Reconciliation: 12 times, who reconciles to who, and who decides the terms of the reconciliation?

Questionable Anchor Standards for High School. More than a dozen and not definitive. This is revisionist history that derides our nation, and to what end? Nobody is saying don't teach true history.

Take action: 3 instances. This is partisan rhetoric.

Dear NM PED, here are my comments. I have attached a marked-up copy to my email that I hope you can include in the record, but if not here is my Summary:

Begin remarks:

These standards contain history based on a negative view of our Nation. Here's an excerpt-example from the proposed U.S. Anchor History High School standards:

“Evaluating what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States;”

So we don't have a “just” economic system in the U.S.?

The U.S. is and has been the standard of excellence for true Justice in the world, economically and otherwise. The U.S. Constitution, the greatest achievement of mankind, is derided by these historical revisions. This is the basis for my voluminous objections to these revised standards.

My overall recommendation: Scrap this and revert back to the previous Standards. If the standards are to be re-written, then the divisive and utterly non-productive ethnic/identity standards must be dropped. Negative assessments of this nation proclaimed as “matters of fact” must not be tolerated.

V/R

Rick Reynaud, Parent and Concerned Citizen

Las Cruces, NM

End remarks.

Summary of my Marked-up review of the proposed Standards, Below: This is not definitive.

Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. 1 of 6 major strands for each grade level from K to 12. Delete this strand for southern NM (Las Cruces). What if one parent is white and one hispanic? It's about a century too late for NM PED to implement this in Las Cruces. “Ethnic, cultural and identity” is divisive and should be off limits in public education.

Equity/inequity: at least 10 instances. Either define “equity” at each occurrence or delete.

Ally: 3 instances, ally is a divisive political term which means whites who support the nebulous term “equity”, and if you don't support - then you're not an ally.

Reconciliation: 12 times, who reconciles to who, and who decides the terms of the reconciliation?

Questionable Anchor Standards for High School. More than a dozen and not definitive. This is revisionist history that derides our nation, and to what end? Nobody is saying don't teach true history.

Take action: 3 instances. This is partisan social justice rhetoric.

TITLE 6 PRIMARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION
CHAPTER 29 STANDARDS FOR EXCELLENCE
PART 11 SOCIAL STUDIES

6.29.11.1 ISSUING AGENCY: Public Education Department, hereinafter the department.
[6.29.11.1 NMAC – Rp. 6.29.11.1, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.2 SCOPE: All public schools, state educational institutions and educational programs conducted in state institutions other than New Mexico military institute.
[6.29.11.2 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.2, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.3 STATUTORY AUTHORITY: Sections 9-24-8, 22-2-1, 22-2-2, and 22-2C-3 NMSA 1978.
[6.29.11.3 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.3, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.4 DURATION: Permanent.
[6.29.11.4 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.4, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.5 EFFECTIVE DATE: December 14, 2021, unless a later date is cited at the end of a section.

[6.29.11.5 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.5, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.6 OBJECTIVE: This rule establishes the academic content and performance standards for social studies for grades kindergarten through 12. The social studies standards include six strands: (1) civics, (2) economics, (3) geography, (4) history, (5) ethnic, cultural, and identity standards, and (6) inquiry. The strands are organized by anchor standard, which are the core ideas that establish what students should understand and be able to do, with increasing complexity. Anchor standards consist of performance indicators, which are concise, written descriptions of what students are expected to know and be able to do in a specific grade or course.

[6.29.11.6 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.6, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.7 DEFINITIONS: [RESERVED]

6.29.11.8 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR KINDERGARTEN:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
 - (a) communicating the purpose of rules; and
 - (b) explaining how the rules help people work together.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by:

- (a) identifying the consequences of following and not following rules; and
- (b) identifying authority figures and describing their roles.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by identifying the local, state, and national symbols (e.g. flag, bird, song).

B. Economics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by distinguishing between a basic need (e.g. food, clothing, shelter) and a want.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
 - (a) identifying examples of goods and services; and
 - (b) explaining what scarcity is and how scarcity affects the accessibility of goods and services.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by creating maps of familiar areas (e.g. classroom, school, community).
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:
 - (a) recognizing and identifying signs and symbols around their town and community and indicating location of places, people, and things; and
 - (b) identifying the differences and similarities between a globe and a map and while explaining the purpose of the two.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by explaining why and how people move from place to place within a community.

D. History.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by comparing traditions found in communities over time.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by demonstrating an awareness of community leaders (e.g. teacher, principal, mayor, tribal leaders).

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:
 - (a) sequencing important events in the student's life;
 - (b) identifying how individuals are similar and different;
 - (c) communicating a positive view of themselves and identifying some of their group identities;
 - (d) describing ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not;
 - (e) identifying how their family does things both the same as and different from how other people do things; and

(f) describing their family history, culture, and past to current contributions of people in their main identity groups.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

- (a) recognizing a compelling question; and
- (b) identifying the relationship between compelling and supporting questions.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using examples.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

- (a) taking group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems; and
- (b) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.8 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.8, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.9 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR FIRST GRADE:

A. Civics. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities of a civic life by explaining and providing examples of how people play important roles in society.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by examining choices that families make due to scarcity, and identifying costs associated with these choices;

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:

- (a) identifying examples of a producer and a consumer;
- (b) examining how earning money through work is related to the purchase of goods and services; and

(c) examining decisions that people make about spending and saving money.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representation and reasoning by:

(a) creating geographic representations to identify the location of familiar places and demonstrate how these representations can help us navigate from one place to the next, provide directions, or trace important routes;

(b) identifying the common symbols used on maps for man-made structures and physical features; and

(c) using a variety of maps to locate specific places, and identify major landforms, bodies of water, and other places of significance around the United States.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by explaining how man-made structures are all examples of how people modify the physical environment to meet needs and wants.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by explaining how people interact with their physical environment in ways that may have a positive or a negative effect on natural resources.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by comparing life in New Mexico in the past to life in New Mexico today.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

- (a) comparing fact and opinion in stories and narratives from the past; and
- (b) demonstrating chronological thinking by distinguishing among past, present, and future using family, school, or community events.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by examining and identifying cultural differences within a community.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(a) explaining how groups of people believe different things and live in different and interesting ways; and

(b) explaining how student and individual identities are part of what makes each person unique and special.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by investigating significant events, people, and observances in history, and discussing their effects on local and national communities.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by investigating how people work together to accomplish a common task, and how working together benefits and challenges people.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) explaining why a compelling question is important; and

(b) generating supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining if a source is primary or secondary and distinguishing whether it is mostly fact or opinion.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using examples.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) taking group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems; and

(d) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.9 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.9, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.10 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR SECOND GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:

(a) evaluating how American society has changed through rules and laws; and

(b) understanding the purposes and structures of government (e.g. tribal, local, state, national).

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

(a) assessing how the contributions of diverse individuals have helped develop our national identity; and

(b) examining and comparing the American democratic principles to neighboring countries.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities of a civic life by examining and understanding the qualities of good leadership.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

(a) examining how consumers react to changes in the prices of goods and how this influences economic decision-making and the use of money; and

(b) exploring how communities share resources and services with other communities.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by:

(a) investigating what resources are available in the community, how available resources differ in communities, and what resources are obtained from neighboring communities; and

(b) identifying different types of jobs performed in the community.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representation and reasoning by:

(a) using maps, identifying and locating the United States, Canada, and Mexico as the countries that make up North America; and

(b) identifying and locating the bordering states to New Mexico and understanding that New Mexico is in the southwest.

- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:
 - (a) comparing how man-made structures are all examples of how people modify the physical environment to meet needs and wants; and
 - (b) generating a definition for their region of the United States by identifying unique features.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by listing at least three different waves of migration to the western hemisphere in chronological order.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by describing ways in which individuals and groups use or save natural resources.

D. History.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context and reconciliation by:
 - (a) describing events in North America that illustrate how people from diverse cultural groups attempted to work through conflicts to solve a problem;
 - (b) comparing diverse world communities in terms of members, customs, and traditions to the local community; and
 - (c) demonstrating chronological thinking by distinguishing among years and decades using a timeline of local and national events.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:
 - (a) identifying and comparing the diverse North American cultural groups of the past and today; and
 - (b) evaluating the effects of people, goods, and ideas that diffused from one world community into other world communities and the effects of the people, goods, and ideas on these communities.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:
 - (a) expressing a positive view of themselves without being mean or making other people feel bad; and
 - (b) describing ways people are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by demonstrating respect for the feelings of people who are similar and different from the student.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
 - (a) explaining why a compelling question is important; and
 - (b) generating supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining if a source is primary or secondary and distinguishing whether it is mostly fact or opinion.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
 - (a) taking group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems; and
 - (d) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.10 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.10, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.11 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR THIRD GRADE:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by explaining how the democratic principles motivate people to migrate then and now.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities of a civic life by explaining how to be a responsible and active citizen in a democracy.

B. Economics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by examining the various ways people earn a living to meet their basic needs (e.g. food, clothing, shelter) and how this has changed over time in various world communities.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by investigating who receives the goods that are produced in various world communities.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by:
 - (a) exploring the concepts of surplus and scarcity in relation to resources for various world communities;
 - (b) exploring the basic economic concepts of supply and demand;
 - (c) explaining how supply and demand influence prices and trade;
 - (d) describing how technological developments in transportation and communication influence trade over time;
 - (e) identifying currency, credit, debit, and checks as the basic means of exchange in western society; and
 - (f) comparing currency, credit, debit, and checks in the United States to other world money systems.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representation and reasoning by:
 - (a) creating a model to demonstrate how geographic factors influence where people settle and how some people make adaptations to the environment to make a location more suitable for settlement; and
 - (b) identifying and using the mapping tools of scale, compass rose, grid, symbols, and mental mapping to locate places on globes and maps.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:
 - (a) explaining how physical and cultural characteristics of world regions affect people, and examining geographic features of various global communities that might create a need for migration or immigration using a variety of maps, photos, and other geographic representations; and
 - (b) identifying the components of the Earth's biosystems and their makeup (e.g., air, land, water, plants, animals).
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:
 - (a) evaluating the reasons for migration and immigration and the effects on people, culture, and ideas in world communities;
 - (b) analyzing how human settlement and movement impact diverse groups of people and how the cultural aspects of a region spread beyond its borders; and
 - (c) analyzing the movement of indigenous groups, including the removal and return of Indigenous people throughout New Mexico and the US.

D. History.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context and reconciliation by explaining how world events impact New Mexico and the United States in the past and today.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by using a timeline to analyze connections among historical events, including how human settlement and movement impacted diverse groups of people.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:
 - (a) expressing a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel bad; and
 - (b) comparing and contrasting cultural identity with other people and groups.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by identifying the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

- (a) identifying disciplinary ideas associated with a compelling question; and
 - (b) using supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.
 - (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining the credibility of one source.
 - (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by citing evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.
 - (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.
 - (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
 - (a) identifying challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and
 - (b) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.
- [6.29.11.11 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.11, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.12 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR FOURTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by examining and evaluating the rules, laws, and authorities that keep people safe in New Mexico.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:
 - (a) explaining how democratic principles guide local, state, and sovereign governments; and
 - (b) demonstrating understanding that state symbols, holidays, traditions, and songs represent various cultural heritages, natural treasures, and the democratic values of New Mexico.

B. Economics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by explaining the impact of using natural resources on the local, county, and state economy.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by:
 - (a) explaining how trade and industry in New Mexico is impacted by surrounding economies (e.g. Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Texas); and
 - (b) researching and creating a list of products, goods, and services that New Mexico imports and exports.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by exploring the significance of agriculture and livestock industries in New Mexico.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
 - (a) examining and synthesizing data from at least two types of maps (e.g. physical, topographical, thematic) to support a claim about the regional divisions of New Mexico, and comparing and contrasting its diverse geography;
 - (b) using a variety of maps, investigating and comparing how New Mexico's political boundaries have changed over time;
 - (c) applying geographic tools of title, grid system, legends, symbols, scale and compass rose to construct and interpret maps; and
 - (d) describing and identifying the regions and four provinces that make up New Mexico's land surface.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by describing the different groups of people (e.g. indigenous people, explorers, pioneers) that have settled in New Mexico throughout history and describing their traditions and effects on New Mexico culture.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by exploring how geographic factors influence locations of settlements and use of natural resources (e.g. land, water, minerals, plants, animals) to meet their basic needs.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by describing the interactions between indigenous people and European settlers including agriculture, cultural exchanges, alliances, and conflicts.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by creating a timeline that depicts the events and the changes in New Mexico culture through contact with explorers and settlers.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by explaining why individuals and groups during the same historical period differed in their perspectives toward significant historical events.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

(a) investigating how different groups have influenced the ways that state issues are viewed and resolved; and

(b) examining the changes in governance of New Mexico (e.g. indigenous, Spanish, Mexican, Texan, confederate, United States).

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by demonstrating respectful inquiry about other people's lives and expectations without judgment.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by explaining connections among historical contexts and people's perspectives at the time.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) explaining how a compelling question represents key ideas in the field; and

(b) using supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by citing evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and other relevant details.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) identifying challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and

(b) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.12 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.12, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.13 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR FIFTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by identifying and explaining the structure and function of the three branches government.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by analyzing how different individuals and groups influenced the creation and interpretation of the foundational documents.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

(a) explaining how the principles of the declaration of independence became unifying ideas of American democracy; and

(b) describing how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by evaluating how the bill of rights shaped the rights of United States citizens.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

(a) exploring examples from the western hemisphere to illustrate the role of scarcity historically and in current events;

(b) analyzing how economic success is defined differently by various communities in the United States (e.g. past, present, future); and

(c) identifying and comparing the major natural resources of the United States, Canada, Mexico, and the Caribbean or South American countries, and determining the major industries of those countries in relation to available resources.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by examining products that are imported and exported into markets within the United States based on demand for these products, noting how this affects the United States economy.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:

(a) demonstrating how physical maps reflect the varied climate zones, land forms, bodies of water, and natural resources of the western hemisphere;

(b) using maps and globes, identifying the regions within the western hemisphere and locating major physical features within each region;

(c) demonstrating how the states are organized, including time zones and the regions of the United States; and

(d) using geographic and place-based vocabulary to communicate locations and navigate from one place to another.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by using a map, identifying and locating the 50 states in the United States, and knowing the capitals of each state along with the surrounding United States territories.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by examining how the physical environment influences human population distribution and land use.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by examining history from the perspective of the participants.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
(a) creating and using a chronological sequence of related events and timelines to organize and analyze cause and effect relationships; and

(b) using primary and secondary sources to acquire historical information.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) analyzing the causes of the American revolution and the effects individuals and groups had on the conflict; and

(b) analyzing the causes of the civil war and the effects individuals and groups had on the conflict.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:

(a) explaining the connections among historical contexts and people's perspectives during major historical events in the U.S.; and

(b) identifying the beliefs, experiences, perspectives, and values that form points of view about civic issues.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(1) demonstrating knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups; and

(2) explaining how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) identifying the disciplinary concepts and ideas associated with a compelling question; and

(b) using supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining the credibility of multiple sources.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by identifying evidence that draws information from multiple perspectives and sources in response to a compelling question.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions supported by reasoning and evidence.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) identifying challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and

(b) using a range of consensus-building and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in the classroom.

[6.29.11.13 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.13, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.14 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR SIXTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:

(a) identifying the social structures of early humans;

(b) describing cultural and political structures in classical eastern societies;

(c) describing cultural and political structures in classical western societies; and

(d) comparing and contrasting classical forms of government and political structure to the current United States government and political structure.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by identifying rights and responsibilities of citizens and non-citizens in civic participation within the governmental systems of a monarchy, democracy, republic, and oligarchy.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

(a) describing the distribution of resources among classes in the feudal hierarchy of European and Asian societies;

(b) describing how trade networks and the transfer of goods and ideas linked post-classical societies; and

(c) explaining the role of trade in the development and growth of societies.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by explaining how the interaction between producers and consumers in the trade networks satisfied economic wants and needs.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by analyzing the economic impact that surpluses of food and goods have on the growth of civilizations.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:

(a) creating and using maps, globes, and graphs to gather, analyze, and report geographic information;

(b) comparing environmental and geographic attributes of locations of earliest human settlements;

(c) using maps to represent the movement of key religions and philosophies over time; and

(d) using maps to explain how encounters and exchanges linked the world.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:

(a) identifying how natural forces shape earth's environments and regions;

(b) comparing cultural and technological innovations of one Mesoamerican and one South American civilization; and

(c) comparing cultural, political, and religious characteristics of early river valley civilizations.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by explaining the reasons for the expansion of trade routes and territories in Sub-Saharan regions.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) describing how the local environment impacts culture and technology;

(b) describing how the people impact the local environment; and

(c) comparing the transportation innovations made to travel over challenging routes and establishing trade routes.

D. History.

- and reconciliation by:
- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:
 - (a) evaluating the lasting impact of philosophy, art, science, and technology of classical Greece, Rome, India, and China;
 - (b) evaluating the factors that allowed classical civilizations to thrive;
 - (c) analyzing the significance of innovations (e.g. scientific, mathematical, technological) in Middle Eastern and Asian societies;
 - (d) explaining how religion and philosophy shaped European, Asian, and Middle Eastern societies during the post-classical period; and
 - (e) examining instances of conflict, oppression, human rights violations, and genocide in medieval times, and responses to these violations.
 - (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
 - (a) analyzing the impact that the agricultural revolution had on hunter-gatherers and nomadic peoples;
 - (b) identifying the political and social issues that led to the development of new philosophies during the classical period;
 - (c) comparing strategies used by classical civilizations to maintain their empires;
 - (d) comparing causes of decline in Roman, Han, and Gupta empires;
 - (e) explaining what led to the emergence of European feudalism; and
 - (f) analyzing social, political, and economic effects of the black death on Europe.
 - (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by examining and explaining the perspectives and encounters between Christians, Muslims, and Jews impacted individuals and society.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:
 - (a) identifying how differences and similarities between diverse groups impact perspectives; and
 - (b) describing the interactions of religious and philosophical perspectives and explaining their impact on European, Asian, and Middle Eastern societies during the classical period.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by demonstrating relationships between personal events and historical events.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by explaining how the treatment of people, past and present, shaped group identities and cultures.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
 - (a) distinguishing primary and secondary sources by correctly identifying the author, type of document, and date of publication of the text in relation to the historical event described in the text;
 - (b) categorizing and sequencing significant people, places, events, and ideas using both chronological and conceptual graphic organizers;
 - (c) categorizing questions as compelling (e.g. main topic) or supporting questions; and
 - (d) posing self-generated relevant questions to be answered by historical inquiry that allow for multiple avenues of exploration.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
 - (a) identifying where and how to locate sources to best answer a research question;
 - (b) distinguishing among fact, opinion, and reasoned judgment in a source and identifying the author's or authors' perspectives and possible biases;
 - (c) identifying inherent biases in maps; and
 - (d) evaluating the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) formulating a claim based on evidence from primary and secondary sources in response to a question;
 - (b) supporting a claim using a variety of sources and perspectives;

- sources; and
- (c) citing specific textual evidence to support analysis of primary and secondary
- view on a certain topic.
- (d) using primary and secondary sources to analyze conflicting and diverse points of
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing
- conclusions by:
- (a) using applicable presentation technology to communicate research findings or
- other significant information; and
- (b) creating maps, charts, infographics, or digital media that communicate research
- findings or other significant information.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
- (a) describing the many facets of student identity, including family history and
- culture, and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified
- affinity groups;
- (b) identifying their family and personal cultural identity, determining how they
- want to present themselves to the world, and brainstorming how to address negative perceptions; and
- (c) explaining the challenges and opportunities people face when taking action to
- address problems.

[6.29.11.14 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.14, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.15 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR SEVENTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:
 - (a) explaining the role of political decision-making process at the tribal, state, and
 - local levels of government, including voting, upholding the constitution, petitioning public officials, and analyzing
 - issues;
 - (b) describing the relationships of tribal, state, and local governments with the
 - national government under the federal system, including tribal sovereignty, state constitutions, three branches of
 - government, checks and balances, and the legislative process;
 - (c) comparing and contrasting global and historical government systems to the
 - United States federal system; and
 - (d) examining how conflict over land, culture, and social class led to Mexican
 - independence from Spain.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
 - (a) using figurative language to describe the relationship between a nation-state and
 - its colonies;
 - (b) hypothesizing how the policies of the Spanish monarchy in New Spain
 - interacted with other societies in the region; and
 - (c) evaluating New Mexico's transition into a United States territorial government
 - from the perspectives of the various groups residing in the territory at the time.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic
- principles by:
 - (a) describing the role of citizens in ensuring the long-term survival of their
 - community, including cooperation, obligations, rights, and responsibilities; and
 - (b) analyzing United States policies on expansion into the southwest, including how
 - they reflected United States civic ideals of the time and conflicted with existing inhabitants of the region.

B. Economics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:
 - (a) explaining how tribal, state, and local government agencies work to sustain
 - resources in New Mexico;
 - (b) discussing New Mexico's economic limitations, barriers to development, and
 - successes;
 - (c) examining the pros and cons of economic development in New Mexico;
 - (d) demonstrating how early humans compete and cooperate to gather and use
 - resources;

- (e) demonstrating the impact of competition or cooperation as people gather and use resources;
 - (f) using primary and secondary sources to explain the economic motivation of Spaniards as they enter the lands of and interact with the peoples of the Americas;
 - (g) using primary sources to identify formal and informal actions that impacted local, tribal, and Spanish empirical economies during the Spanish colonial period; and
 - (h) identifying and summarizing the relationship between specialization and interdependence.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding economic systems and models by:
- (a) identifying activities that had an impact on territorial and indigenous economies; and
 - (b) investigating the correlation between the territorial and indigenous economies considering how they are impacted by federal policies.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
- (a) summarizing the relationship between specialization and interdependence;
 - (b) explaining barriers to trade and how those barriers influence trade among individual people and cultural groups;
 - (c) using and creating charts, graphs, and infographics to demonstrate connections between the economy of New Mexico and Mexico during the Mexican period;
 - (d) investigating the use of trade routes and systems to analyze the economic impact they had on New Mexico and those who traded with New Mexicans; and
 - (e) using and creating charts, graphs, and infographics to demonstrate the economy of territorial New Mexico from various perspectives, such as wealthy or poor people, or immigrant or indigenous people.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the global economy by using and creating charts, graphs, and infographics to demonstrate connections between the economy of Spain and those of indigenous people.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
- (a) constructing maps of New Mexico based on physical and cultural features using technology resources;
 - (b) explaining the physical and human characteristics of New Mexico, and using this knowledge to define the southwest region of the United States;
 - (c) selecting a province of New Mexico and researching its distinguishing characteristics;
 - (d) using paper and digital maps to ask and answer geographical questions about New Mexico and the southwest region;
 - (e) analyzing maps and charts from the Spanish colonial period to understand El Camino Real as a significant corridor for movement of people, goods, and ideas;
 - (f) comparing various maps or geographical data to describe how the movement of people influenced the division and control of resources; and
 - (g) analyzing maps and charts from the early American territorial period to explain how differing perceptions of places, people, and resources have affected events and conditions of the past.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:
- (a) analyzing patterns of migration of early people as they settled across New Mexico and the southwest region;
 - (b) analyzing maps and charts about the age of exploration to understand the movement of people, goods, and ideas across the world;
 - (c) explaining the role of human movement in shaping societies in New Mexico in the past and present;
 - (d) analyzing maps and charts from the western expansion period to understand interactions between multiple cultural groups;
 - (e) analyzing land use patterns of Anglo-Americans during the American westward expansion period; and past and present.

(f) explaining examples of cultural diffusion into and out of New Mexico from the

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) describing factors affecting location of human activities, including land-use patterns for local, regional, and state communities;

(b) describing how environmental events affect human activities and resources;

(c) analyzing land use patterns of early humans in New Mexico and the southwest region;

(d) explaining how building technologies are designed to respond to the constraints and freedoms of the environment;

(e) explaining how early people adapted to the environment to develop sustainable agricultural practices;

(f) analyzing land use patterns of ancestral Pueblo, Mogollon, and Athabaskan peoples;

(g) connecting cultural adaptations of the Pueblo and Diné people to New Mexicans today;

(h) interpreting the cultural differences between Spaniards and indigenous peoples;

(i) explaining how differing perceptions of places, people, and resources affected events and conditions in New Mexico during the Spanish colonial period;

(j) evaluating practices of land usage and ownership between indigenous peoples and Spaniards; and

(k) analyzing land use patterns of Americans during the territorial period in New Mexico.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) making connections between the past and modern events from the local, territorial, state, or sovereign nations' perspective and predict how the future may be impacted;

(b) explaining the importance of artifacts and oral histories in understanding how prehistoric people lived;

(c) describing the technical limitations of historians and archaeologists studying the distant past;

(d) identifying the housing and religious structures of both the Navajo and Apache;

(e) comparing and contrasting Athabascan technology, agricultural practices, and settlement patterns with those of the Pueblos;

(f) describing the interactions between the Spaniards and indigenous peoples;

(g) comparing and contrasting the revolts and resistance movements under Spanish rule;

(h) analyzing primary and secondary sources to explain what impact Mexican independence had on the area that would become New Mexico;

(i) generating an evidence-based argument that demonstrates how troubles between Texas and the government of Mexico impacted New Mexico;

(j) supporting a claim about the intent of the United States in its westward expansion;

(k) evaluating the significance of short- and long-range trails throughout the lands gained in the Mexican cession; and

(l) describing how cultures were challenged by the arrival of groups to New Mexico.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by identifying the causes and consequences that gave rise to United States government policies impacting the territory of New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) explaining the use of artifacts in dating and understanding the lives of prehistoric peoples;

- (b) describing the similarities and differences between nomadic and semi-nomadic lifestyles;
 - (c) discussing the importance of resource shortages on the lifestyles of the Mogollon and ancestral Pueblos;
 - (d) creating research questions about art or architecture of the Mogollon or the Pueblo ancestors;
 - (e) creating a model of Mogollon and Pueblo art or architecture;
 - (f) using primary and secondary sources to explain the political and religious motivations of Spaniards as they encounter the land and peoples of the Americas;
 - (g) comparing the patterns of exploration, destruction, and occupation of the Americas by Spaniards;
 - (h) citing textual evidence to interpret the factors that led to resistance and rebellion in Mexico during this time, and debate the aftermath;
 - (i) comparing historians' interpretations of the reasons for the Texas-Santa Fe expedition;
 - (j) categorizing causes and consequences of the United States military invasion of Mexico; and
 - (k) comparing and contrasting primary and secondary sources in conjunction with modern-era events to explore the impact of land ownership throughout New Mexico history.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspective by:
- (a) Discussing, debating, or holding academic conversations about both positive and negative evidence of Spanish influence in New Mexico today; and
 - (b) using a variety of sources to contextualize and explain the impact of localized conflicts and other events throughout New Mexico.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

- (1) analyzing how groups maintain their cultural heritage and how we see this heritage through the symbols, traditions, and culture of New Mexico;
- (2) defining and explaining the present demographics of New Mexico;
- (3) evaluating how society's responses to different social identities lead to access or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including education, healthcare, government, and industry;
- (4) identifying the key figures that have contributed to an individual culture and what those individuals accomplished;
- (5) describing the relationship between the cultural heritage of key figures and their personal identity;
- (6) describing what the student wants the world to see when their culture is on display and how to address negative perceptions;
- (7) demonstrating how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures;
- (8) brainstorming ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices;
- (9) describing key figures that have made significant contributions to an individual culture;
- (10) exploring personal, familial, and societal cultures in the modern day;
- (11) discussing how individuals want to be perceived when their culture is on display, and conclude how to address stereotypes;
- (12) using primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impacts of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups;
- (13) identifying how stereotypes influence social perspectives about members of a group;
- (14) developing a claim about the extent to which identity can be modified by personal choice or external forces; and
- (15) identifying, exploring, and describing the traditions, rites, and norms of the groups to which the student identifies as belonging; and explain how these traditions, rights, and norms may have changed over time.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
- (a) developing compelling (e.g. big idea) questions about a relevant topic of interest; and
 - (b) creating supporting questions from credible sources to expand upon the compelling question.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
- (a) identifying, locating, and gathering reliable and relevant primary and secondary sources from a variety of media, such as print, digital, multimedia, artifacts, and oral traditions;
 - (b) evaluating primary and secondary sources for fact, opinion, author's bias, perspective of the creator, and relevance to the topic;
 - (c) analyzing various forms of media to identify polarizing language, logical fallacy, and reasonable judgment; and
 - (d) using a coherent system or structure to evaluate the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
- (a) using primary and secondary sources to develop an argument and cite specific textual evidence to support the claim; and
 - (b) making connections between current events, historical materials, and personal experience.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
- (a) presenting student-developed texts communicating thinking and understanding, including written text, oral presentation, visual representation, and multimedia; and
 - (b) engaging in academic discussions analyzing multiple viewpoints on public issues.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding taking informed action by:
- (a) examining the relationship between stereotypes, bias, and group identity;
 - (b) exploring opportunities to be an ally and describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally; and
 - (c) engaging in positive civic behaviors to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and communities.

[6.29.11.15 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.15, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.16 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR EIGHTH GRADE:
A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:
- (a) examining how challenges the government faced as a result of the articles of confederation resolved at the constitutional convention;
 - (b) making a claim to evaluate how individuals and groups addressed specific problems at various levels to form a new republic; and
 - (c) generating research questions about the nature of civil wars in general, and the role of border states or territories in the United States civil war specifically.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
- (a) identifying policies of this era that define the relationship between federal, state, and tribal governments through treaties, court decisions, and land acquisition statutes;
 - (b) discussing the impact of significant legislation and judicial precedents in formally perpetuating systemic oppression during the reconstruction era; and
 - (c) evaluating the impact of individuals and reform movements on the struggle for greater civil rights and liberties throughout early United States history.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:
- (a) identifying parallels in language or intent (i.e. construct or content) between enlightenment philosophies and the ideas expressed in the declaration of independence; and
 - (b) citing specific examples of precedents established in the early republic that impact American lives today.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by investigating the causes and effects of diverse ideologies on politics, society, and culture that are associated with immigration and migration.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:
(a) using maps and other primary sources to analyze the economic specializations of the 13 colonies; and
(b) identifying and explaining the economic, social, and cultural differences between the north and the south.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by:
(a) comparing and contrasting the efforts of the American and British governments to gain the services of African Americans during the American revolutionary war;
(b) evaluating the incentives for supporting the British or American side from the perspective of enslaved and free African Americans before and during the American revolution; and
(c) analyzing the benefits and challenges associated with rapidly growing urban areas as a result of industrialization.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by drawing diagrams or making models to illustrate significant contemporary economic theories and their connection to the European colonization of the western hemisphere.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
(a) summarizing a significant economic warfare initiative of the civil war through creative expression; and
(b) explaining how union army strategies and other socio-economic changes at the end of the civil war led to an economic depression in the southeast United States.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
(a) using digital literacy to research and create a presentation about a specific sovereign tribal nation or indigenous peoples group of North America through the five themes of geography: location, place, movement, human-environment interaction, and region;
(b) identifying the major rivers, mountain ranges, and climatic regions of North America within the lands now known as the United States, Canada, the Caribbean, and Mexico;
(c) synthesizing information from two or more different types of maps to support a claim about the global context of colonization;
(d) using population, topographical, political maps, and supporting texts, to generate questions about why the proclamation line of 1763 was established; and
(e) developing a claim about how opinions regarding the proclamation line of 1763 might have varied depending on an individual's occupation and geographic location.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:
(a) giving specific examples to illustrate how one indigenous culture or many indigenous cultures in one region have been shaped by their environment and natural resources available to them;
(b) defining a region by identifying its human and physical features; and
(c) using a topographic or climate map to create a geographic argument about how economic specialization developed in the 13 colonies based on natural resource availability.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:
(a) describing the causes of exploration and expansion into the Americas, by the Europeans during the 15th century;
(b) identifying immigration and emigration factors that motivated groups to move to and within North America through the lens of the 13 colonies and the movement of people there; and
(c) identifying immigration and emigration factors that motivated groups to move to and within the United States during time periods of mass immigration.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:
(a) explaining how human activities and physical processes influence change in ecosystems;

(b) engaging in academic discussion around how the ideas and belief systems related to land and resource use impacted the experiences of indigenous peoples and colonizers; and

(c) describing a human-created environmental concern related to western expansion, including different contemporary perspectives and other historical context from this period.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) identifying key explorers, places, and ideas from major European nations of the 15th century, and be able to describe their accomplishments;

(b) critically reading the bill of rights and supporting texts to determine which narratives were excluded from the original document; and use text evidence from the bill of rights and supporting texts to support a student-developed argument by citing specific evidence to track whose rights were added over time;

(c) comparing and contrasting indigenous peoples' assimilation story with later immigrants' stories;

(d) analyzing the development of the women's suffrage movement over time and its legacy; and

(e) making personal connections to immigration stories and experiences in the past and present.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:

(a) using evidence from primary and secondary sources to compare and contrast the impacts of European colonization on indigenous populations;

(b) evaluating the effectiveness of Native American alliances during and after the American revolutionary war as a tool to support tribal sovereignty;

(c) using primary and secondary sources to evaluate an instructor-generated claim about the significance of the seven years' war (French and Indian war);

(d) synthesizing text and non-text evidence to persuasively express a perspective on the events leading to the American revolution;

(e) analyzing the motivations and impacts of western expansion and the settlement of the United States;

(f) using graphic organizers to illustrate the causes and effects of the Mexican American war and its consequences on residents living in the "new" United States territories;

(g) using maps and other primary sources, such as the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, to examine determination of geophysical and geopolitical boundaries between the United States and Mexico;

(h) using text evidence to support a claim about how conflicts over slavery led the north and south to war;

(i) generating research questions, brainstorming sources, and gathering evidence to evaluate a claim about the significance of the battle of Glorieta Pass in the western campaign of the American civil war, also known as "la guerra civil Estadounidense"; and

(j) using examples to support an argument about the importance of science and technology during the civil war period.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) drawing a diagram or making a model to illustrate a non-text method an indigenous person or group of indigenous people have employed to record and preserve their history; and

(b) comparing and contrasting the causes, demographics, and results of the American revolution with those of later revolutions inspired by the American revolution.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspective by:

(a) supporting a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of indigenous peoples of North America, and indigenous peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems;

(b) discussing the interactions and exchanges of resources, ideas, arts, and culture between and among different civilizations in the colonial period;

(c) describing why different people may have different perspectives of the same historical event; multiple interpretations should be considered to avoid historical linearity and inevitability; and

(d) examining both sides in debate or academic discussion of politics in response to immigration.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

(a) evaluating the efficacy of formal United States policies of expansion, their effects on sovereign tribal nations' ability to self-govern, and indigenous resistance efforts to preserve tribal sovereignty;

(b) using primary and secondary sources to examine how enslaved people adapted within and resisted their captivity;

(c) describing how the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacist organizations in the United States arose with the intention of maintaining the oppression of specific groups through informal institutions; and

(d) using data to describe demographic shifts as a consequence of the civil war and reconstruction.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by examining history from the perspective of the participants by presenting an original historical fiction piece to profile an immigrant's experience, including the impact of anti-immigrant policies.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by:

(a) developing research questions about the role of religion in the 13 colonies and its impact on nascent American identity, also known as "identidad Estadounidense," and hypothesize how gender roles were impacted by the role of religion in the 13 colonies;

(b) using primary source texts and artifacts as evidence to describe daily life in the 13 colonies by featuring individuals with diverse identities and different perspectives;

(c) generating historically relevant questions and hypothesize sources needed to make an argument about diverse individuals' ability to participate in the war effort for either side;

(d) supporting a claim about the influence of diverse ideologies on politics, society, and culture in early United States history;

(e) describing immigrant and emigrant groups according to gender composition and developing a claim regarding the impact that gender proportionality or disproportionality had on immigrant or emigrant community's culture;

(f) identifying and correcting misconceptions about the emancipation proclamation;

(g) using primary and secondary sources to make an argument about the impact of the western campaign on indigenous peoples; and

(h) using an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by:

(a) analyzing a variety of art media to create an argument about the development of American national identity; and

(b) developing a claim to illustrate how an event of the sectionalism and reform era helps modern students understand current issues and events.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) developing compelling (e.g. big idea) questions about a relevant topic of interest; and

(b) creating supporting questions from credible sources to expand upon the compelling question.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) identifying, locating, and gathering reliable and relevant primary and secondary sources from a variety of media, such as print, digital, multimedia, artifacts, and oral traditions;

(b) evaluating primary and secondary sources for the author's bias, perspective of the creator, and relevance to the topic;

(c) identifying inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory; and

- (d) using a coherent system or structure to evaluate the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
- (a) categorizing and sequencing significant people, places, events, and ideas in history using both chronological and conceptual graphic organizers;
 - (b) formulating a claim based on evidence from primary and secondary sources in response to a question;
 - (c) citing specific textual evidence to support analysis of primary and secondary sources;
 - (d) using primary and secondary sources to analyze conflicting and diverse points of views on a certain topic;
 - (e) making connections between current events, historical materials, and personal experience; and
 - (f) examining how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity, both institutionally and informally.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
- (a) engaging in discussion, debate, or academic conversation analyzing multiple viewpoints on public issues;
 - (b) creating maps, charts, infographics, or other visual media that communicate research findings or other significant information digitally or on paper;
 - (c) developing informational texts, including analyses of historical and current events;
 - (d) creating historical fiction texts that accurately portray historical people, places, events, and ideologies of the time to examine history from the perspective of the participants;
 - (e) using applicable presentation technology to communicate research findings or other significant information; and
 - (f) conducting a research project to answer a self-generated question of historical significance, and applying problem-solving skills for historical research, to include: use of primary and secondary sources; sequencing, collecting, interpreting, and applying information; gathering and validating materials that present a variety of perspectives; documenting sources in a structured, systematic way; communicating findings in a medium of the student's choice.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
- (a) describing the many facets of their identity, including family history and culture, and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups;
 - (b) identifying facets of personal identity, determining how the student wants to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorming how to address negative perceptions.
 - (c) describing ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally and engaging in positive civic behaviors in classrooms, schools, and the broader community;
 - (d) explaining the challenges and opportunities people face when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and
 - (e) synthesizing historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action toward mending, healing, and transforming the future.
- [6.29.11.16 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.16, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.17 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL CIVICS:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:
- (a) distinguishing the powers and responsibilities of local, state, indigenous, national, and international civic and political institutions;
 - (b) developing claims about the purpose, processes, strengths, and weaknesses of the United States government;

- (c) evaluating efforts to adapt and redesign the United States constitution and political institutions over time;
- (d) analyzing the role of groups without formal decision-making power in influencing change in the United States government;
- (e) evaluating multiple sources and cite evidence investigating the relationships between equality, equity, justice, freedom, and order in American constitutional democracy;
- (f) investigating relationships among governments, civil societies, and economic markets;
- (g) distinguishing historical and current types and systems of government in the United States and abroad.
- (h) using data and evidence from multiple perspectives related to federal policy toward indigenous groups to develop an understanding of indigenous and United States government relations over time;
- (i) evaluating the way America’s founding principles and constitutional structures have influenced initiatives and revisions to foreign policy over time; and
- (j) researching multiple sources to think critically about how the United States should conduct itself in international relations.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:

- (a) evaluating procedures for making governmental decisions at the local, state, national, and international levels in terms of the civic purposes achieved;
- (b) evaluating sources to determine how people use and challenge local, state, national, and international laws, to address a variety of public issues;
- (c) evaluating public policies in terms of intended and unintended outcomes and related consequences;
- (d) analyzing historical, contemporary, and emerging means of changing societies, promoting the common good and protecting rights;
- (e) evaluating the United States justice system over time and its impacts on policy, society, economics, and individual rights;
- (f) explaining the unique features and processes of New Mexico’s constitution;
- (g) evaluating the contributions of New Mexico’s diverse populations to its governmental structure and outcomes; and
- (h) investigating challenges and opportunities within and between different government entities in New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

- (a) analyzing the impact and the appropriate roles of personal interests and perspectives on the application of civic virtues, democratic principles, constitutional rights, and human rights;
- (b) analyzing civic virtues and principles, and the role of the people in creating good governance at various levels;
- (c) applying civic dispositions and democratic principles when working with others;
- (d) analyzing founding documents and their impact on national unity over time;
- (e) evaluating the tensions between personal interests, different cultural groups, and civic responsibilities or the common good overtime.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by:

- (a) participating in civil discourse to promote greater understanding around historical, contemporary, and future opportunities and obstacles;
- (b) using historical data and evidence related to various actors’ interests and motivations to determine their influence on contemporary issues;
- (c) evaluating how fundamental American principles have been interpreted over time and how they currently shape policy debates;
- (d) developing strategies for evaluating multiple perspectives about current events, and policy issues;
- (e) analyzing historic inequalities and evaluating proposed solutions to correct them;

(f) applying an effective questioning strategy to evaluate sources intended to inform the public, and consider the effects of choices made by media organizations, including internet social platforms, on elections and social movements;

(g) evaluating sources and determining potential bias in the media and how that impacts government decision-making;

(h) evaluating the effects of diverse ideologies and the process of political socialization on oneself and society;

(i) analyzing rights and obligations of citizens in the United States;

(j) critiquing leadership strategies through past and present examples of change-makers;

(k) planning and demonstrating some ways in which an active citizen can effect change in the community, state, nation, or world;

(l) evaluating citizens' and institutions' effectiveness in addressing social and political problems at the local, state, indigenous, national, or international government; and

(m) taking informed action to improve the student's community.

B. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and

(b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

(b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

(a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and

(b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

(a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;

(b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.17 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.17, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.18 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL ECONOMICS:

A. High school economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

- (a) applying understanding of economic concepts and systems to analyze decision-making and the interactions between consumers, businesses, governments, and societies;
- (b) gathering and evaluating sources to explain the relationship between economic decisions and environmental consequences;
- (c) using cost-benefit analysis or marginal analysis to evaluate an economic issue;
- (d) evaluating how economic principles influence choices and can produce varied outcomes for different individuals or groups;
- (e) explaining how and why people make choices to improve their economic well-being;
- (f) evaluating the market value of income earned through wages and other activities associated with saving and investing;
- (g) comparing the costs and benefits of saving, using credit, or making certain types of financial investments; and
- (h) evaluating how and why individuals choose to accept risk, reduce risk, or transfer risk to others.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by:
- (a) analyzing the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services;
- (b) evaluating economic theories for their compatibility with democracy;
- (c) comparing the advantages and disadvantages of major economic systems found around the world;
- (d) critiquing inequalities that exist in economic systems;
- (e) using economic data to evaluate the positive and negative aspects of American capitalism in relation to other economic systems;
- (f) analyzing how national and global economic trends and policies impact the state and local economies in New Mexico;
- (g) critiquing the impact of globalization on New Mexico and its citizens;
- (h) evaluating the impact of environmental externalities on New Mexican communities; and
- (i) evaluating opportunities for economic diversification that can significantly impact state and local conditions.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
- (a) explaining how buyers and sellers interact to create markets and market structures;
- (b) evaluating how a variety of factors and conditions in a market determine price and the allocation of scarce goods and resources;
- (c) evaluating the role played by competition in the market;
- (d) evaluating the role of financial institutions in a market economy;
- (e) analyzing the role of money in the economy;
- (f) critiquing specific government policies or regulations initiated to improve market outcomes and the consequences, intended and unintended, experienced by individuals, businesses, communities, and states;
- (g) generating possible explanations for a government role in markets when market inefficiencies exist;
- (h) evaluating the causes and implications of market failures;
- (i) explaining how governments establish the rules and institutions in which markets operate at the local, state, tribal, national, and international levels;
- (j) using economic indicators and data to analyze the health of the national economy in relation to other countries;
- (k) evaluating how fiscal and monetary policy choices have economic consequences for different stakeholders in a variety of economic conditions;
- (l) evaluating foreign and domestic issues related to United States economic growth overtime; and
- (m) explaining the effect of advancements in technology and training on economic growth and standards of living.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by:

- (a) explaining how current globalization trends and policies affect economic growth, labor, markets, rights of citizens, the environment, and resource and income distribution in different nations;
- (b) explaining how economic conditions and policies in one nation increasingly affect economic conditions and policies in other nations;
- (c) evaluating how geography, demographics, industry structure, and the rules of economic institutions influence a nation's economic development;
- (d) analyzing why a country might participate in global trade;
- (e) connecting how trade agreements between nations have short- and long-term effects; and
- (f) constructing an argument about how global interdependence impacts individuals, institutions, or societies based on documented evidence.

B. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
 - (a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and
 - (b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
 - (a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and
 - (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
 - (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
 - (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
 - (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;
 - (c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and
 - (d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
 - (a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and
 - (b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.18 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.18, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.19 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL GEOGRAPHY:

A. High school geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
 - (a) analyzing and evaluating the characteristics, purposes, and uses of geographic tools, knowledge, and skills;
 - (b) creating maps to display and explain the spatial patterns of culture and environment;

political systems;
time; and present to make informed decisions.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and religion by:

(a) analyzing and explaining the reciprocal relationship between physical and geographical locations, and the patterns and processes humans create within them;
(b) explaining and evaluating the process of place-making and the development of place-based identity; and
(c) identifying, defining, and explaining the distinguishing features of formal, functional, and perceptual regions.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:

(a) identifying, evaluating, and explaining the causes, characteristics, and impact of human movement (migration, immigration, emigration) and settlement patterns at the local, national, and global scale;

(b) identifying, evaluating, and explaining the causes, characteristics, and impact of diffusion: the spread of ideas, beliefs, cultural practices, traits, language, artifacts, methods, technologies, and diseases across space and over time;

(c) describing, analyzing, and comparing how human systems, perceptions, and identities shape places and regions over time;

(d) analyzing and predicting how location, place, and region impact the evolution of human perspectives and identities;

(e) identifying, evaluating, and predicting how particular historical events and developments shape human processes and systems in a given place or region over time; and

(f) predicting future social, political, economic, cultural, spiritual, and environmental opportunities, and obstacles associated with movement, population, decision-making, and perspectives in a given place or region.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) making reasoned ethical judgements about people, places, events, phenomena, ideas, or developments, and determining appropriate ways to respond;

(b) analyzing shifting United States governmental environmental policies and regulations in response to changing human-environment interactions;

(c) evaluating the consequences of human-made and natural catastrophes on global trade, politics, and human migration;

(d) assessing the reciprocal relationships between physical environment and culture within local, national, and global scales;

(e) evaluating how economic globalization and the scarcity of resources contribute to conflict and cooperation within and among countries;

(f) analyzing how the forces of cooperation and conflict within and among people, nations, and empires influence the division and control earth's surface and resources; and

(g) assessing how social, economic, political, and environmental developments at global, national, regional, or local levels affect the sustainability of modern and traditional cultures.

B. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and
(b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

- (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.
 - (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
 - (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.
 - (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
 - (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
 - (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;
 - (c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and
 - (d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.
 - (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
 - (a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and
 - (b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.
- [6.29.11.19 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.19, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.20 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL NEW MEXICO HISTORY:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by comparing and contrasting the similarities and differences between the three branches of the federal and state governments.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
 - (a) analyzing the requirements for statehood; and
 - (b) debating whether or not New Mexico's constitution supports bilingualism.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by defining sovereignty, and distinguishing ways in which the different Native American tribes in New Mexico conduct governmental affairs.

B. Economics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:
 - (a) discussing the sequence of events that led to the great depression and the implementation of new deal programs in New Mexico;
 - (b) illustrating the ways in which the movie and technology industries contribute to New Mexico's economy;
 - (c) connecting the activities of the federal government in the state of New Mexico during the cold war and World War II, to New Mexico's current economy; and
 - (d) identifying the main sources of income for tribes.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by identifying what makes New Mexico a good location for the space industry.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by summarizing how the United States and Soviet Union emerged from World War II as superpowers, and articulating the difference between communism and capitalism.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:
 - (a) identifying the military bases and weapons testing sites in New Mexico; and

(b) giving examples of the different types of sites and activities that would make people want to tour aspects of New Mexico.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by summarizing the impacts that artists have had on New Mexico, and why so many artists choose to live in New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) examining the changes in the plains of New Mexico as irrigation and cattle ranches expand into the territory;

(b) analyzing the pros and cons of New Mexico's role in the production of uranium fueled weapons built during the cold war; and

(c) analyzing how New Mexicans maintain an agricultural industry being that we are one of the driest states in the country.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) connecting various disputes that occur as a result of Article X being stricken from the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo;

(b) describing the introduction of the Chinese population into New Mexico;

(c) assessing the changes of the land and society initiated by the railroad system, along with the immigrant population it brought to the New Mexican territory;

(d) explaining how the Homestead Act of 1862 impacted the demographics of New Mexico;

(e) evaluating efforts from the people of New Mexico to become a state, and analyzing outside perspectives to the entrance of New Mexico as a state;

(f) interpreting data or evidence to conduct periodization of key events and contributions by key people to the events that occurred during the early 20th century; and

(g) demonstrating contextualization and interpretation of key events that took place within Native American communities during the civil rights era.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:

(a) examining the causes and effects of the civil war, and the battles that ensued within New Mexico;

(b) explaining how the Homestead Act of 1862 impacted the demographics of New Mexico;

(c) probing the beginnings of the Native American boarding school system, and the ramifications that it had on indigenous communities in New Mexico and abroad;

(d) analyzing the causes and effects of the dust bowl in New Mexico, and how it changed or eliminated communities in New Mexico;

(e) demonstrating ability to use relevant historical evidence to synthesize information regarding the impact of nuclear weapons on people around the world;

(f) demonstrating historical causation by using multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the civil rights era in New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) determining why it was necessary for the United States to purchase the land acquired by the Gadsden purchase, instead of obtaining it by warfare;

(b) demonstrating historical argumentation by using various resources and perspectives to show the impact of World War II on the people of New Mexico, and the impact that our citizens had on the war;

(c) identifying the beginnings of the arms race between the Soviet Union and the United States;

(d) uncovering what types of activities took place, and what products were produced at Los Alamos national laboratory and Sandia national lab during the cold war and beyond;

(e) using multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of how water management has changed over the centuries in New Mexico; and

(f) developing an argument showing the importance of preserving historical sites and New Mexico's resources.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:

(a) examining the different perspectives from the peoples of New Mexico, and the United States at the time of annexation;

(b) dissecting the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and evaluating how the different people of New Mexico were addressed and impacted by the document;

(c) determining the role of race and racism in the acts of land redistribution during the territorial period; and

(d) appraising the value of New Mexico's historical sites to New Mexico's culture.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

(a) examining the rights that were guaranteed to citizens in Article IX of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and reason why Article X would have been stricken;

(b) contextualizing the struggles toward statehood by including the resistance of the Hispanic population to newcomers and the participation of all ethnic populations in the Spanish American war, prior to becoming a state of the United States;

(c) contrasting the rights given to people that live within a territory versus a state;

(d) giving examples of how New Mexicans played an active role in military service during the Korean and Vietnam Wars;

(e) comparing organizations engaged in civil rights work; and

(f) demonstrating interpretation of critical changes in New Mexico's segregation laws.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by demonstrating knowledge of their family history and cultural background and describing how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and

(b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

(b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

(a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and

(b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

(a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;

(b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.20 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.20, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.21 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL UNITED STATES HISTORY:

A. High school United States history.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) determining the importance and utility of rights versus responsibilities;

(b) determining the characteristics of a revolution and evaluate the American revolution as compared to the French and Haitian revolutions;

(c) examining the short- and long-term impact of settlers, pioneers, frontiersman, and homesteaders on the United States and on sovereign indigenous nations;

(d) analyzing the persistence of the “lost cause of the confederacy” narrative and its long term effects;

(e) evaluating whether the civil war was a “war to free the slaves,” and how successfully the war contributed to the liberation of enslaved people;

(f) evaluating the long-term consequences of the end of reconstruction and the rise of Jim Crow on formerly enslaved people and their descendants;

(g) comparing and contrasting global historical reconciliation and reparations efforts (Denazification, Australia Mabo Case/Terra Nullius) with reconstruction;

(h) examining immigration policy in the United States over time;

(i) evaluating what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States;

(j) examining contemporary labor struggles and populist movements in the United States and around the world;

(k) exploring the short- and long-term effects of the Jim Crow era on African Americans in the north and the south;

(l) determining the effectiveness of post-colonial institutions in ameliorating the effects of colonial rule;

(m) examining the ethics of the suppression of civil liberties during times of conflict and war, past and present;

(n) analyzing the role of the United States in the world and the balance of foreign and domestic priorities;

(o) determining the utility or futility of war;

(p) exploring the ongoing conflict between traditionalism and modernity in American society today, making connections to the movements, ideas and experiences of the past;

(q) comparing and contrasting the conflict between traditionalism and modernity during this period with examples around the world, such as Weimar Germany;

(r) assessing the degree to which new deal programs have been maintained or dismantled over time;

(s) evaluating the impact of new deal programs and policies on diverse groups of people in America, including African Americans and indigenous peoples;

(t) determining the effectiveness of the United States government in averting and responding to similar economic disasters;

(u) analyzing the similarities, differences, and connections between the racial social order in the United States and Germany during this period;

(v) exploring the ethics of and arguments for and against the use of nuclear weapons, past and present;

(w) exploring the legacy of “othering” in the United States, including boarding schools, internment camps, and detention centers;

- America;
- (x) examining the short- and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America;
 - (y) analyzing the impact of red scare ideology on social movements and activists in the United States;
 - (z) researching and analyzing issues related to race relations in the United States since the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965;
 - (aa) examining the evolution of McCarthyism from the red scare to COINTELPRO;
 - (bb) evaluating the influence of 1960s cultural and artistic movements from past to present day;
 - (cc) assessing the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people;
 - (dd) examining the short- and long-term impacts of criminal justice policy implemented during the presidencies of Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton;
 - (ee) examining the push-pull relationship between progressivism and conservatism in America over time;
 - (ff) evaluating whether the cold war definitively ended in 1991;
 - (gg) examining the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future;
 - (hh) analyzing the current state and health of American democracy and creating an action plan to protect American democracy; and
 - (ii) examining anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States over time and the experiences of diverse immigrant groups, past and present.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
- (a) examining the course and consequences of the Columbian exchange;
 - (b) describing the evolution and short and long-term consequences of racialized labor and caste systems, such as encomienda and slavery in Spanish and Portuguese America;
 - (c) analyzing how various indigenous nations changed as a result of European settler colonialism;
 - (d) examining the involvement of indigenous nations in the colonial wars and evaluate the consequences for their societies;
 - (e) investigating the causes and effects of the revolutionary war on diverse groups of people in the United States;
 - (f) evaluating the social, political, and economic causes and effects of the system of racialized slavery and caste in the United States;
 - (g) evaluating the social, political, and economic causes and short- and long-term effects of United States territorial expansion;
 - (h) examining the ways in which the United States acquired new territories, including purchases, annexation, treaties, and war;
 - (i) explaining the importance of the transportation revolution of the 19th century;
 - (j) analyzing the effects of industrial growth throughout antebellum America;
 - (k) describing the role of slavery in the economies of the industrialized North and the agricultural south, explaining reasons for the rapid growth of slavery in southern states, the Caribbean islands, and South America after 1800, and analyzing how banks, insurance companies, and other institutions profited directly or indirectly from the slave trade and slave labor;
 - (l) analyzing critical policies and events leading to the civil war and connections among them;
 - (m) explaining how conflicts over slavery led the north and south to war;
 - (n) analyzing the short- and long-term effects of the end of the civil war and reconstruction period;
 - (o) explaining the various causes of the industrial revolution;
 - (p) making connections among the important consequences of the industrial revolution;
 - (q) analyzing social, political, and economic reasons groups migrated to and within the United States, including push and pull factors;
 - (r) analyzing the causes and course of the growing role of the United States in world affairs from the civil war to World War I;

- (s) distinguishing between the long-term causes and triggering events that led the United States into World War I;
 - (t) explaining the course and significance of Woodrow Wilson’s wartime diplomacy, including his fourteen points, the league of nations, and the failure of the treaty of Versailles;
 - (u) assessing how new technology in transportation, communication, and finance impacted American society;
 - (v) describing the multiple causes and consequences of the global depression of the 1930s;
 - (w) assessing the impact and legacy of new deal relief, recovery, and reform programs;
 - (x) analyzing the events that led to World War II, the major battles of the war and its consequences, and the conferences of allied leaders following the war;
 - (y) explaining the rise of fascism and the forms it took in Germany and Italy, including ideas and policies that led to the holocaust;
 - (z) explaining the reasons for American involvement in World War II and the key actions and events leading up to declarations of war against Japan and Germany;
 - (aa) assessing the social, political, and economic transformation of the United States during World War II.;
 - (bb) examining the factors that contributed to the cold war;
 - (cc) evaluating the policy of containment as a response by the United States to Soviet expansionist policies;
 - (dd) analyzing how United States foreign policy during the Cold War shaped conflicts in Asia and the Americas;
 - (ee) analyzing the roots of domestic communism and anti-communism in the 1950s, the origins and consequences of, and the resistance to McCarthyism;
 - (ff) researching and analyzing resistance to integration in white communities, protests to end segregation, and supreme court decisions on civil rights; and
 - (gg) analyzing how communist economic policies and United States-sponsored resistance to Soviet military and diplomatic initiatives contributed to the fall of the Berlin wall in 1989 and the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:
- (a) explaining the ways that indigenous nations expressed and transmitted their beliefs and values;
 - (b) comparing and contrasting the different ways in which indigenous people have resisted, survived, and adapted to maintain their patterns of community life;
 - (c) comparing and contrasting the short- and long-term causes and effects of settler colonialism versus classic colonialism;
 - (d) examining diverse stories of adaptation and resistance to systems of oppression including colonialism and slavery;
 - (e) evaluating the impact of the key ideals and principles outlined in the foundational documents of the United States on diverse groups of people, including Native Americans and enslaved Africans;
 - (f) analyzing the convergence of the expansion of colonialism through territorial acquisition and the expansion of chattel slavery in acquired territory;
 - (g) explaining the causes and effects of this convergence on diverse people within the territories, indigenous peoples, enslaved Africans, people on the borderlands, immigrants;
 - (h) exploring forms of resistance, adaptation and cultural preservation practiced by enslaved and colonized peoples during this period;
 - (i) assessing the impact of federal policy toward indigenous nations;
 - (j) exploring the similarities and differences between reform movements in the United States in the early to mid-19th century;
 - (k) identifying the ways in which diverse groups of people participated in the civil war, including women and African Americans;
 - (l) exploring African American economic, political, and sociocultural (educational, artistic, literary) responses to emancipation and reconstruction;

- (m) identifying the ways in which gender and sexuality were changing and unchanged during the 19th century;
 - (n) evaluating the effects of the entry of women into the workforce after the civil war and analyze women’s political organizations;
 - (o) analyzing the consequences of the continuing westward expansion of the American people after the civil war and evaluate the impact of the 14th Amendment on Native peoples and Asian and European immigrant men and women;
 - (p) examining the ways that the great migration changed America, exploring the ways that African Americans adapted and resisted;
 - (q) examining the ways in which art, journalism, literature, and cultural artifacts served as forms of resistance and contributed to the anti-imperialist movement;
 - (r) examining the legacy and evolution of turn of the century imperialism, including the short- and long-term effects in Latin America, Asia, and the Pacific;
 - (s) evaluating major reform movements and reformers during the progressive era;
 - (t) evaluating the inclusivity and exclusivity of progressive era reform movements;
 - (u) analyzing the campaign for, and the opposition to, women’s suffrage in the late 19th and early 20th centuries;
 - (v) analyzing the strategies of African Americans to achieve basic civil rights in the early 20th century;
 - (w) examining the role of colonial peoples, women, indigenous peoples and African Americans during World War I;
 - (x) exploring the arts, entrepreneurship, and philanthropy of the Harlem renaissance and its connections to the great migration;
 - (y) evaluating the passage of the 19th amendment from the perspective of diverse groups in American society including white women, African American women, Native Americans, and Asian Americans;
 - (z) examining the ways in which gender and sexuality norms changed and stayed the same in 1920s America;
 - (aa) examining the lives and experiences of Mexicans during the 1930s and the relationship of the United States to Mexico;
 - (bb) evaluating the short- and long-term consequences of the war on diverse groups, such as African Americans, Native Americans, Hispanic Americans, Japanese Americans, and Japanese nationals;
 - (cc) examining the ways in which gender roles changed and stayed the same for women during the war;
 - (dd) analyzing state-sponsored persecution and “othering” including anti-semitism and homophobia;
 - (ee) analyzing the impact of the Vietnam war on the Vietnamese people and on the United States;
 - (ff) exploring the impact of the cold war on indigenous peoples around the world;
 - (gg) comparing and contrasting the communist red scare with the lavender scare;
 - (hh) analyzing the origins, evolution, and goals of the African American civil rights movement and Black Power Movement;
 - (ii) analyzing the causes, course, and impact on American politics and society of new social and political movements, including consideration of the role of protest, advocacy organizations, and active citizen participation;
 - (jj) evaluating the significance of the 1990 American Disability Act;
 - (kk) exploring the movement against police brutality;
 - (ll) examining the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes;
 - (mm) creating an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans; and
 - (nn) evaluating the effects of the representation of diverse people in the United States government including race, gender, sexual orientation, and disability.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:
- (a) explaining the common elements of indigenous societies;

(b) analyzing facets of indigenous social, political, and economic organization;

(c) analyzing relationships between indigenous peoples and Spanish, English, French, and Dutch colonizers;

(d) examining the interactions between English colonizers and indigenous peoples in the 13 Colonies;

(e) describing the constitutional convention, the roles of specific individuals, and their conflicts and compromises;

(f) exploring the key ideals and principles outlined in the foundational documents of the United States;

(g) analyzing major factors that determined the outcome of the civil war;

(h) exploring the efforts of the federal government and African Americans to forge a new political and social order after emancipation;

(i) explaining what progressivism meant in the early 20th century through the ideas, actions, and experiences of progressive leaders;

(j) analyzing the governmental policies of the progressive period, determine which problems they were designed to solve, and assess long and short-term effectiveness;

(k) analyzing the role and conduct of the United States during the war;

(l) examining the conflict between traditionalism and modernity as manifested in the major political and economic events in the first two decades of the 20th century;

(m) summarizing the diplomatic and military policies on the war in Vietnam of Presidents Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon;

(n) evaluating accomplishments of the civil rights movement and how they served as a model for later feminist, disability, and gender rights movements of the 20th and 21st centuries;

(o) analyzing the important policies and events that took place during the presidencies of John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon;

(p) analyzing the presidency of Ronald Reagan (1981–1989) and the rise of the conservative movement in American politics;

(q) analyzing some of the major technological and social trends and issues of the late 20th and early 21st centuries;

(r) evaluating the effectiveness of the federal government’s response to international terrorism in the 21st century;

(s) examining contemporary civil rights struggles;

(t) analyzing United States government policies to reduce climate disruption; and

(u) comparing and contrasting the response and plan of the United States government during the Covid-19 pandemic with the AIDS epidemic and the 1918 influenza.

B. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and

(b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

(b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

(a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and

(b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

(a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;

(b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.21 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.21, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.22 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL WORLD HISTORY:

A. Civics. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by:

(1) assessing options for individual and collective action to address local, regional, and global problems;

(2) applying a range of strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and out-of-school civic contexts; and

(3) evaluating methods people use to create, change, expand, or oppose systems of power or authority.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by:

(a) evaluating the impact of global interconnectedness on international economic stability and growth; and

(b) analyzing how national and global economic trends and policies impact the state and local economies in New Mexico.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by analyzing and explaining the reciprocal relationship between physical and geographical locations, and the patterns and processes humans create within them.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by identifying, evaluating, and explaining the causes, characteristics, and impact of diffusion: the spread of ideas, beliefs, cultural practices and traits, language, artifacts, methods, technologies, and diseases across space and over time.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by assessing how social, economic, political, and environmental developments at global, national, regional, or local levels affect the sustainability of modern and traditional cultures.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) identifying significant transformative moments in world history, analyze the reasons behind their transformative nature, and explain how they continue to shape contemporary global interactions;

(b) tracing political, intellectual, religious, artistic, technological, economic, and social developments in historical periods, and within individual societies;

(c) identifying patterns of continuity and change over time in world history, focusing on patterns within and between historical eras;

(d) examining how historical events and developments were shaped by unique circumstances of time and place, and broader historical contexts; and

(e) identifying how individuals, groups, and events in New Mexico's history that have influenced or were influenced by events in world history.

- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
- (a) identifying and evaluating multiple causes and effects of historical events within world history;
 - (b) distinguishing between long- and short-term causes in developing historical interpretations; and
 - (c) identifying contemporary global issues that influence or are influenced by New Mexicans.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:
- (a) analyzing and evaluating the values and limitations of primary and secondary sources of information, including digital, with attention to the source, its context, reliability, and usefulness;
 - (b) effectively using and integrating evidence from a variety of diverse sources to evaluate and develop historical claims; and
 - (c) synthesizing historical information to create new understandings.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:
- (a) using a variety of source materials to compare and contrast treatments of the same topic;
 - (b) examining historical events from the perspectives of diverse groups, including indigenous people, regional, racial, ethnic, class, and gender; and
 - (c) analyzing and evaluating multiple points of view to explain the ideas and actions of individuals and groups.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:
- (a) using historical thinking skills to evaluate historical and contemporary sources of information relating to local, regional, and global problems, and identify challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems;
 - (b) investigating cultural and historical developments within societies with attention to belief systems, ideologies, the arts, science, and technology; and
 - (c) analyzing the complex relationship between dominant cultures and minority groups throughout world history, including constructions of race, ethnicity, gender, nationality, class or religion, reactions, and long-term effects of oppression.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity studies. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by:

- (1) comparing and contrasting the various origins (including indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in world history;
- (2) examining the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups; and
- (3) examining the role colonization, assimilation, or syncretism plays in the evolution of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by creating compelling questions representing key ideas in world history.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
 - (a) evaluating the credibility of sources from a range of media (print, internet, audio, visual) by examining origin, author, context, content, and corroborative value; and
 - (b) gathering relevant information from credible sources representing a wide range of views and noting inconsistencies in the information.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) developing claims and analyzing counterclaims about the significance of historical events using evidence that draws directly and substantively from multiple sources; and
 - (b) analyzing evidence to detect inconsistencies within the evidence to revise or strengthen claims.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by presenting arguments and explanations that reach a range of audiences using print and oral technologies (e.g. posters, essays, letters, debates, speeches, reports, maps) and digital technologies (e.g. internet, social media, digital documentary).

- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
- (a) evaluating historical and contemporary sources of information relating to local, regional, and global problems and identifying challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems;
 - (b) assessing options for individual and collective action to address local, regional, and global problems; and
 - (c) applying a range of strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and out-of-school civic contexts.
- [6.29.11.22 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.22, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.23 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL ETHNIC, CULTURAL, AND IDENTITY STUDIES:

A. Ethnic, cultural, and identity studies.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:
- (a) recognizing and valuing the student's group identities without perceiving or treating others as inferior;
 - (b) identifying and analyzing cultural, differently abled, ethnic, gender, national, political, racial, and religious identities, and related perceptions and behaviors by society of these identities;
 - (c) identifying and exploring how current traditions, rites, and norms of identity groups have or are changing over time; and
 - (d) assessing how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by:
- (a) comparing and contrasting the various origins (including indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in the United States;
 - (b) examining the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups; and
 - (c) examining the role assimilation plays in the loss of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by:
- (a) examining historical and contemporary cultural, economic, intellectual, political, and social contributions to society by individuals or groups within an identity group;
 - (b) investigating how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy; and
 - (c) evaluating the role of racial social constructs in the structures and functions of a 21st century American society.

B. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
- (a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and
 - (b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
- (a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and
 - (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
- (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
 - (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
- (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
 - (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;
 - (c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and
 - (d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
- (a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and
 - (b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.
- [6.29.11.23 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.23, 12/14/2021]

HISTORY OF 6.29.11 NMAC: [RESERVED]

6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, filed 6/30/2009, was repealed and replaced by 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, effective 12/14/2021.

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Proposed New Mexico Social Studies Curriculum Standards

Jeffrey Mahn <jamahn47@gmail.com>

Sat 10/9/2021 4:55 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (27 KB)

Comments on Proposed NM Social Studies Standards.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I have attached my comments on the proposed New Mexico social studies curriculum standards in a Word document. Please provide a timely response to this email confirming that these comments have been received and are readable. If otherwise, I will send a printed copy of my comments by normal mail before the specified deadline.

If necessary, I can be contacted by telephone at 505/823-4796

Respectfully,
Jeffrey Mahn

Comments on Proposed NM Social Studies Standards

P. 8, Social Studies Strand 5 (Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies) – With its emphasis on characteristics that divide people, this strand will only promote tribalism and do nothing to enhance unification of school children as Americans. The intent of this strand appears to be a desire to increase, rather than to decrease, class consciousness, to accentuate artificial inequities, and to promote envy and hostility instead of unity.

P. 9, Guiding Principles

Bullet number 1, Major historical themes – These are Marxist-oriented themes devoid of morality. There are no “developmentally appropriate ways” to teach these topics without prior development of moral character in students. Otherwise, it is just indoctrination, which has no place in American public education.

Bullet number 3, Divergence from a Eurocentric cultural script – “Eurocentric cultural script” is a meaningless phrase that demeans the foundation of American culture and exalts alternative cultures that didn’t survive the historical development of the United States. This topic should only be approached from the viewpoint of accurately comparing competing values and characteristics of alternative cultures with an intent to understand why such cultures did not survive. Note that an honest evaluation of the culture upon which America was founded must extend back to biblical Christianity, a topic that is unfortunately prohibited in American public schools.

“Equitable inclusion” is another meaningless phrase that implies alternative cultures have been unjustifiably suppressed in American history.

The phrase “accurate historical stories reflecting other cultural perspectives” is ambiguous to say the least. Are such “reflections” to be stories, or accurate historical observations? What assures the objectivity of historical observations? This appears to be just another path for indoctrination.

Bullet number 4, Identifying tools to share authentic stories including the study of relationship between power and oppression – This is an absurdly meaningless “guiding principle” (tools to share authentic stories?). Power and oppression is a typical Marxist theme intended to divide people into feuding classes and generate unwarranted hostility. This topic has no place in American public education other than to address why people living under Marxist governments aren’t free.

Bullet number 5, Development of a strong critical historical consciousness while allowing students to maintain his/her/their own cultural integrity – In addition to promoting ridiculous pronoun political-correctness (his/her/their), this “guiding principle” promotes tribalism.

Bullet number 7, Utilizing historical events from a future focused orientation – This “guiding principle” is anything but guiding. It is totally incomprehensible. If this principle is meant to convey the message that students should formulate lessons to be learned from past history, then that message can be communicated very clearly and succinctly, which it has not been, so I suspect it is code for more Marxist indoctrination.

Some of the Themes and many of the proposed Performance Standards are clearly meant to create divisiveness and hostility between white Americans and black Americans, and between white Americans and indigenous Americans. The wording of the proposed standards intentionally vilifies America as a Euro-centric, racist country and portrays white Americans as cruel oppressors – obvious Marxist narratives. This is not what should be taught in American public schools. Objective black American and indigenous American perspectives can be integrated into social studies curricula without instigating hostility and outright hatred against white Americans. The narrative that America is, and always has been, a racist country is a Marxist ploy to use past history to permanently implant division and hostility among today’s Americans.

P. 39, Theme 2 – Inequality and Justice in the U.S.

Performance Standard 5.12, Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

First, “equity” is a false Marxist narrative. There never has been “equity” in a world in which people are free and there never will be because no two people are alike. Free people have different aspirations, different goals, and different motivations. They make different decisions and react differently to life’s events. Therefore, outcomes will be different – the inevitable inequities that result from individual freedom. That inequities must always produce conflict is also a false Marxist narrative. The Marxist indoctrination inherent in this performance standard will be that elimination of individual freedom is the only way to achieve “equity.”

Second, the idea that today’s conflicts in America are attributable to inequities that began with America’s founding is also a false narrative. It is Marxist indoctrination to teach that America’s founding was the origin of all forms of prejudice that caused the conflicts we observe today.

This “performance standard” will only promote unwarranted divisiveness. Focusing on “equity” as the solution to conflict is a false hope that can only create more hostility.

P. 40, Theme 3 – Human Rights and Economic Development

Performance Standard 5.20, Analyze how economic success is defined differently by various communities in the U.S. (then, now, and in the future).

First, one needs to know something about economics before one can even attempt to define economic success. If students know nothing about economic models, it is absurd to believe they can even construct a meaningful economic model on their own. This looks like another pathway for Marxist indoctrination, rather than an honest look at differing economic models.

Second, who determines the “various communities” for which “economic success” is to be defined? I suspect that “various communities” will be artificially constructed for the specific purpose of indoctrination.

Third, you can’t analyze something for which there is no data (in the future). All one can do is speculate about what constitutes economic success in the future, or indoctrinate, which is what I believe is the purpose of this performance standard.

I suspect that the intent of this performance standard is to denigrate the economics of capitalism. An honest evaluation of economic models would include an unbiased comparison of centralized, decentralized, and true free-market-based economies.

Performance Standard 5.22, Examine products that are imported and exported into markets within the United States based on demand for these products, noting how this affects the United States economy.

It is quite unclear how products can be “exported into markets within the U.S.” Products that are exported from the U.S. go to other world markets.

Balancing the supply of products with the demand for those products is key to proper functioning of a capitalist economy. While some products are made within the U.S., some products necessarily need to be imported from other countries. This performance standard would appear to be promoting the teaching of Economics 101, which would be a desirable objective for American elementary school children. However, based on the awkward wording of this performance standard, I suspect there is a more perverse intent here. I hope I am wrong.

P. 41, Theme 4 – Human Impact on Environment

Performance Standard 5.25, Demonstrate how the states are organized

It is really unclear how a student would go about demonstrating “how the states are organized.” The purpose of this activity is of highly questionable value, which leads me to believe that this is code for more Marxist indoctrination.

Anchor Standard Geography 13, Human-Environmental Interactions and Sustainability

“Sustainability” is another false Marxist narrative associated with a utopian ideology.

An appropriate performance standard for this anchor standard should be tied to an unbiased understanding of the importance of environmental awareness and conservation to responsible stewardship of Earth's resources.

P. 41, Theme 5 – Identity in Multiple Spaces

It appears that the intent of Performance Standards 5.29 and 5.31 is to indoctrinate students with the Marxist narrative of the oppressed versus the oppressors.

P. 99, Theme 1 – U.S. Origins and Origin Stories

This theme, as evidenced by the underlying proposed performance standards, appears to focus solely on America's history as (ostensibly) perceived by its indigenous population. While the history of North America's indigenous people preceding the arrival of Europeans is worth telling, an obviously biased account of American history subsequent to the arrival of Europeans can only promote loathing of America's founders and explorers.

This appears to be another pathway for Marxist indoctrination, promoting the Marxist narrative that Americans of European descent are still oppressing the descendants of North America's indigenous peoples.

P. 100, Theme 2, Early America: The American Revolution and Constitution

Performance Standard 9-12.US.25, Determine the characteristics of a revolution and evaluate the American Revolution as compared to the French and Haitian Revolutions.

While all three revolutions involved uprisings of "oppressed" people, the outcome of the American Revolution had very little in common with the outcomes of the other revolutions. I suspect the purpose of this comparison is to show the American Revolution in an unfavorable light, which is not the way the American Revolution should be taught in America's schools.

Performance Standards 9-12.US.27, 28, and 29 are more Marxist narratives with an obvious intent to induce revulsion and hatred of America.

P. 101, Theme 3, Westward Expansion, 1787-1876

Performance Standard 9-12.US.37, Describe the role of slavery in the economies of the industrialized North and the agricultural South, explain reasons for the rapid growth of slavery in southern states, the Caribbean islands, and South America after 1800, and analyze how banks, insurance companies, and other institutions profited directly or indirectly from the slave trade and slave labor.

Slavery in the Caribbean islands and South America is irrelevant to American history. This is just another pathway for Marxist indoctrination promoting a false narrative that America was the cause of slavery in the western hemisphere. "Analyzing" how banks, insurance companies, and other institutions profited directly or indirectly from the slave trade and slave labor is pure speculation intended to implicate all of America's institutions with systemic racism – another false Marxist narrative.

Performance Standards 9-12.US.38 – 41 are continuations of the false Marxist narrative that the evolution of America as a nation is rooted in racism.

P. 103, Theme 5, Reconstruction, 1865-1877

Performance Standard 9-12.US.50, Compare and contrast global historical reconciliation and reparations efforts (Denazification, Australia Mabo Case/Terra Nullius) with Reconstruction.

This performance standard is intended to promote the artificial narrative that 21st century Americans owe reparations to black Americans for 19th century slavery. The intent of this narrative is to create 21st century racial division and promote the false allegation that America is still a racist country. This is not what should be taught in America's public schools.

Performance Standard 9-12.US.53, Identify the ways in which gender and sexuality were changing and unchanged during the 19th century.

This performance standard has no relevance to America's Reconstruction Period and is nothing more than a ploy to falsely place an irrelevant, polarizing late 20th century cultural controversy into a 19th century setting. This is blatant Marxist indoctrination.

P. 104, Theme 6, Rebuilding the United States: Industry and Immigration, 1865-1920

Performance Standard 9-12.US.56, Evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States.

This performance standard is obviously intended to denigrate capitalism in favor of a false utopian economy – more Marxist indoctrination.

P. 105-106, Theme 7, Imperialism, 1890-1920; Theme 8, Progressivism and World War I; Theme 9, Conflicts and Transitions, 1920-1929

These themes, as evidenced by some of the underlying proposed performance standards, are obviously intended to cast America as a nation that oppressed native peoples in both the United States and other parts of the world, and oppressed progressive ideas and perspectives within its own population.

First, America has never been an "imperialistic" country. This is another false Marxist narrative.

Second, while some "progressive" thought and ideas may not be popular within the American populace, the idea that "progressives" have been the victims of oppression is simply Marxist indoctrination. The truth is that the objective of American “progressives” is to rule America with absolute authority and limit the freedoms of those who disagree with them – Marxism at its finest.

P. 121, Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies

These topics, as evidenced by most of the underlying proposed performance standards, are obviously intended to create divisions, distrust, and hostility among Americans. Topics such as these that have been highly politicized need to be addressed in an objective manner with respect and honesty. Unfortunately, that is not the approach that comes across in the proposed performance standards.

Concluding Comments

I have only reviewed the details of the specific proposed standards addressed above. I was dismayed to find them riddled with Marxism, and can only assume that the entirety of the proposed social studies standards are likewise biased toward Marxism.

It is OK to teach American students about the grievous parts of America’s past and present as long as that is not the sole focus of such teaching. A balanced approach must be employed, promoting the moral aspects as well as addressing the immoral aspects that we would like to remedy and which should serve as lessons for future generations.

Schools should not be indoctrinating American students with Marxist doctrine. Nothing good has ever resulted from Marxism because there is no moral basis for Marxism and Marxists have no moral conscience. Marxist dictators have killed millions of innocent people. Marxism should be addressed as the evil it is and nothing more.

While American leaders and others who have significantly influenced American life have not always been of upstanding character, we must teach our children the truth about human nature and how we must always be striving to overcome the bad and ugly aspects of our nature with good. This is the only way that Americans of all races and ethnicities will become united. Marxism does not unite. It only destroys.

[EXTERNAL] Social studies standards proposals

Vince Gutschick <vince.gutschick@gmail.com>

Sun 10/10/2021 11:21 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear PED Staff,

I fully support the teaching of recent events (the Afghan War, the Arab Spring, etc.) and of recent social movements (e.g., Black Lives Matter). In my own early education, the coverage of then-recent events in my history classes was pitiful. I knew about these events, fortunately, but most students did not, to the detriment of their understanding of what they faced in their lives. Lack of knowledge of events and social changes by individuals is also to the detriment of their fellow citizens. Uninformed and misinformed citizens help elect leaders who are antithetical to choosing the most pragmatic and moral courses of action.

Sincerely,

Vince Gutschick

--

Chair of the Board, Las Cruces Academy lascrucesacademy.org

Prof., Emeritus, Biology, NMSU

vince.gutschick@gmail.com (575) 571-2269

Humans celebrating Earth Day is like fleas celebrating Dog Day – Jimmy Kimmel

I'm richer than you are. I have all the money I need, and you don't – Sierra Club founder John Muir to railroad heir Averell Harriman

[EXTERNAL] NM's proposed social studies curriculum

Mary Cockburn <marycockburn.realtor@gmail.com>

Sun 10/10/2021 3:16 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern;

I am a parent, grandparent and have taught in private schools, been the head of a private school K-12 and worked in public schools helping in after school tutoring. Education is very important and must be done in a manner that allows a student to grow in his thinking without inhibitions on what that is. A student should be taught HOW to think and then be given data about a subject and allow him/her to think on his own about that subject.

The sections of the proposed social studies curriculum that I have read are being taught from a viewpoint that what has created the United States of America is all bad and wrong. Then instructs a student to think that way and answer questions. Instead of presenting the information to the student, good and bad, and then letting the student look at it and decide if it is correct or not or maybe needs some improvement.

The curriculum acts as an indoctrination and not as facts to educate.

Anytime you stress the importances of outnesses/wrongness that is what you put a person's attention on and that is then what gets acted out. If one puts more attention on what has been right about our country and also talks about what was not right, one would get more productivity from all and teamwork with all.

The proposed curriculum teaches to look for discrimination in everyone when in actual fact it is not in everyone, it is only in a few. If you are taught to be a victim then that is what you will be, if you are taught that you create and make your life, then you become a responsible and successful person, no matter what your skin color is.

Your curriculum teaches that one is either good or bad depending on their skin color. That is not true. Every person, when born, is basically good. One has to be taught to be bad no matter their skin color.

Please DO NOT put any part of Critical Race Theory in our curriculum for our NM students. We need to be working on getting students reading at grade level not wondering what skin color is better than another, when in fact it isn't. It is what the individual does that makes a person good or bad.

Thank you for your time in reading this.

Mary Cockburn
505-639-2090

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Gene Reese <gene.reese.gr@gmail.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 10:01 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (12 KB)

Letter to PED of NM.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NM Public Education Department

Dear Mr. Sena, I have attached my letter concerning the curriculum you are wanting to implement into our classrooms in our state. Please read.

Thanks for your time, Autry Reese

To: Public Education Department of New Mexico

Dear Member, We are writing our comments and concerns about the new course in Social Studies you are considering for our classrooms. So often our students are being indoctrinated to a slanted viewpoint instead of being taught true facts. This has been going on for decades about our true historical founding of our great country. This course that you are wanting to implement into our school systems around the state are doing the same thing and we are strongly against it! Our country is NOT systemic racist as so many are proclaiming. For sure there are racists in our country and they always will be but that is entirely different than stating that the whole country is racist. The idea that the white race is superior to others is completely false and against all that our Constitution and Declaration of Independence declares - "All (every race) men (people) are created equal"! Critical Race Theory may not be named as such in this course but the same principles will be taught and that is an evil teaching that has NO place in our classrooms! Every person has the same opportunities in this country if they have the determination to succeed in life. God has given to each of us the exact same kind of brain that functions the same in us all.

In conclusion, we do not want any part of Critical Race Theory or similar teaching in this social studies course! The indoctrination of our children must cease!

Autry E. Reese

Edith J. Reese

[EXTERNAL] CRT curriculum

Deborah Beard <iceandcattle@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 10:13 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

The new social studies/history curriculum being pushed on New Mexico schools is inappropriate and divisive. I am a 35+ years educator and a National Distinguished Principal. It sickens me that we are instilling hate for each other through school curriculum. Teaching factual history- the good, the bad and the ugly, is the best way to educate about our past and hopefully keep us from making repeated mistakes.

We are all Americans regardless of our skin color. The character of a person is far more important than skin color. What you are proposing to teach our students is that skin color is all that matters. This is un-American.

If the PED of New Mexico pushes this curriculum it will have adverse affects on our children and our country.

Please don't ruin our country by pushing this curriculum on our children.

Thank you,

Deborah Beard
National Distinguished Principal 2014

[EXTERNAL] SUPPORT FOR NM H.S. STANDARDS THAT MAINTAIN A FOCUS ON OPPRESSION/RESISTANCE AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

Nancy Lopez <lopeznancy2u@gmail.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 10:27 AM

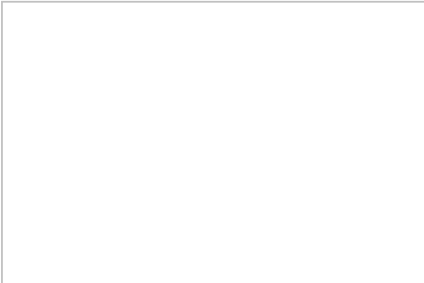

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As resident of Albuquerque, NM for over two decades and as a sociologist of race, ethnicity, gender and social equity, I write in strong support of maintaining high school standards that maintain a focus on oppression/resistance and equity. The evidence is clear. These types of courses reduce inequalities. Please see article reporting on recent peer reviewed study showing the impact of these types of courses are enduring for reducing inequality. Critical thinking and deep understanding of the history of the complex history of New Mexico is key for reducing inequalities as an ethical and economic imperative and it will benefit the entire state of New Mexico. It is important to note that more than twenty states have implemented ethnic studies as a lever for reducing social inequalities and California just made it a graduation requirement.

With appreciation,
Nancy López, PhD

<https://ed.stanford.edu/news/ninth-grade-ethnic-studies-helped-students-years-stanford-researchers-find>

Ninth-grade ethnic studies helped students for years, Stanford researchers find | Stanford Graduate School of Education

A ninth-grade ethnic studies class has a remarkably prolonged and strong positive impact on students, increasing their overall engagement in school, probability of graduating and likelihood of enrolling in college, according to a new study of a curriculum offered at the San Francisco Unified School District (SFUSD).. The findings, which follow up on earlier research by two of the

ed.stanford.edu

A ninth-grade ethnic studies class has a remarkably prolonged and strong positive impact on students, increasing their overall engagement in school, probability of graduating and likelihood of enrolling in college, according to a new study of a curriculum offered at the San Francisco Unified School District (SFUSD).

The findings, which follow up on earlier research by two of the authors indicating short-term academic benefits of the course, appeared in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences on Sept. 6.

The study provides “compelling and causally credible evidence on the power of this course to change students’ life trajectories,” said Thomas S. Dee, a professor at Stanford Graduate School of Education (GSE) and senior fellow at the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research (SIEPR).

Dee co-authored the study with former GSE doctoral student Sade Bonilla, now an assistant professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and Emily K. Penner, an assistant professor at the University of California at Irvine and former postdoctoral researcher at the GSE.

Lasting gains

The study was done in collaboration with SFUSD as part of a research-practice partnership with the GSE that began in 2009. In 2010, SFUSD launched a pilot program in which students were automatically assigned to an ethnic studies course as their first-year social studies requirement if they had a GPA of 2.0 or less. About nine in 10 were Hispanic, Black or Asian.

In 2017, Dee and Penner published a study showing academic gains at the end of ninth grade (e.g., higher attendance, grade-point averages and credits) among students encouraged to take the course. The researchers weren't sure the gains would last over time, as countless promising academic interventions fade quickly.

But this one stuck. For one thing, attendance improved: Students who participated in the course came to school more often during their remaining time in high school, for a total of one additional day of school every two weeks.

By their fourth year of high school, the students had also passed six more courses than a comparison group. More than 90 percent graduated within five years, versus 75 percent of their peers. They were also 15 percent more likely to enroll in college within six years. (At the time of the study, they were not yet old enough to graduate college.)

Parallels with psychological interventions

How could one class in ninth grade have such a large effect? While there are many theoretical perspectives on the academic impact of ethnic studies, Dee underscored its parallels with recent insights from social psychology. Targeted psychological interventions that promote a sense of belonging in school, affirm personal values and forewarn about stereotypes have all shown promise in improving student engagement and motivation.

Dee noted that ethnic studies share these features and resemble “an unusually sustained and intensive social-psychological intervention.”

In SFUSD's ethnic studies class, for example, students examine the role that their ancestors played in history, getting into the experiences of groups that have been literally pushed to the margins of textbooks. They study, in-depth, discrimination against various groups of people based on their race, social group, ethnicity or country of origin.

“The biggest thing that happens in an ethnic studies course, I believe, is that students get to approach an academic course from the perspective of their own experience,” said Bill Sanderson, assistant superintendent of high schools at SFUSD. “Everything is approached in the course from the experience of the students.”

Though the principles of the class remain set, teachers tailor the content to the ethnic and racial communities at their school in order to “to bring relevant curriculum that these students can identify with,” Sanderson said.

Critiquing history cultivated students' analytical abilities across classes, and the focus on anti-racism catalyzed their idealism. But the work of the course goes far deeper than that, the researchers said.

“There's long-standing evidence that many historically underserved students experience school environments as unwelcoming, or even hostile,” said Dee. Those in this pilot, particularly, hadn't done well academically and didn't feel like they belonged. And ninth grade can be a nerve-racking, transitional year.

Ethnic studies gave students “the opportunity to see their community reflected in the curriculum,” said Bonilla. Learning about their ancestors’ contributions made them feel proud and made school feel relevant, contributing to a sense of belonging. Learning about oppression and stereotypes in action reminded students that not every failure is an individual’s fault. Students conducted research projects out in the community and connected school with their lives.

Beyond ethnic studies

From there, once a student starts doing well, you’re “starting a stone rolling downhill,” Dee said, catalyzing greater motivation.

“There’s a basis in the science of learning for why courses like this can change students’ learning trajectories,” Dee said. “And if the mechanisms we’re describing are really valid, then this goes well beyond ethnic studies,” encouraging schools to make their teaching culturally relevant across subjects.

Education policymakers have focused recently on “curricula as the low-hanging fruit of education reform,” or something comparatively simple to change, Dee said.

Nevertheless, the results might not be easy to replicate. The district honed the curriculum over several years with faculty at San Francisco State University, home of the nation’s first ethnic studies college program. Many of the initial set of teachers had studied in that department and learned how to manage debate on sensitive subjects, Sanderson said.

Efforts to replicate this success without similar teacher supports and careful implementation are unlikely to be successful, Dee said, and may even trigger unintended and negative consequences. “Consider the potential educational and political fallout of asking teachers to discuss unusually sensitive topics in the classroom without the proper training to do so effectively.”

This is an especially pertinent consideration now, in the middle of a new wave of political controversy about history curriculum. While states and school districts are increasingly adopting requirements and standards for K-12 ethnic studies, some state legislatures are debating bills to ban the 1619 Project or critical race theory, a scholarly academic analysis of structural racism.

SFUSD, for one, isn’t going back. Its board voted this spring to make ethnic studies a high school graduation requirement.

“Ethnic studies is an important part of every young person’s education,” SFUSD board president Gabriela Lopez said in a statement issued by the district in March, which pointed to research showing the curriculum’s impact on GPA across disciplines, high school graduation rates, college-going rates and sense of belonging.

See also: <https://abc7.com/ethnic-studies-california-high-school-gavin-newsom-definition/11100653/>

[EXTERNAL] New proposals to cultural education changes

Janet Martinique <jmarq952@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 10:33 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Yes, I approve changes to add cultural education, awareness and truth to education; and stop white approach only to history.

Janet Martinique

Las Cruces registered (white) voter.

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] Changes to Social Studies:

WILLIAM HARLEY <wharley505@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 11:09 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The changes to NM Social Studies includes Black Lives Matters. As any sane person knows is a Hate filled Racist , Marxist operation. How dare you people try to and twist a child's mind. Shame on each of you. What kind of people do us tax payers have to stomach.

It seems that NM always strives to emulate California. By the way I used to be a moderate/liberal Democrat, no longer. I'm also a fifth generation New Mexican. Give up the poison of CRT.

W.R. Harley

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] revised standards

Barbara Lenssen <barbaralenssen@comcast.net>

Mon 10/11/2021 5:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Keith K. Anderson <keithkanderson@comcast.net>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Congratulations on the new standards. I do think that you should include something about Jan. 6 since it was such a remarkable attack on our constitution and our democracy.

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies revision 2021

Andra Stradling <andrastradling@gmail.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 7:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Educating children is a serious matter.

Should you decide to read the 122 pages of the revised curriculum, you may want to revisit this suggested curriculum.

Start with the suggestion that the Constitution be rewritten.
And calling our democratic Republic a Democracy.

I feel a definition Critical Race Theory is imperative in any discussion about CRT and its varied forms in public school.

CRT ignores what Frederick Douglass said of President Abraham Lincoln: Most Americans of all races have "risen above their prejudices," striving to bring American practice into accord with American principles regarding justice.

CRT demeans African Americans by stripping them of all agency, treating them as simply inanimate objects, helpless victims of impersonal forces. It also essentially absolves politicians of bad policy.

CRT is nothing more than a return to 1850s-style racism as espoused by John Calhoun and Chief Justice Roger Taney in his infamous Dred Scott decision.

It is divisive; it fosters racial hatred by trafficking in racial stereotypes, collective guilt, racial segregation and race-based harassment. It rejects Martin Luther King's hope that we should be judged, not by the color of our skin, but by the content of our character.

I say unequivocally! NO! To any form of Critical Race Theory, or whatever name you choose to give it! Teach History, not victimhood.

The establishment of some grand new curriculum that reflects the 109 year history of New Mexicans is a complete travesty in thinking. Making it in some way seem culturally relevant makes it a complete distortion of reality because of attempting to confine it to some simple minded time frame as if nothing existed before culturally. Before ever embarking on formalizing anything I suggest looking at Mexican history and the impact the Spanish had when they conquered what was at one time New Mexico by reviewing Carl Lawrence's "The Cross and the Sword". Without the relevance of that history the only culture relevance you would have is to the Native American history of our state which way predates it becoming a state.

I understand the desire to come up with some seemingly socially just curriculum. The negativity in this curriculum cannot tell the whole story of the greatest nations.
Read the revision. Where are the positives?

Andra Stradling
Flora Vista NM 87415
505-320-0160

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

Adam Davis <adamkdavis@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/11/2021 8:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing as an NM parent to oppose the attempt to put critical race theory in the social studies standards.

I am writing as the father of a child of mixed race. I will start by stating in no uncertain terms that my child IS NOT OPPRESSED. My wife is NOT OPPRESSED and I sure am not their oppressor in ANY WAY. How dare you think you can teach my boy starting as young as elementary school that I am an irredeemably evil white supremacist who subconsciously hates his mother and that my every interaction with her and in fact our entire relationship is rooted in imperialism and racism from centuries before any of us were even born. HOW DARE YOU!!!! WHAT SUPREME ARROGANCE OF YOU to think that you can take my boy from me and tell him he's half-racist against his own mother. Bi-racial children will suffer the most from this systematic child abuse you are once more attempting to pedal as they don't fit so neatly within your collective people groups. In fact the woke left, much like the Ku Klux Klan does, consider biracial people an abomination.

I am being proactive. Mark my words, my son will NEVER attend a public school in this state. NEVER!!! I love my son too much to put him this form of child abuse.

Adam Davis
Roswell

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Curriculum

Donald Gluck <dgluck@unm.edu>

Tue 10/12/2021 6:59 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The following are inappropriate or objectionable subject matter in the proposed curriculum:

1. In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies there is a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces “offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity.” This is classic CRT theology. 6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)
2. Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continue focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This, too, is classic CRT as the purpose is to divide people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.
3. There are also numerous example where a teacher can impose the notion of “justice and fairness,” unequal power relations, “past and current injustices”, although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also classic CRT as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)
4. Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” This is again classic CRT as it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated in order to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)
5. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. This is another CRT theology component in that America is automatically unjust and inequitable to various minority groups. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)
6. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. No positives regarding gun usage by women or minority groups are put forth. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)
7. In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. Another classic example of CRT as it stresses racial disparity in terms of inequality. 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)
8. Within High school U.S. History, students must examine the short-and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America. How about pairing this with a discussion of Communism and the negative impact it has had in Cuba and other Latin American nations. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)
9. In the 7thGrade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)
10. Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)

Thank you.

Donald Gluck

Albuquerque, NM 87123

[EXTERNAL] Re: NMPED Requests Public Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Standards

James Morris <nolimitallstars1@hotmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 8:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

So you want public feedback on a proposed Social Studies standards change, but you won't listen to the public when it comes to COVID and the daily emails we get from RRPS about positive COVID cases in the schools? Seems legit to me.

James Morris

From: Rio Rancho Public Schools <no-reply@rrps.net>

Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2021 8:49 AM

To: nolimitallstars1@hotmail.com <nolimitallstars1@hotmail.com>

Subject: NMPED Requests Public Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Standards

Good morning Rio Rancho Public Schools Parents & Guardians,

As you may be aware, the New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED) is working collaboratively to update and redevelop the Social Studies Standards for New Mexico schools. The current Social Studies Standards in New Mexico were last revised in 2009.

The NMPED would like public feedback and comments on their proposed Social Studies Standards. To provide feedback, see below:

- The state has extended the public comment period on the updated social studies standards through Friday, Nov. 12. This includes an additional 15 days beyond the legal requirement for review and comment.
- Written comments may be submitted:
 - By email to rule.feedback@state.nm.us
 - By regular mail addressed to John Sena, Policy Division, New Mexico Public Education Department, 300 Don Gaspar Ave., Room 121, Santa Fe, NM, 87501.
 - By fax to 505-827-6520
- In addition, the public may speak about the proposed standards as well as two other proposed rule changes at a public hearing from 1-3 p.m. Nov. 12 in Mabry Hall in the Jerry Apodaca Education Building, 300 Don Gaspar Ave. in Santa Fe. Speakers will be encouraged to submit written comments and then have up to 3 minutes each to speak. Read the complete news release from NMPED here.

To learn more about the NMPED's proposed Social Studies Standards or read through the proposed standards, visit: <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/literacy-humanities/social-studies/>

Thank you,

Rio Rancho Public Schools

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies

Mario Tafoya <mtafoya04@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 9:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

All I have to say is CRT BETTER NOT be slipped into this new program! It's bad enough our kids are being sent to school with masks.... If this happens myself and many others will pull their kids and homeschool them!

PED is just as corrupt as our politicians and the people are sick of it.

--

Mario A Tafoya

[EXTERNAL] SS Standards Question

Gina Rodriguez <gina.rodriguez@rrps.net>

Tue 10/12/2021 9:12 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Many of the standards leave a great deal of room for interpretation. Will there be a detailed support document created that will be released at the same time that the new standards are released?

Will there be a state adoption for new K-5 social studies curriculum? If so, when will that take place?

--

Gina D. Rodriguez, NBCT

Instructional Coach

Joe Harris Elementary

(505) 896-0706 ext. 55028

MAT, EMSS

"First, think. Second, dream. Third, dream. And finally, dare."

~Walt Disney

Confidentiality Notice: This e-mail, including all attachments, is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message.

[EXTERNAL] PED Social Studies

Jessica Chavez <jessicachavez414@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 9:25 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I will remove my children from public school of Critical Race Theory is implemented.

Jessica Flynn
Rio Rancho

[EXTERNAL] Comment on social studies changes

Antonia Weinstein <rrsteins@cableone.net>

Tue 10/12/2021 9:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

My husband and I are successful educated residents of New Mexico. As it stands New Mexico is once again on the bottom of the rankings of states who provide quality education. The proposed changes to the social studies program in NM schools exemplifies the gross liberalism that our children are indoctrinated with on a daily basis and brings it to new extremes. Not only am I NOT in favor of the proposed and other CRT changes, I am quickly coming to realize that NM does not represent nor respect my personal beliefs or values. My husband was so upset by the suggested changes he stated "I don't want to know. It will just make me more angry. What we need to do is figure out how to get our kids out of the [educational] system.

You must ask yourselves if making these changes is worth driving successful, educated, and resourceful New Mexicans out of the state for better opportunities and values that can be found in neighboring states in our great Union.

Thank you in advance for your time and consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,
Dr. Antonia Weinstein

[EXTERNAL] Re: Think New Mexico - Public Comment for 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies abenicio@thinknewmexico.org <abenicio@thinknewmexico.org>

Tue 10/12/2021 10:16 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>Cc: 'Fred Nathan' <Fred@thinknewmexico.org>; kristina@thinknewmexico.org <kristina@thinknewmexico.org>; 'Othiamba Umi' <othiamba@thinknewmexico.org> 1 attachments (860 KB)

Think_New_Mexico_Public_Comments_6-29-11-NMAC_10.12.21.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning,

Attached you will find Think New Mexico's public comment for the repeal and replace of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Should you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to contact us at (505) 992-1315.

Many thanks in advance for your consideration.

All the best,

Abenicio Eliray Baldonado, MPA | Education Reform Director

Tel: (505) 303-4769

Fax: (505) 992-1314

www.thinknewmexico.org

THINK NEW MEXICO
A Results-Oriented Think Tank Serving New Mexicans

Think New Mexico
1227 Paseo De Peralta
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Follow us on Facebook and Twitter

October 12, 2021

John Sena
Policy Director
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501
rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Re: Public Comment for 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dear Mr. Sena:

Think New Mexico is writing to urge the Public Education Department to include strong standards for personal finance education in the social studies benchmarks in the current proposed rulemaking for 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. Our detailed proposals for revisions to the department’s draft rule are provided with this letter.

Background

Think New Mexico is an independent, nonpartisan, results-oriented think tank whose mission is to improve the lives of all New Mexicans, especially those who lack a strong voice in the political process. We fulfill this mission by educating the public, the media, and policymakers about some of the most serious challenges facing New Mexico and by developing and advocating for enduring, effective, evidence-based solutions. As part of its mission, Think New Mexico advocates for students, families, and student-centered education policies across the state.

Last year, Think New Mexico published a report recommending, among other reforms, that New Mexico should make a one-semester course in personal finance a high school graduation requirement and should add strong personal finance benchmarks to the state’s education standards.

Strong Personal Finance Education Performance Standards Provide Students with Essential Life Skills and Advance Educational Equity

According to the Council of Economic Education, New Mexico is currently one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards.

This omission matters because personal finance education improves outcomes for students. For example, according to research by the Council of Economic Education, 93% of students who have taken a personal finance class save money compared with 84% of those who have not; 60% of students who have taken a personal finance class have a budget compared with 46% of those who have not; and 32% of students who have taken a personal finance class have invested money compared with 17% of those who have not. A 2014 study found that young adults in states that began requiring personal finance education in high school had better credit scores and lower loan default rates compared with young adults states without this requirement. New Mexico's lack of personal finance standards may help explain why our state ranks 47th for overall financial literacy according to the online personal finance website WalletHub.

Since 2008, financial literacy has been offered as an elective in New Mexico's high schools, but only about 11% of eligible students currently enroll in the course. Legislators from across the political spectrum are supporting legislation to make a one-semester personal finance course a graduation requirement, potentially as a combined course with economics.

Whether or not a course in personal finance becomes a graduation requirement, the concepts covered in personal finance are essential life skills that every student should receive as part of their basic education, rather than being limited to those few students who choose to enroll in an elective course. That is why these concepts should be incorporated into the social studies standards that apply to every student.

Personal finance standards teach students concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investment in stocks and bonds, and the costs of borrowing. These are essential life skills for all students, whether they are continuing with post-secondary education or entering the workforce.

Personal finance education is also an anti-poverty strategy that is necessary to advance educational equity and improve the outcomes of New Mexico's most at-risk students. Research by the Council for Economic Education found that schools with high percentages of students eligible for free or reduced price lunch provided significantly less access to personal finance education than did schools with more affluent student bodies. In high-poverty schools that required personal finance education, the researchers found that students were more likely to apply for financial assistance to attend college, and an additional 3% received grants and an additional 9% received subsidized loans, making higher education more affordable.

In addition, in its research, Next Gen Personal Finance has found that many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty. Considering the high rates of poverty among New Mexico's students and their families, our state has an obligation to make personal finance education accessible to all of our students.

From a practical standpoint, there are many free resources available to assist teachers and school leaders in implementing personal finance standards and benchmarks. Nonprofits like Next Gen Personal Finance, Jump$tart, and the Council for Economic Education offer free training for personal finance educators, and Next Gen even incentivizes teachers to take the course. There are no obstacles to making this essential education available to every New Mexico public school student.

Recommendations for Reform

Think New Mexico has undertaken extensive research to identify the best personal finance standards for New Mexico students, including reviewing the standards developed by Jump$tart National Standards in K-12 Personal Finance Education; the Council for Economic Education; Next Gen Personal Finance; the Colorado Department of Education Personal Finance Standards; and the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction Personal Finance Standards.

Based on this research and the national best practices, Think New Mexico has drafted proposed standards for incorporating personal finance benchmarks into New Mexico's K-12 social studies standards. They are attached with this letter, using track changes to highlight our proposed additions to the draft rule for 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Think New Mexico strongly urges the department to adopt these K-12 personal finance standards so that every New Mexico student will have the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school.

Thank you very much for your consideration of these comments.

Sincerely,

Fred Nathan, Jr.
Executive Director
Think New Mexico
1227 Paseo de Peralta
Santa Fe, NM 87501
fred@thinknewmexico.org

Abenicio E. Baldonado
Education Reform Director
Think New Mexico
1227 Paseo de Peralta
Santa Fe, NM 87501
abenicio@thinknewmexico.org

TITLE 6 PRIMARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION
CHAPTER 29 STANDARDS FOR EXCELLENCE
PART 11 SOCIAL STUDIES

6.29.11.1 ISSUING AGENCY: Public Education Department, hereinafter the department.
[6.29.11.1 NMAC – Rp. 6.29.11.1, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.2 SCOPE: All public schools, state educational institutions and educational programs conducted in state institutions other than New Mexico military institute.
[6.29.11.2 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.2, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.3 STATUTORY AUTHORITY: Sections 9-24-8, 22-2-1, 22-2-2, and 22-2C-3 NMSA 1978.
[6.29.11.3 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.3, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.4 DURATION: Permanent.
[6.29.11.4 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.4, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.5 EFFECTIVE DATE: December 14, 2021, unless a later date is cited at the end of a section.
[6.29.11.5 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.5, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.6 OBJECTIVE: This rule establishes the academic content and performance standards for social studies for grades kindergarten through 12. The social studies standards include six strands: (1) civics, (2) economics and personal finance, (3) geography, (4) history, (5) ethnic, cultural, and identity standards, and (6) inquiry. The strands are organized by anchor standard, which are the core ideas that establish what students should understand and be able to do, with increasing complexity. Anchor standards consist of performance indicators, which are concise, written descriptions of what students are expected to know and be able to do in a specific grade or course.
[6.29.11.6 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.6, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.7 DEFINITIONS: [RESERVED]

6.29.11.8 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR KINDERGARTEN:
A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
 - (a) communicating the purpose of rules; and
 - (b) explaining how the rules help people work together.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by:

- (a) identifying the consequences of following and not following rules; and
- (b) identifying authority figures and describing their roles.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by identifying the local, state, and national symbols (e.g. flag, bird, song).

B. Economics and personal finance.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by distinguishing between a basic need (e.g. food, clothing, shelter) and a want.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
 - (a) identifying examples of goods and services; ~~and~~
 - (b) explaining what scarcity is and how scarcity affects the accessibility of goods and services.

(c) recognize personal finance choices people make;

(d) explain how personal finance decisions are made; and

(e) identify and give examples of needs versus wants.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by creating maps of familiar areas (e.g. classroom, school, community).
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:

- (a) recognizing and identifying signs and symbols around their town and community and indicating location of places, people, and things; and
- (b) identifying the differences and similarities between a globe and a map and while explaining the purpose of the two.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by explaining why and how people move from place to place within a community.

D. History.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by comparing traditions found in communities over time.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by demonstrating an awareness of community leaders (e.g. teacher, principal, mayor, tribal leaders).

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:
 - (a) sequencing important events in the student’s life;
 - (b) identifying how individuals are similar and different;
 - (c) communicating a positive view of themselves and identifying some of their group identities;
 - (d) describing ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not;
 - (e) identifying how their family does things both the same as and different from how other people do things; and
 - (f) describing their family history, culture, and past to current contributions of people in their main identity groups.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
 - (a) recognizing a compelling question; and
 - (b) identifying the relationship between compelling and supporting questions.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using examples.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
 - (a) taking group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems; and
 - (b) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.8 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.8, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.9 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR FIRST GRADE:

A. Civics. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities of a civic life by explaining and providing examples of how people play important roles in society.

B. Economics and personal finance.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by examining choices that families make due to scarcity, and identifying costs associated with these choices;
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
 - (a) identifying examples of a producer and a consumer;
 - (b) examining how earning money through work is related to the purchase of goods and services; ~~and~~
 - (c) examining decisions that people make about spending and saving money.
 - (d) discuss ways to earn or receive money;
 - (e) identify types of currency and how currency is used;
 - (f) define types of transactions such as deposit, purchase, borrow, and barter; and
 - (g) identify coins and find the value of collection of two coins.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representation and reasoning by:

(a) creating geographic representations to identify the location of familiar places and demonstrate how these representations can help us navigate from one place to the next, provide directions, or trace important routes;

(b) identifying the common symbols used on maps for man-made structures and physical features; and

(c) using a variety of maps to locate specific places, and identify major landforms, bodies of water, and other places of significance around the United States.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by explaining how man-made structures are all examples of how people modify the physical environment to meet needs and wants.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by explaining how people interact with their physical environment in ways that may have a positive or a negative effect on natural resources.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by comparing life in New Mexico in the past to life in New Mexico today.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) comparing fact and opinion in stories and narratives from the past; and

(b) demonstrating chronological thinking by distinguishing among past, present, and future using family, school, or community events.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by examining and identifying cultural differences within a community.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(a) explaining how groups of people believe different things and live in different and interesting ways; and

(b) explaining how student and individual identities are part of what makes each person unique and special.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by investigating significant events, people, and observances in history, and discussing their effects on local and national communities.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by investigating how people work together to accomplish a common task, and how working together benefits and challenges people.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) explaining why a compelling question is important; and

(b) generating supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining if a source is primary or secondary and distinguishing whether it is mostly fact or opinion.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using examples.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) taking group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems; and

(d) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.9 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.9, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.10 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR SECOND GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:

(a) evaluating how American society has changed through rules and laws; and

(b) understanding the purposes and structures of government (e.g. tribal, local, state, national).

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

(a) assessing how the contributions of diverse individuals have helped develop our national identity; and

(b) examining and comparing the American democratic principles to neighboring countries.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities of a civic life by examining and understanding the qualities of good leadership.

B. Economics and personal finance.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

(a) examining how consumers react to changes in the prices of goods and how this influences economic decision-making and the use of money; and

(b) exploring how communities share resources and services with other communities.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by:

(a) investigating what resources are available in the community, how available resources differ in communities, and what resources are obtained from neighboring communities; and

(b) identifying different types of jobs performed in the community.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:

(a) assessing priorities when making financial decisions;

(b) classifying goals as short-term or long-term;

(c) differentiating the monetary value for a variety of goods and services; and

(d) use addition and subtraction within 100 to solve word problems about making financial decisions.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representation and reasoning by:

(a) using maps, identifying and locating the United States, Canada, and Mexico as the countries that make up North America; and

(b) identifying and locating the bordering states to New Mexico and understanding that New Mexico is in the southwest.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:

(a) comparing how man-made structures are all examples of how people modify the physical environment to meet needs and wants; and

(b) generating a definition for their region of the United States by identifying unique features.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by listing at least three different waves of migration to the western hemisphere in chronological order.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by describing ways in which individuals and groups use or save natural resources.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context and reconciliation by:

(a) describing events in North America that illustrate how people from diverse cultural groups attempted to work through conflicts to solve a problem;

(b) comparing diverse world communities in terms of members, customs, and traditions to the local community; and

(c) demonstrating chronological thinking by distinguishing among years and decades using a timeline of local and national events.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:

(a) identifying and comparing the diverse North American cultural groups of the past and today; and

(b) evaluating the effects of people, goods, and ideas that diffused from one world community into other world communities and the effects of the people, goods, and ideas on these communities.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(a) expressing a positive view of themselves without being mean or making other people feel bad; and

(b) describing ways people are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by demonstrating respect for the feelings of people who are similar and different from the student.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) explaining why a compelling question is important; and

(b) generating supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining if a source is primary or secondary and distinguishing whether it is mostly fact or opinion.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) taking group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems; and

(d) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.10 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.10, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.11 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR THIRD GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by explaining how the democratic principles motivate people to migrate then and now.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities of a civic life by explaining how to be a responsible and active citizen in a democracy.

B. Economics and personal finance.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by examining the various ways people earn a living to meet their basic needs (e.g. food, clothing, shelter) and how this has changed over time in various world communities.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by investigating who receives the goods that are produced in various world communities.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by:

(a) exploring the concepts of surplus and scarcity in relation to resources for various world communities;

(b) exploring the basic economic concepts of supply and demand;

(c) explaining how supply and demand influence prices and trade;

(d) describing how technological developments in transportation and communication influence trade over time;

(e) identifying currency, credit, debit, and checks as the basic means of exchange in western society; and

(f) comparing currency, credit, debit, and checks in the United States to other world money systems.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:

(a) identify chores that children can do to earn money to reach personal financial goals;

(b) differentiate the role of income and expenses when creating a budget;

(c) create a plan with specific steps to reach a short-term financial goal;

(d) model strategies to achieve a personal financial goal using arithmetic operations;

(e) identify currency, credit, debit, and checks as the basic means of exchange in western society; and

(f) compare currency, credit, debit, and checks in the United States to other world money systems.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representation and reasoning by:

(a) creating a model to demonstrate how geographic factors influence where people settle and how some people make adaptations to the environment to make a location more suitable for settlement; and

(b) identifying and using the mapping tools of scale, compass rose, grid, symbols, and mental mapping to locate places on globes and maps.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:

(a) explaining how physical and cultural characteristics of world regions affect people, and examining geographic features of various global communities that might create a need for migration or immigration using a variety of maps, photos, and other geographic representations; and

(b) identifying the components of the Earth's biosystems and their makeup (e.g., air, land, water, plants, animals).

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:

(a) evaluating the reasons for migration and immigration and the effects on people, culture, and ideas in world communities;

(b) analyzing how human settlement and movement impact diverse groups of people and how the cultural aspects of a region spread beyond its borders; and

(c) analyzing the movement of indigenous groups, including the removal and return of Indigenous people throughout New Mexico and the US.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context and reconciliation by explaining how world events impact New Mexico and the United States in the past and today.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by using a timeline to analyze connections among historical events, including how human settlement and movement impacted diverse groups of people.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(a) expressing a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel bad; and

(b) comparing and contrasting cultural identity with other people and groups.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by identifying the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) identifying disciplinary ideas associated with a compelling question; and

(b) using supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining the credibility of one source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by citing evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) identifying challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and

(b) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.
[6.29.11.11 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.11, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.12 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR FOURTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by examining and evaluating the rules, laws, and authorities that keep people safe in New Mexico.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:
- (a) explaining how democratic principles guide local, state, and sovereign governments; and
 - (b) demonstrating understanding that state symbols, holidays, traditions, and songs represent various cultural heritages, natural treasures, and the democratic values of New Mexico.

B. Economics and personal finance.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by explaining the impact of using natural resources on the local, county, and state economy.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by:
- (a) explaining how trade and industry in New Mexico is impacted by surrounding economies (e.g. Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Texas); and
 - (b) researching and creating a list of products, goods, and services that New Mexico imports and exports.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by exploring the significance of agriculture and livestock industries in New Mexico.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:
- (a) defining choice and opportunity cost;
 - (b) understanding when choices are made that those choices impose “opportunity costs;” and
 - (c) determining the relationship between long-term goals and opportunity cost.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
- (a) examining and synthesizing data from at least two types of maps (e.g. physical, topographical, thematic) to support a claim about the regional divisions of New Mexico, and comparing and contrasting its diverse geography;
 - (b) using a variety of maps, investigating and comparing how New Mexico’s political boundaries have changed over time;
 - (c) applying geographic tools of title, grid system, legends, symbols, scale and compass rose to construct and interpret maps; and
 - (d) describing and identifying the regions and four provinces that make up New Mexico’s land surface.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by describing the different groups of people (e.g. indigenous people, explorers, pioneers) that have settled in New Mexico throughout history and describing their traditions and effects on New Mexico culture.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by exploring how geographic factors influence locations of settlements and use of natural resources (e.g. land, water, minerals, plants, animals) to meet their basic needs.

D. History.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by describing the interactions between indigenous people and European settlers including agriculture, cultural exchanges, alliances, and conflicts.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by creating a timeline that depicts the events and the changes in New Mexico culture through contact with explorers and settlers.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by explaining why individuals and groups during the same historical period differed in their perspectives toward significant historical events.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

- (a) investigating how different groups have influenced the ways that state issues are viewed and resolved; and
- (b) examining the changes in governance of New Mexico (e.g. indigenous, Spanish, Mexican, Texan, confederate, United States).

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by demonstrating respectful inquiry about other people's lives and expectations without judgment.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by explaining connections among historical contexts and people's perspectives at the time.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

- (a) explaining how a compelling question represents key ideas in the field; and
- (b) using supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by citing evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and other relevant details.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

- (a) identifying challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and
- (b) using deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in their classrooms.

[6.29.11.12 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.12, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.13 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR FIFTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by identifying and explaining the structure and function of the three branches government.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by analyzing how different individuals and groups influenced the creation and interpretation of the foundational documents.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

- (a) explaining how the principles of the declaration of independence became unifying ideas of American democracy; and
- (b) describing how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by evaluating how the bill of rights shaped the rights of United States citizens.

B. Economics and personal finance.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

- (a) exploring examples from the western hemisphere to illustrate the role of scarcity historically and in current events;
- (b) analyzing how economic success is defined differently by various communities in the United States (e.g. past, present, future); and
- (c) identifying and comparing the major natural resources of the United States, Canada, Mexico, and the Caribbean or South American countries, and determining the major industries of those countries in relation to available resources.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by examining products that are imported and exported into markets within the United States based on demand for these products, noting how this affects the United States economy.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:

(a) differentiating between saving and investing;

- (b) establishing the function of banking; and
- (c) creating a way to keep track of money spent and money saved.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
- (a) demonstrating how physical maps reflect the varied climate zones, land forms, bodies of water, and natural resources of the western hemisphere;
 - (b) using maps and globes, identifying the regions within the western hemisphere and locating major physical features within each region;
 - (c) demonstrating how the states are organized, including time zones and the regions of the United States; and
 - (d) using geographic and place-based vocabulary to communicate locations and navigate from one place to another.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by using a map, identifying and locating the 50 states in the United States, and knowing the capitals of each state along with the surrounding United States territories.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by examining how the physical environment influences human population distribution and land use.

D. History.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by examining history from the perspective of the participants.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
- (a) creating and using a chronological sequence of related events and timelines to organize and analyze cause and effect relationships; and
 - (b) using primary and secondary sources to acquire historical information.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:
- (a) analyzing the causes of the American revolution and the effects individuals and groups had on the conflict; and
 - (b) analyzing the causes of the civil war and the effects individuals and groups had on the conflict.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:
- (a) explaining the connections among historical contexts and people's perspectives during major historical events in the U.S.; and
 - (b) identifying the beliefs, experiences, perspectives, and values that form points of view about civic issues.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

- (1) demonstrating knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups; and
- (2) explaining how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
- (a) identifying the disciplinary concepts and ideas associated with a compelling question; and
 - (b) using supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining the credibility of multiple sources.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by identifying evidence that draws information from multiple perspectives and sources in response to a compelling question.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by constructing responses to compelling questions supported by reasoning and evidence.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

- (a) identifying challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and
 - (b) using a range of consensus-building and democratic procedures to make decisions about, and act on, civic problems in the classroom.
- [6.29.11.13 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.13, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.14 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR SIXTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:
 - (a) identifying the social structures of early humans;
 - (b) describing cultural and political structures in classical eastern societies;
 - (c) describing cultural and political structures in classical western societies; and
 - (d) comparing and contrasting classical forms of government and political structure to the current United States government and political structure.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by identifying rights and responsibilities of citizens and non-citizens in civic participation within the governmental systems of a monarchy, democracy, republic, and oligarchy.

B. Economics and personal finance.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:
 - (a) describing the distribution of resources among classes in the feudal hierarchy of European and Asian societies;
 - (b) describing how trade networks and the transfer of goods and ideas linked post-classical societies; and
 - (c) explaining the role of trade in the development and growth of societies.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by explaining how the interaction between producers and consumers in the trade networks satisfied economic wants and needs.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by analyzing the economic impact that surpluses of food and goods have on the growth of civilizations.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:
 - (a) exploring how consumer spending decisions and demand impact market economies;
 - (b) analyzing how external factors might influence spending decisions for different individuals; and
 - (c) describing the role of competition in the determination of prices and wages in a market economy.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
 - (a) creating and using maps, globes, and graphs to gather, analyze, and report geographic information;
 - (b) comparing environmental and geographic attributes of locations of earliest human settlements;
 - (c) using maps to represent the movement of key religions and philosophies over time; and
 - (d) using maps to explain how encounters and exchanges linked the world.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:
 - (a) identifying how natural forces shape earth's environments and regions;
 - (b) comparing cultural and technological innovations of one Mesoamerican and one South American civilization; and
 - (c) comparing cultural, political, and religious characteristics of early river valley civilizations.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by explaining the reasons for the expansion of trades routes and territories in Sub-Saharan regions.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:
 - (a) describing how the local environment impacts culture and technology;

(b) describing how the people impact the local environment; and
(c) comparing the transportation innovations made to travel over challenging routes and establishing trade routes.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) evaluating the lasting impact of philosophy, art, science, and technology of classical Greece, Rome, India, and China;

(b) evaluating the factors that allowed classical civilizations to thrive;

(c) analyzing the significance of innovations (e.g. scientific, mathematical, technological) in Middle Eastern and Asian societies;

(d) explaining how religion and philosophy shaped European, Asian, and Middle Eastern societies during the post-classical period; and

(e) examining instances of conflict, oppression, human rights violations, and genocide in medieval times, and responses to these violations.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:

(a) analyzing the impact that the agricultural revolution had on hunter-gatherers and nomadic peoples;

(b) identifying the political and social issues that led to the development of new philosophies during the classical period;

(c) comparing strategies used by classical civilizations to maintain their empires;

(d) comparing causes of decline in Roman, Han, and Gupta empires;

(e) explaining what led to the emergence of European feudalism; and

(f) analyzing social, political, and economic effects of the black death on Europe.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by examining and explaining the perspectives and encounters between Christians, Muslims, and Jews impacted individuals and society.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(a) identifying how differences and similarities between diverse groups impact perspectives; and

(b) describing the interactions of religious and philosophical perspectives and explaining their impact on European, Asian, and Middle Eastern societies during the classical period.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by demonstrating relationships between personal events and historical events.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by explaining how the treatment of people, past and present, shaped group identities and cultures.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) distinguishing primary and secondary sources by correctly identifying the author, type of document, and date of publication of the text in relation to the historical event described in the text;

(b) categorizing and sequencing significant people, places, events, and ideas using both chronological and conceptual graphic organizers;

(c) categorizing questions as compelling (e.g. main topic) or supporting questions; and

(d) posing self-generated relevant questions to be answered by historical inquiry that allow for multiple avenues of exploration.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) identifying where and how to locate sources to best answer a research question;
(b) distinguishing among fact, opinion, and reasoned judgment in a source and identifying the author's or authors' perspectives and possible biases;

(c) identifying inherent biases in maps; and

(d) evaluating the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

response to a question;

- (a) formulating a claim based on evidence from primary and secondary sources in
- (b) supporting a claim using a variety of sources and perspectives;
- (c) citing specific textual evidence to support analysis of primary and secondary sources; and
- (d) using primary and secondary sources to analyze conflicting and diverse points of view on a certain topic.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

- (a) using applicable presentation technology to communicate research findings or other significant information; and
- (b) creating maps, charts, infographics, or digital media that communicate research findings or other significant information.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

- (a) describing the many facets of student identity, including family history and culture, and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups;
- (b) identifying their family and personal cultural identity, determining how they want to present themselves to the world, and brainstorming how to address negative perceptions; and
- (c) explaining the challenges and opportunities people face when taking action to address problems.

[6.29.11.14 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.14, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.15 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR SEVENTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:

- (a) explaining the role of political decision-making process at the tribal, state, and local levels of government, including voting, upholding the constitution, petitioning public officials, and analyzing issues;
- (b) describing the relationships of tribal, state, and local governments with the national government under the federal system, including tribal sovereignty, state constitutions, three branches of government, checks and balances, and the legislative process;
- (c) comparing and contrasting global and historical government systems to the United States federal system; and
- (d) examining how conflict over land, culture, and social class led to Mexican independence from Spain.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:

- (a) using figurative language to describe the relationship between a nation-state and its colonies;
- (b) hypothesizing how the policies of the Spanish monarchy in New Spain interacted with other societies in the region; and
- (c) evaluating New Mexico's transition into a United States territorial government from the perspectives of the various groups residing in the territory at the time.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

- (a) describing the role of citizens in ensuring the long-term survival of their community, including cooperation, obligations, rights, and responsibilities; and
- (b) analyzing United States policies on expansion into the southwest, including how they reflected United States civic ideals of the time and conflicted with existing inhabitants of the region.

B. Economics and personal finance.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

- (a) explaining how tribal, state, and local government agencies work to sustain resources in New Mexico;
- (b) discussing New Mexico's economic limitations, barriers to development, and successes;
- (c) examining the pros and cons of economic development in New Mexico;

- (d) demonstrating how early humans compete and cooperate to gather and use resources;
 - (e) demonstrating the impact of competition or cooperation as people gather and use resources;
 - (f) using primary and secondary sources to explain the economic motivation of Spaniards as they enter the lands of and interact with the peoples of the Americas;
 - (g) using primary sources to identify formal and informal actions that impacted local, tribal, and Spanish empirical economies during the Spanish colonial period; and
 - (h) identifying and summarizing the relationship between specialization and interdependence.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding economic systems and models by:
- (a) identifying activities that had an impact on territorial and indigenous economies; and
 - (b) investigating the correlation between the territorial and indigenous economies considering how they are impacted by federal policies.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:
- (a) summarizing the relationship between specialization and interdependence;
 - (b) explaining barriers to trade and how those barriers influence trade among individual people and cultural groups;
 - (c) using and creating charts, graphs, and infographics to demonstrate connections between the economy of New Mexico and Mexico during the Mexican period;
 - (d) investigating the use of trade routes and systems to analyze the economic impact they had on New Mexico and those who traded with New Mexicans; and
 - (e) using and creating charts, graphs, and infographics to demonstrate the economy of territorial New Mexico from various perspectives, such as wealthy or poor people, or immigrant or indigenous people.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of the global economy by using and creating charts, graphs, and infographics to demonstrate connections between the economy of Spain and those of indigenous people.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:
- (a) defining resources from an economic and personal finance perspective;
 - (b) summarizing how the distribution of resources impacts consumerism; and
 - (c) comparing and contrasting choices available to consumers within different cultures as they developed in the Eastern and Western hemispheres throughout history.

C. Geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
- (a) constructing maps of New Mexico based on physical and cultural features using technology resources;
 - (b) explaining the physical and human characteristics of New Mexico, and using this knowledge to define the southwest region of the United States;
 - (c) selecting a province of New Mexico and researching its distinguishing characteristics;
 - (d) using paper and digital maps to ask and answer geographical questions about New Mexico and the southwest region;
 - (e) analyzing maps and charts from the Spanish colonial period to understand El Camino Real as a significant corridor for movement of people, goods, and ideas;
 - (f) comparing various maps or geographical data to describe how the movement of people influenced the division and control of resources; and
 - (g) analyzing maps and charts from the early American territorial period to explain how differing perceptions of places, people, and resources have affected events and conditions of the past.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:
- (a) analyzing patterns of migration of early people as they settled across New Mexico and the southwest region;

(b) analyzing maps and charts about the age of exploration to understand the movement of people, goods, and ideas across the world;

(c) explaining the role of human movement in shaping societies in New Mexico in the past and present;

(d) analyzing maps and charts from the western expansion period to understand interactions between multiple cultural groups;

(e) analyzing land use patterns of Anglo-Americans during the American westward expansion period; and

(f) explaining examples of cultural diffusion into and out of New Mexico from the past and present.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) describing factors affecting location of human activities, including land-use patterns for local, regional, and state communities;

(b) describing how environmental events affect human activities and resources;

(c) analyzing land use patterns of early humans in New Mexico and the southwest region;

(d) explaining how building technologies are designed to respond to the constraints and freedoms of the environment;

(e) explaining how early people adapted to the environment to develop sustainable agricultural practices;

(f) analyzing land use patterns of ancestral Pueblo, Mogollon, and Athabaskan peoples;

(g) connecting cultural adaptations of the Pueblo and Diné people to New Mexicans today;

(h) interpreting the cultural differences between Spaniards and indigenous peoples;

(i) explaining how differing perceptions of places, people, and resources affected events and conditions in New Mexico during the Spanish colonial period;

(j) evaluating practices of land usage and ownership between indigenous peoples and Spaniards; and

(k) analyzing land use patterns of Americans during the territorial period in New Mexico.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) making connections between the past and modern events from the local, territorial, state, or sovereign nations' perspective and predict how the future may be impacted;

(b) explaining the importance of artifacts and oral histories in understanding how prehistoric people lived;

(c) describing the technical limitations of historians and archaeologists studying the distant past;

(d) identifying the housing and religious structures of both the Navajo and Apache;

(e) comparing and contrasting Athabascan technology, agricultural practices, and settlement patterns with those of the Pueblos;

(f) describing the interactions between the Spaniards and indigenous peoples;

(g) comparing and contrasting the revolts and resistance movements under Spanish rule;

(h) analyzing primary and secondary sources to explain what impact Mexican independence had on the area that would become New Mexico;

(i) generating an evidence-based argument that demonstrates how troubles between Texas and the government of Mexico impacted New Mexico;

(j) supporting a claim about the intent of the United States in its westward expansion;

(k) evaluating the significance of short- and long-range trails throughout the lands gained in the Mexican cession; and

- Mexico.
- (1) describing how cultures were challenged by the arrival of groups to New Mexico.
 - (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by identifying the causes and consequences that gave rise to United States government policies impacting the territory of New Mexico.
 - (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:
 - (a) explaining the use of artifacts in dating and understanding the lives of prehistoric peoples;
 - (b) describing the similarities and differences between nomadic and semi-nomadic lifestyles;
 - (c) discussing the importance of resource shortages on the lifestyles of the Mogollon and ancestral Puebloans;
 - (d) creating research questions about art or architecture of the Mogollon or the Pueblo ancestors;
 - (e) creating a model of Mogollon and Pueblo art or architecture;
 - (f) using primary and secondary sources to explain the political and religious motivations of Spaniards as they encounter the land and peoples of the Americas;
 - (g) comparing the patterns of exploration, destruction, and occupation of the Americas by Spaniards;
 - (h) citing textual evidence to interpret the factors that led to resistance and rebellion in Mexico during this time, and debate the aftermath;
 - (i) comparing historians' interpretations of the reasons for the Texas-Santa Fe expedition;
 - (j) categorizing causes and consequences of the United States military invasion of Mexico; and
 - (k) comparing and contrasting primary and secondary sources in conjunction with modern-era events to explore the impact of land ownership throughout New Mexico history.
 - (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspective by:
 - (a) Discussing, debating, or holding academic conversations about both positive and negative evidence of Spanish influence in New Mexico today; and
 - (b) using a variety of sources to contextualize and explain the impact of localized conflicts and other events throughout New Mexico.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

- (1) analyzing how groups maintain their cultural heritage and how we see this heritage through the symbols, traditions, and culture of New Mexico;
- (2) defining and explaining the present demographics of New Mexico;
- (3) evaluating how society's responses to different social identities lead to access or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including education, healthcare, government, and industry;
- (4) identifying the key figures that have contributed to an individual culture and what those individuals accomplished;
- (5) describing the relationship between the cultural heritage of key figures and their personal identity;
- (6) describing what the student wants the world to see when their culture is on display and how to address negative perceptions;
- (7) demonstrating how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures;
- (8) brainstorming ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices;
- (9) describing key figures that have made significant contributions to an individual culture;
- (10) exploring personal, familial, and societal cultures in the modern day;
- (11) discussing how individuals want to be perceived when their culture is on display, and conclude how to address stereotypes;
- (12) using primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impacts of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups;

- (13) identifying how stereotypes influence social perspectives about members of a group;
- (14) developing a claim about the extent to which identity can be modified by personal choice or external forces; and
- (15) identifying, exploring, and describing the traditions, rites, and norms of the groups to which the student identifies as belonging; and explain how these traditions, rights, and norms may have changed over time.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
 - (a) developing compelling (e.g. big idea) questions about a relevant topic of interest; and
 - (b) creating supporting questions from credible sources to expand upon the compelling question.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
 - (a) identifying, locating, and gathering reliable and relevant primary and secondary sources from a variety of media, such as print, digital, multimedia, artifacts, and oral traditions;
 - (b) evaluating primary and secondary sources for fact, opinion, author’s bias, perspective of the creator, and relevance to the topic;
 - (c) analyzing various forms of media to identify polarizing language, logical fallacy, and reasonable judgment; and
 - (d) using a coherent system or structure to evaluate the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) using primary and secondary sources to develop an argument and cite specific textual evidence to support the claim; and
 - (b) making connections between current events, historical materials, and personal experience.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
 - (a) presenting student-developed texts communicating thinking and understanding, including written text, oral presentation, visual representation, and multimedia; and
 - (b) engaging in academic discussions analyzing multiple viewpoints on public issues.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding taking informed action by:
 - (a) examining the relationship between stereotypes, bias, and group identity;
 - (b) exploring opportunities to be an ally and describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally; and
 - (c) engaging in positive civic behaviors to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and communities.

[6.29.11.15 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.15, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.16 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR EIGHTH GRADE:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:
 - (a) examining how challenges the government faced as a result of the articles of confederation resolved at the constitutional convention;
 - (b) making a claim to evaluate how individuals and groups addressed specific problems at various levels to form a new republic; and
 - (c) generating research questions about the nature of civil wars in general, and the role of border states or territories in the United States civil war specifically.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
 - (a) identifying policies of this era that define the relationship between federal, state, and tribal governments through treaties, court decisions, and land acquisition statutes;
 - (b) discussing the impact of significant legislation and judicial precedents in formally perpetuating systemic oppression during the reconstruction era; and

(c) evaluating the impact of individuals and reform movements on the struggle for greater civil rights and liberties throughout early United States history.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

(a) identifying parallels in language or intent (i.e. construct or content) between enlightenment philosophies and the ideas expressed in the declaration of independence; and

(b) citing specific examples of precedents established in the early republic that impact American lives today.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by investigating the causes and effects of diverse ideologies on politics, society, and culture that are associated with immigration and migration.

B. Economics and personal finance.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

(a) using maps and other primary sources to analyze the economic specializations of the 13 colonies; and

(b) identifying and explaining the economic, social, and cultural differences between the north and the south.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by:

(a) comparing and contrasting the efforts of the American and British governments to gain the services of African Americans during the American revolutionary war;

(b) evaluating the incentives for supporting the British or American side from the perspective of enslaved and free African Americans before and during the American revolution; and

(c) analyzing the benefits and challenges associated with rapidly growing urban areas as a result of industrialization.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by drawing diagrams or making models to illustrate significant contemporary economic theories and their connection to the European colonization of the western hemisphere.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:

(a) summarizing a significant economic warfare initiative of the civil war through creative expression; and

(b) explaining how union army strategies and other socio-economic changes at the end of the civil war led to an economic depression in the southeast United States.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:

(a) describing how the use and value of money has changed over time impacting earning, spending, borrowing, and investing (e.g., college funds beginning in elementary years, saving accounts, 401K and IRA accounts);

(b) explaining factors that have impacted borrowing and investing over time (e.g., currency stability, war, and banking practices); and

(c) analyzing and evaluating the impact of taxes on the people of the United States and New Mexico since the end of the civil war.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:

(a) using digital literacy to research and create a presentation about a specific sovereign tribal nation or indigenous peoples group of North America through the five themes of geography: location, place, movement, human-environment interaction, and region;

(b) identifying the major rivers, mountain ranges, and climatic regions of North America within the lands now known as the United States, Canada, the Caribbean, and Mexico;

(c) synthesizing information from two or more different types of maps to support a claim about the global context of colonization;

(d) using population, topographical, political maps, and supporting texts, to generate questions about why the proclamation line of 1763 was established; and

(e) developing a claim about how opinions regarding the proclamation line of 1763 might have varied depending on an individual's occupation and geographic location.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:

(a) giving specific examples to illustrate how one indigenous culture or many indigenous cultures in one region have been shaped by their environment and natural resources available to them;
(b) defining a region by identifying its human and physical features; and
(c) using a topographic or climate map to create a geographic argument about how economic specialization developed in the 13 colonies based on natural resource availability.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:

(a) describing the causes of exploration and expansion into the Americas, by the Europeans during the 15th century;
(b) identifying immigration and emigration factors that motivated groups to move to and within North America through the lens of the 13 colonies and the movement of people there; and
(c) identifying immigration and emigration factors that motivated groups to move to and within the United States during time periods of mass immigration.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) explaining how human activities and physical processes influence change in ecosystems;
(b) engaging in academic discussion around how the ideas and belief systems related to land and resource use impacted the experiences of indigenous peoples and colonizers; and
(c) describing a human-created environmental concern related to western expansion, including different contemporary perspectives and other historical context from this period.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) identifying key explorers, places, and ideas from major European nations of the 15th century, and be able to describe their accomplishments;
(b) critically reading the bill of rights and supporting texts to determine which narratives were excluded from the original document; and use text evidence from the bill of rights and supporting texts to support a student-developed argument by citing specific evidence to track whose rights were added over time;
(c) comparing and contrasting indigenous peoples' assimilation story with later immigrants' stories;
(d) analyzing the development of the women's suffrage movement over time and its legacy; and
(e) making personal connections to immigration stories and experiences in the past and present.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
(a) using evidence from primary and secondary sources to compare and contrast the impacts of European colonization on indigenous populations;

(b) evaluating the effectiveness of Native American alliances during and after the American revolutionary war as a tool to support tribal sovereignty;
(c) using primary and secondary sources to evaluate an instructor-generated claim about the significance of the seven years' war (French and Indian war);
(d) synthesizing text and non-text evidence to persuasively express a perspective on the events leading to the American revolution;
(e) analyzing the motivations and impacts of western expansion and the settlement of the United States;

(f) using graphic organizers to illustrate the causes and effects of the Mexican American war and its consequences on residents living in the "new" United States territories;
(g) using maps and other primary sources, such as the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, to examine determination of geophysical and geopolitical boundaries between the United States and Mexico;
(h) using text evidence to support a claim about how conflicts over slavery led the north and south to war;

(i) generating research questions, brainstorming sources, and gathering evidence to evaluate a claim about the significance of the battle of Glorieta Pass in the western campaign of the American civil war, also known as "la guerra civil Estadounidense"; and

(j) using examples to support an argument about the importance of science and technology during the civil war period.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) drawing a diagram or making a model to illustrate a non-text method an indigenous person or group of indigenous people have employed to record and preserve their history; and

(b) comparing and contrasting the causes, demographics, and results of the American revolution with those of later revolutions inspired by the American revolution.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspective by:

(a) supporting a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of indigenous peoples of North America, and indigenous peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems;

(b) discussing the interactions and exchanges of resources, ideas, arts, and culture between and among different civilizations in the colonial period;

(c) describing why different people may have different perspectives of the same historical event; multiple interpretations should be considered to avoid historical linearity and inevitability; and

(d) examining both sides in debate or academic discussion of politics in response to immigration.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

(a) evaluating the efficacy of formal United States policies of expansion, their effects on sovereign tribal nations' ability to self-govern, and indigenous resistance efforts to preserve tribal sovereignty;

(b) using primary and secondary sources to examine how enslaved people adapted within and resisted their captivity;

(c) describing how the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacist organizations in the United States arose with the intention of maintaining the oppression of specific groups through informal institutions; and

(d) using data to describe demographic shifts as a consequence of the civil war and reconstruction.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by examining history from the perspective of the participants by presenting an original historical fiction piece to profile an immigrant's experience, including the impact of anti-immigrant policies.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by:

(a) developing research questions about the role of religion in the 13 colonies and its impact on nascent American identity, also known as "identidad Estadounidense," and hypothesize how gender roles were impacted by the role of religion in the 13 colonies;

(b) using primary source texts and artifacts as evidence to describe daily life in the 13 colonies by featuring individuals with diverse identities and different perspectives;

(c) generating historically relevant questions and hypothesize sources needed to make an argument about diverse individuals' ability to participate in the war effort for either side;

(d) supporting a claim about the influence of diverse ideologies on politics, society, and culture in early United States history;

(e) describing immigrant and emigrant groups according to gender composition and developing a claim regarding the impact that gender proportionality or disproportionality had on immigrant or emigrant community's culture;

(f) identifying and correcting misconceptions about the emancipation proclamation;

(g) using primary and secondary sources to make an argument about the impact of the western campaign on indigenous peoples; and

(h) using an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by:

(a) analyzing a variety of art media to create an argument about the development of American national identity; and

(b) developing a claim to illustrate how an event of the sectionalism and reform era helps modern students understand current issues and events.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) developing compelling (e.g. big idea) questions about a relevant topic of interest; and

(b) creating supporting questions from credible sources to expand upon the compelling question.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) identifying, locating, and gathering reliable and relevant primary and secondary sources from a variety of media, such as print, digital, multimedia, artifacts, and oral traditions;

(b) evaluating primary and secondary sources for the author's bias, perspective of the creator, and relevance to the topic;

(c) identifying inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory; and

(d) using a coherent system or structure to evaluate the credibility of a source by determining its relevance and intended use.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

(a) categorizing and sequencing significant people, places, events, and ideas in history using both chronological and conceptual graphic organizers;

(b) formulating a claim based on evidence from primary and secondary sources in response to a question;

(c) citing specific textual evidence to support analysis of primary and secondary sources;

(d) using primary and secondary sources to analyze conflicting and diverse points of views on a certain topic;

(e) making connections between current events, historical materials, and personal experience; and

(f) examining how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity, both institutionally and informally.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

(a) engaging in discussion, debate, or academic conversation analyzing multiple viewpoints on public issues;

(b) creating maps, charts, infographics, or other visual media that communicate research findings or other significant information digitally or on paper;

(c) developing informational texts, including analyses of historical and current events;

(d) creating historical fiction texts that accurately portray historical people, places, events, and ideologies of the time to examine history from the perspective of the participants;

(e) using applicable presentation technology to communicate research findings or other significant information; and

(f) conducting a research project to answer a self-generated question of historical significance, and applying problem-solving skills for historical research, to include: use of primary and secondary sources; sequencing, collecting, interpreting, and applying information; gathering and validating materials that present a variety of perspectives; documenting sources in a structured, systematic way; communicating findings in a medium of the student's choice.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) describing the many facets of their identity, including family history and culture, and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups;

(b) identifying facets of personal identity, determining how the student wants to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorming how to address negative perceptions.

(c) describing ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally and engaging in positive civic behaviors in classrooms, schools, and the broader community;

(d) explaining the challenges and opportunities people face when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results; and

(e) synthesizing historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action toward mending, healing, and transforming the future.

[6.29.11.16 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.16, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.17 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL CIVICS:

A. Civics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by:
(a) distinguishing the powers and responsibilities of local, state, indigenous, national, and international civic and political institutions;

(b) developing claims about the purpose, processes, strengths, and weaknesses of the United States government;

(c) evaluating efforts to adapt and redesign the United States constitution and political institutions over time;

(d) analyzing the role of groups without formal decision-making power in influencing change in the United States government;

(e) evaluating multiple sources and cite evidence investigating the relationships between equality, equity, justice, freedom, and order in American constitutional democracy;

(f) investigating relationships among governments, civil societies, and economic markets;

(g) distinguishing historical and current types and systems of government in the United States and abroad.

(h) using data and evidence from multiple perspectives related to federal policy toward indigenous groups to develop an understanding of indigenous and United States government relations over time;

(i) evaluating the way America's founding principles and constitutional structures have influenced initiatives and revisions to foreign policy over time; and

(j) researching multiple sources to think critically about how the United States should conduct itself in international relations.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
(a) evaluating procedures for making governmental decisions at the local, state, national, and international levels in terms of the civic purposes achieved;

(b) evaluating sources to determine how people use and challenge local, state, national, and international laws, to address a variety of public issues;

(c) evaluating public policies in terms of intended and unintended outcomes and related consequences;

(d) analyzing historical, contemporary, and emerging means of changing societies, promoting the common good and protecting rights;

(e) evaluating the United States justice system over time and its impacts on policy, society, economics, and individual rights;

(f) explaining the unique features and processes of New Mexico's constitution;

(g) evaluating the contributions of New Mexico's diverse populations to its governmental structure and outcomes; and

(h) investigating challenges and opportunities within and between different government entities in New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by:

(a) analyzing the impact and the appropriate roles of personal interests and perspectives on the application of civic virtues, democratic principles, constitutional rights, and human rights;

(b) analyzing civic virtues and principles, and the role of the people in creating good governance at various levels;

(c) applying civic dispositions and democratic principles when working with others;

- (d) analyzing founding documents and their impact on national unity over time;
 - (e) evaluating the tensions between personal interests, different cultural groups, and civic responsibilities or the common good overtime.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by:
- (a) participating in civil discourse to promote greater understanding around historical, contemporary, and future opportunities and obstacles;
 - (b) using historical data and evidence related to various actors' interests and motivations to determine their influence on contemporary issues;
 - (c) evaluating how fundamental American principles have been interpreted over time and how they currently shape policy debates;
 - (d) developing strategies for evaluating multiple perspectives about current events, and policy issues;
 - (e) analyzing historic inequalities and evaluating proposed solutions to correct them;
 - (f) applying an effective questioning strategy to evaluate sources intended to inform the public, and consider the effects of choices made by media organizations, including internet social platforms, on elections and social movements;
 - (g) evaluating sources and determining potential bias in the media and how that impacts government decision-making;
 - (h) evaluating the effects of diverse ideologies and the process of political socialization on oneself and society;
 - (i) analyzing rights and obligations of citizens in the United States;
 - (j) critiquing leadership strategies through past and present examples of change-makers;
 - (k) planning and demonstrating some ways in which an active citizen can effect change in the community, state, nation, or world;
 - (l) evaluating citizens' and institutions' effectiveness in addressing social and political problems at the local, state, indigenous, national, or international government; and
 - (m) taking informed action to improve the student's community.

B. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
- (a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and
 - (b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
- (a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and
 - (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
- (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
 - (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
- (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
 - (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.17 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.17, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.18 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL ECONOMICS AND PERSONAL FINANCE:

A. High school economics and personal finance.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:

(a) applying understanding of economic concepts and systems to analyze decision-making and the interactions between consumers, businesses, governments, and societies;

(b) gathering and evaluating sources to explain the relationship between economic decisions and environmental consequences;

(c) using cost-benefit analysis or marginal analysis to evaluate an economic issue;

(d) evaluating how economic principles influence choices and can produce varied outcomes for different individuals or groups;

(e) explaining how and why people make choices to improve their economic well-being;

(f) evaluating the market value of income earned through wages and other activities associated with saving and investing;

(g) comparing the costs and benefits of saving, using credit, or making certain types of financial investments; and

(h) evaluating how and why individuals choose to accept risk, reduce risk, or transfer risk to others.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic systems and models by:

(a) analyzing the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services;

(b) evaluating economic theories for their compatibility with democracy;

(c) comparing the advantages and disadvantages of major economic systems found around the world;

(d) critiquing inequalities that exist in economic systems;

(e) using economic data to evaluate the positive and negative aspects of American capitalism in relation to other economic systems;

(f) analyzing how national and global economic trends and policies impact the state and local economies in New Mexico;

(g) critiquing the impact of globalization on New Mexico and its citizens;

(h) evaluating the impact of environmental externalities on New Mexican communities; and

(i) evaluating opportunities for economic diversification that can significantly impact state and local conditions.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of money and markets by:

(a) explaining how buyers and sellers interact to create markets and market structures;

(b) evaluating how a variety of factors and conditions in a market determine price and the allocation of scarce goods and resources;

(c) evaluating the role played by competition in the market;

(d) evaluating the role of financial institutions in a market economy;

(e) analyzing the role of money in the economy;

- (f) critiquing specific government policies or regulations initiated to improve market outcomes and the consequences, intended and unintended, experienced by individuals, businesses, communities, and states;
 - (g) generating possible explanations for a government role in markets when market inefficiencies exist;
 - (h) evaluating the causes and implications of market failures;
 - (i) explaining how governments establish the rules and institutions in which markets operate at the local, state, tribal, national, and international levels;
 - (j) using economic indicators and data to analyze the health of the national economy in relation to other countries;
 - (k) evaluating how fiscal and monetary policy choices have economic consequences for different stakeholders in a variety of economic conditions;
 - (l) evaluating foreign and domestic issues related to United States economic growth overtime; and
 - (m) explaining the effect of advancements in technology and training on economic growth and standards of living.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by:
- (a) explaining how current globalization trends and policies affect economic growth, labor, markets, rights of citizens, the environment, and resource and income distribution in different nations;
 - (b) explaining how economic conditions and policies in one nation increasingly affect economic conditions and policies in other nations;
 - (c) evaluating how geography, demographics, industry structure, and the rules of economic institutions influence a nation's economic development;
 - (d) analyzing why a country might participate in global trade;
 - (e) connecting how trade agreements between nations have short- and long-term effects; and
 - (f) constructing an argument about how global interdependence impacts individuals, institutions, or societies based on documented evidence.

- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of personal finance decision-making by:
- (a) evaluating strategies individuals use to manage emotions impacting financial decisions;
 - (b) recognizing the responsibilities associated with personal finance decisions, including requirements of contractual obligations;
 - (c) assessing the impact of individual values and behaviors on financial decisions and goals;
 - (d) researching ways online transactions, online banking, email scams, and telemarketing calls can make a person vulnerable to identity theft;
 - (e) analyzing a paycheck and identifying the difference between gross and net income based on various ways tax form W-4 is completed;
 - (i) identifying voluntary (i.e., retirement contributions) and involuntary deductions (i.e., payroll taxes) and how they impact net income;
 - (ii) exploring how federal, state, and local tax deductions are used and benefit a student's way of life;
 - (iii) analyzing the impact of tax liability on income including potential deductions and credits that will impact state and federal income tax;
 - (iv) evaluating types of taxes (e.g., progressive or regressive) and earned benefits with eligibility criteria (e.g., social security, medicare, or medicaid);
 - (v) researching income limits and tax filing software provided for free on IRS free file;
 - (vii) practicing the tax filing process and understand tax forms most commonly used by teenage workers (i.e., W2, 1099 NEC)
 - (f) preparing a budget or spending plan that depicts varying sources of income, a planned saving strategy, taxes, and other sources of fixed and variable spending.
 - (g) assessing ways workers are compensated in different industries and sectors (i.e., fringe benefits, wages, pension plan, independent contractors, freelance, hourly or salaried);

(h) comparing financial institutions service providers, and alternative financial institutions (e.g., banks, credit unions, challenger banks, online banks, investment and brokerage firms, mortgage brokers, small loan companies, online financial institutions, or loan agencies);

(i) explaining what an installment loan is, identifying examples, and exploring how it can cause users to fall into a cycle of debt;

(ii) explaining what a revolving loan is, identifying examples, and exploring how it can cause users to fall into a cycle of debt;

(iii) exploring loan regulation and usage rates across the country;

(iv) calculating the total cost of repaying a loan under various rates of interest and over different time periods; and

(v) calculating and comparing the costs of traditional loan interest rates to loans from alternative financial institutions (i.e., small loan companies);

(i) comparing and contrasting the benefits of pay yourself first and living paycheck to paycheck strategies on financial outcomes;

(i) analyzing how inflation and cost of living impact consumer purchasing and saving power;

(ii) comparing and contrasting different sources of active and passive income, savings, and investment vehicles; and

(iii) comparing and contrasting the opportunity cost and reward of basic saving options (e.g., savings accounts, money market accounts, or certificates of deposit);

(j) explaining what a checking and savings account are used for, including:

(i) understanding the variety of ways for depositing and withdrawing funds in a checking account;

(ii) comparing the checking and savings account fees and services offered at various financial institutions;

(iii) identifying strategies to prevent incurring unnecessary banking fees;

(k) analyze uses of credit that provide financial and personal benefits;

(i) predicting why someone would make a purchase using credit instead of cash;

(ii) analyzing the costs associated with a credit card using the schumer box;

(iii) evaluating options for payment on credit cards and the consequences of each option;

(iv) analyzing a credit card bill and determining what payment(s) is necessary to avoid all interest charges and fees;

(v) understanding national trends in student debt and explaining the differences between different federal and private loans;

(iv) identifying various strategies students can use to finance higher education and how to access student aid through completion of the free application for federal student aid (FAFSA);

(v) identifying steps to prepare for student loan repayment and understand the different loan repayment options available;

(vi) explaining what a mortgage is, why most Americans require one to finance a home, and the challenges of financing mortgages on tribal land;

(vii) using a mortgage calculator to explore how down payment, credit score, interest rate, and term all impact the total cost of buying a home, including closing costs, private mortgage insurance, and escrow accounts;

(viii) distinguishing between fixed- and adjustable-rate mortgages; and

(ix) identifying concepts and strategies to employ for using credit products to build higher credit scores and minimize or eliminate the associated costs of using credit;

(m) explaining how investing may build wealth and help meet financial goals (e.g., stocks, bonds, mutual funds, retirement savings options, or real estate);

(i) illustrating the power of compounding to highlight the importance of investing at a young age;

(ii) exploring how investing principles such as diversification, time horizon, and risk tolerance should be applied to various circumstances;

(iii) calculating the cost of various investment fees (expense ratios, sales loads, advisor fees) over long periods of time and low-fee options such as index funds;

(iv) researching the various ways in which current high school students can be capitalizing on retirement products (i.e., custodial roth IRAs) for their own personal gain;

(v) demonstrating how to buy and sell investments;

(vi) explaining what it means to own stock and how you can make money from it;

(vii) identifying the risk of investing your money in the stock market; and

(viii) understanding the importance of estimating how much you will need for retirement;

(n) reading a credit report, including:

(i) understanding the importance of reviewing one's credit report and the steps to take to find and dispute errors;

(ii) describing how a credit score impacts the ability to borrow money and at what rate;

(iii) understanding the implications of a thin file and how students can build credit and improve their score; and

(iv) understanding which people or organizations may review your credit report and why.

B. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and

(b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

(b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

(a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and

(b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

(a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;

(b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.18 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.18, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.19 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL GEOGRAPHY:

A. High school geography.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of geographic representations and reasoning by:
- (a) analyzing and evaluating the characteristics, purposes, and uses of geographic tools, knowledge, and skills;
 - (b) creating maps to display and explain the spatial patterns of culture and environment;
 - (c) analyzing and interpreting geographic characteristics of cultures, economies, and political systems;
 - (d) interpreting geographic representations to evaluate and explain changes over time; and
 - (e) applying geographic knowledge and geospatial skills to interpret the past and present to make informed decisions.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and religion by:
- (a) analyzing and explaining the reciprocal relationship between physical and geographical locations, and the patterns and processes humans create within them;
 - (b) explaining and evaluating the process of place-making and the development of place-based identity; and
 - (c) identifying, defining, and explaining the distinguishing features of formal, functional, and perceptual regions.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by:
- (a) identifying, evaluating, and explaining the causes, characteristics, and impact of human movement (migration, immigration, emigration) and settlement patterns at the local, national, and global scale;
 - (b) identifying, evaluating, and explaining the causes, characteristics, and impact of diffusion: the spread of ideas, beliefs, cultural practices, traits, language, artifacts, methods, technologies, and diseases across space and over time;
 - (c) describing, analyzing, and comparing how human systems, perceptions, and identities shape places and regions over time;
 - (d) analyzing and predicting how location, place, and region impact the evolution of human perspectives and identities;
 - (e) identifying, evaluating, and predicting how particular historical events and developments shape human processes and systems in a given place or region over time; and
 - (f) predicting future social, political, economic, cultural, spiritual, and environmental opportunities, and obstacles associated with movement, population, decision-making, and perspectives in a given place or region.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:
- (a) making reasoned ethical judgements about people, places, events, phenomena, ideas, or developments, and determining appropriate ways to respond;
 - (b) analyzing shifting United States governmental environmental policies and regulations in response to changing human-environment interactions;
 - (c) evaluating the consequences of human-made and natural catastrophes on global trade, politics, and human migration;
 - (d) assessing the reciprocal relationships between physical environment and culture within local, national, and global scales;
 - (e) evaluating how economic globalization and the scarcity of resources contribute to conflict and cooperation within and among countries;
 - (f) analyzing how the forces of cooperation and conflict within and among people, nations, and empires influence the division and control earth's surface and resources; and
 - (g) assessing how social, economic, political, and environmental developments at global, national, regional, or local levels affect the sustainability of modern and traditional cultures.

B. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:
- (a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and

- (b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.
 - (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
 - (a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and
 - (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.
 - (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
 - (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.
 - (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
 - (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
 - (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;
 - (c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and
 - (d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.
 - (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
 - (a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and
 - (b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.
- [6.29.11.19 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.19, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.20 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL NEW MEXICO HISTORY:

A. Civics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic and political institutions by comparing and contrasting the similarities and differences between the three branches of the federal and state governments.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of processes, rules, and laws by:
 - (a) analyzing the requirements for statehood; and
 - (b) debating whether or not New Mexico's constitution supports bilingualism.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of civic dispositions and democratic principles by defining sovereignty, and distinguishing ways in which the different Native American tribes in New Mexico conduct governmental affairs.

B. Economics.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of economic decision-making by:
 - (a) discussing the sequence of events that led to the great depression and the implementation of new deal programs in New Mexico;
 - (b) illustrating the ways in which the movie and technology industries contribute to New Mexico's economy;
 - (c) connecting the activities of the federal government in the state of New Mexico during the cold war and World War II, to New Mexico's current economy; and
 - (d) identifying the main sources of income for tribes.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of incentives and choices by identifying what makes New Mexico a good location for the space industry.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by summarizing how the United States and Soviet Union emerged from World War II as superpowers, and articulating the difference between communism and capitalism.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by:

(a) identifying the military bases and weapons testing sites in New Mexico; and

(b) giving examples of the different types of sites and activities that would make people want to tour aspects of New Mexico.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by summarizing the impacts that artists have had on New Mexico, and why so many artists choose to live in New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by:

(a) examining the changes in the plains of New Mexico as irrigation and cattle ranches expand into the territory;

(b) analyzing the pros and cons of New Mexico's role in the production of uranium fueled weapons built during the cold war; and

(c) analyzing how New Mexicans maintain an agricultural industry being that we are one of the driest states in the country.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) connecting various disputes that occur as a result of Article X being stricken from the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo;

(b) describing the introduction of the Chinese population into New Mexico;

(c) assessing the changes of the land and society initiated by the railroad system, along with the immigrant population it brought to the New Mexican territory;

(d) explaining how the Homestead Act of 1862 impacted the demographics of New Mexico;

(e) evaluating efforts from the people of New Mexico to become a state, and analyzing outside perspectives to the entrance of New Mexico as a state;

(f) interpreting data or evidence to conduct periodization of key events and contributions by key people to the events that occurred during the early 20th century; and

(g) demonstrating contextualization and interpretation of key events that took place within Native American communities during the civil rights era.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:

(a) examining the causes and effects of the civil war, and the battles that ensued within New Mexico;

(b) explaining how the Homestead Act of 1862 impacted the demographics of New Mexico;

(c) probing the beginnings of the Native American boarding school system, and the ramifications that it had on indigenous communities in New Mexico and abroad;

(d) analyzing the causes and effects of the dust bowl in New Mexico, and how it changed or eliminated communities in New Mexico;

(e) demonstrating ability to use relevant historical evidence to synthesize information regarding the impact of nuclear weapons on people around the world;

(f) demonstrating historical causation by using multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the civil rights era in New Mexico.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:

(a) determining why it was necessary for the United States to purchase the land acquired by the Gadsden purchase, instead of obtaining it by warfare;

(b) demonstrating historical argumentation by using various resources and perspectives to show the impact of World War II on the people of New Mexico, and the impact that our citizens had on the war;

(c) identifying the beginnings of the arms race between the Soviet Union and the United States;

- (d) uncovering what types of activities took place, and what products were produced at Los Alamos national laboratory and Sandia national lab during the cold war and beyond;
- (e) using multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of how water management has changed over the centuries in New Mexico; and
- (f) developing an argument showing the importance of preserving historical sites and New Mexico's resources.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:

- (a) examining the different perspectives from the peoples of New Mexico, and the United States at the time of annexation;
- (b) dissecting the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and evaluating how the different people of New Mexico were addressed and impacted by the document;
- (c) determining the role of race and racism in the acts of land redistribution during the territorial period; and
- (d) appraising the value of New Mexico's historical sites to New Mexico's culture.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

- (a) examining the rights that were guaranteed to citizens in Article IX of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and reason why Article X would have been stricken;
- (b) contextualizing the struggles toward statehood by including the resistance of the Hispanic population to newcomers and the participation of all ethnic populations in the Spanish American war, prior to becoming a state of the United States;
- (c) contrasting the rights given to people that live within a territory versus a state;
- (d) giving examples of how New Mexicans played an active role in military service during the Korean and Vietnam Wars;
- (e) comparing organizations engaged in civil rights work; and
- (f) demonstrating interpretation of critical changes in New Mexico's segregation laws.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by demonstrating knowledge of their family history and cultural background and describing how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.

F. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

- (a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and
- (b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

- (a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and
- (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

- (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
- (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

- (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
- (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.20 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.20, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.21 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL UNITED STATES HISTORY:

A. High school United States history.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) determining the importance and utility of rights versus responsibilities;

(b) determining the characteristics of a revolution and evaluate the American revolution as compared to the French and Haitian revolutions;

(c) examining the short- and long-term impact of settlers, pioneers, frontiersman, and homesteaders on the United States and on sovereign indigenous nations;

(d) analyzing the persistence of the “lost cause of the confederacy” narrative and its long term effects;

(e) evaluating whether the civil war was a “war to free the slaves,” and how successfully the war contributed to the liberation of enslaved people;

(f) evaluating the long-term consequences of the end of reconstruction and the rise of Jim Crow on formerly enslaved people and their descendants;

(g) comparing and contrasting global historical reconciliation and reparations efforts (Denazification, Australia Mabo Case/Terra Nullius) with reconstruction;

(h) examining immigration policy in the United States over time;

(i) evaluating what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States;

(j) examining contemporary labor struggles and populist movements in the United States and around the world;

(k) exploring the short- and long-term effects of the Jim Crow era on African Americans in the north and the south;

(l) determining the effectiveness of post-colonial institutions in ameliorating the effects of colonial rule;

(m) examining the ethics of the suppression of civil liberties during times of conflict and war, past and present;

(n) analyzing the role of the United States in the world and the balance of foreign and domestic priorities;

(o) determining the utility or futility of war;

(p) exploring the ongoing conflict between traditionalism and modernity in American society today, making connections to the movements, ideas and experiences of the past;

(q) comparing and contrasting the conflict between traditionalism and modernity during this period with examples around the world, such as Weimar Germany;

(r) assessing the degree to which new deal programs have been maintained or dismantled over time;

(s) evaluating the impact of new deal programs and policies on diverse groups of people in America, including African Americans and indigenous peoples;

(t) determining the effectiveness of the United States government in averting and responding to similar economic disasters;

(u) analyzing the similarities, differences, and connections between the racial social order in the United States and Germany during this period;

weapons, past and present;

- (v) exploring the ethics of and arguments for and against the use of nuclear weapons, past and present;
- (w) exploring the legacy of “othering” in the United States, including boarding schools, internment camps, and detention centers;
- (x) examining the short- and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America;
- (y) analyzing the impact of red scare ideology on social movements and activists in the United States;
- (z) researching and analyzing issues related to race relations in the United States since the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965;
- (aa) examining the evolution of McCarthyism from the red scare to COINTELPRO;
- (bb) evaluating the influence of 1960s cultural and artistic movements from past to present day;
- (cc) assessing the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people;
- (dd) examining the short- and long-term impacts of criminal justice policy implemented during the presidencies of Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton;
- (ee) examining the push-pull relationship between progressivism and conservatism in America over time;
- (ff) evaluating whether the cold war definitively ended in 1991;
- (gg) examining the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future;
- (hh) analyzing the current state and health of American democracy and creating an action plan to protect American democracy; and
- (ii) examining anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States over time and the experiences of diverse immigrant groups, past and present.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:

- (a) examining the course and consequences of the Columbian exchange;
- (b) describing the evolution and short and long-term consequences of racialized labor and caste systems, such as encomienda and slavery in Spanish and Portuguese America;
- (c) analyzing how various indigenous nations changed as a result of European settler colonialism;
- (d) examining the involvement of indigenous nations in the colonial wars and evaluate the consequences for their societies;
- (e) investigating the causes and effects of the revolutionary war on diverse groups of people in the United States;
- (f) evaluating the social, political, and economic causes and effects of the system of racialized slavery and caste in the United States;
- (g) evaluating the social, political, and economic causes and short- and long-term effects of United States territorial expansion;
- (h) examining the ways in which the United States acquired new territories, including purchases, annexation, treaties, and war;
- (i) explaining the importance of the transportation revolution of the 19th century;
- (j) analyzing the effects of industrial growth throughout antebellum America;
- (k) describing the role of slavery in the economies of the industrialized North and the agricultural south, explaining reasons for the rapid growth of slavery in southern states, the Caribbean islands, and South America after 1800, and analyzing how banks, insurance companies, and other institutions profited directly or indirectly from the slave trade and slave labor;
- (l) analyzing critical policies and events leading to the civil war and connections among them;
- (m) explaining how conflicts over slavery led the north and south to war;
- (n) analyzing the short- and long-term effects of the end of the civil war and reconstruction period;
- (o) explaining the various causes of the industrial revolution;
- (p) making connections among the important consequences of the industrial revolution;

(q) analyzing social, political, and economic reasons groups migrated to and within the United States, including push and pull factors;

(r) analyzing the causes and course of the growing role of the United States in world affairs from the civil war to World War I;

(s) distinguishing between the long-term causes and triggering events that led the United States into World War I;

(t) explaining the course and significance of Woodrow Wilson’s wartime diplomacy, including his fourteen points, the league of nations, and the failure of the treaty of Versailles;

(u) assessing how new technology in transportation, communication, and finance impacted American society;

(v) describing the multiple causes and consequences of the global depression of the 1930s;

(w) assessing the impact and legacy of new deal relief, recovery, and reform programs;

(x) analyzing the events that led to World War II, the major battles of the war and its consequences, and the conferences of allied leaders following the war;

(y) explaining the rise of fascism and the forms it took in Germany and Italy, including ideas and policies that led to the holocaust;

(z) explaining the reasons for American involvement in World War II and the key actions and events leading up to declarations of war against Japan and Germany;

(aa) assessing the social, political, and economic transformation of the United States during World War II.;

(bb) examining the factors that contributed to the cold war;

(cc) evaluating the policy of containment as a response by the United States to Soviet expansionist policies;

(dd) analyzing how United States foreign policy during the Cold War shaped conflicts in Asia and the Americas;

(ee) analyzing the roots of domestic communism and anti-communism in the 1950s, the origins and consequences of, and the resistance to McCarthyism;

(ff) researching and analyzing resistance to integration in white communities, protests to end segregation, and supreme court decisions on civil rights; and

(gg) analyzing how communist economic policies and United States-sponsored resistance to Soviet military and diplomatic initiatives contributed to the fall of the Berlin wall in 1989 and the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:

(a) explaining the ways that indigenous nations expressed and transmitted their beliefs and values;

(b) comparing and contrasting the different ways in which indigenous people have resisted, survived, and adapted to maintain their patterns of community life;

(c) comparing and contrasting the short- and long-term causes and effects of settler colonialism versus classic colonialism;

(d) examining diverse stories of adaptation and resistance to systems of oppression including colonialism and slavery;

(e) evaluating the impact of the key ideals and principles outlined in the foundational documents of the United States on diverse groups of people, including Native Americans and enslaved Africans;

(f) analyzing the convergence of the expansion of colonialism through territorial acquisition and the expansion of chattel slavery in acquired territory;

(g) explaining the causes and effects of this convergence on diverse people within the territories, indigenous peoples, enslaved Africans, people on the borderlands, immigrants;

(h) exploring forms of resistance, adaptation and cultural preservation practiced by enslaved and colonized peoples during this period;

(i) assessing the impact of federal policy toward indigenous nations;

(j) exploring the similarities and differences between reform movements in the United States in the early to mid-19th century;

(k) identifying the ways in which diverse groups of people participated in the civil war, including women and African Americans;

(l) exploring African American economic, political, and sociocultural (educational, artistic, literary) responses to emancipation and reconstruction;

(m) identifying the ways in which gender and sexuality were changing and unchanged during the 19th century;

(n) evaluating the effects of the entry of women into the workforce after the civil war and analyze women’s political organizations;

(o) analyzing the consequences of the continuing westward expansion of the American people after the civil war and evaluate the impact of the 14th Amendment on Native peoples and Asian and European immigrant men and women;

(p) examining the ways that the great migration changed America, exploring the ways that African Americans adapted and resisted;

(q) examining the ways in which art, journalism, literature, and cultural artifacts served as forms of resistance and contributed to the anti-imperialist movement;

(r) examining the legacy and evolution of turn of the century imperialism, including the short- and long-term effects in Latin America, Asia, and the Pacific;

(s) evaluating major reform movements and reformers during the progressive era;

(t) evaluating the inclusivity and exclusivity of progressive era reform movements;

(u) analyzing the campaign for, and the opposition to, women’s suffrage in the late 19th and early 20th centuries;

(v) analyzing the strategies of African Americans to achieve basic civil rights in the early 20th century;

(w) examining the role of colonial peoples, women, indigenous peoples and African Americans during World War I;

(x) exploring the arts, entrepreneurship, and philanthropy of the Harlem renaissance and its connections to the great migration;

(y) evaluating the passage of the 19th amendment from the perspective of diverse groups in American society including white women, African American women, Native Americans, and Asian Americans;

(z) examining the ways in which gender and sexuality norms changed and stayed the same in 1920s America;

(aa) examining the lives and experiences of Mexicans during the 1930s and the relationship of the United States to Mexico;

(bb) evaluating the short- and long-term consequences of the war on diverse groups, such as African Americans, Native Americans, Hispanic Americans, Japanese Americans, and Japanese nationals;

(cc) examining the ways in which gender roles changed and stayed the same for women during the war;

(dd) analyzing state-sponsored persecution and “othering” including anti-semitism and homophobia;

(ee) analyzing the impact of the Vietnam war on the Vietnamese people and on the United States;

(ff) exploring the impact of the cold war on indigenous peoples around the world;

(gg) comparing and contrasting the communist red scare with the lavender scare;

(hh) analyzing the origins, evolution, and goals of the African American civil rights movement and Black Power Movement;

(ii) analyzing the causes, course, and impact on American politics and society of new social and political movements, including consideration of the role of protest, advocacy organizations, and active citizen participation;

(jj) evaluating the significance of the 1990 American Disability Act;

(kk) exploring the movement against police brutality;

(ll) examining the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes;

(mm) creating an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans; and

(nn) evaluating the effects of the representation of diverse people in the United States government including race, gender, sexual orientation, and disability.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:

- (a) explaining the common elements of indigenous societies;
- (b) analyzing facets of indigenous social, political, and economic organization;
- (c) analyzing relationships between indigenous peoples and Spanish, English, French, and Dutch colonizers;
- (d) examining the interactions between English colonizers and indigenous peoples in the 13 Colonies;
- (e) describing the constitutional convention, the roles of specific individuals, and their conflicts and compromises;
- (f) exploring the key ideals and principles outlined in the foundational documents of the United States;
- (g) analyzing major factors that determined the outcome of the civil war;
- (h) exploring the efforts of the federal government and African Americans to forge a new political and social order after emancipation;
- (i) explaining what progressivism meant in the early 20th century through the ideas, actions, and experiences of progressive leaders;
- (j) analyzing the governmental policies of the progressive period, determine which problems they were designed to solve, and assess long and short-term effectiveness;
- (k) analyzing the role and conduct of the United States during the war;
- (l) examining the conflict between traditionalism and modernity as manifested in the major political and economic events in the first two decades of the 20th century;
- (m) summarizing the diplomatic and military policies on the war in Vietnam of Presidents Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon;
- (n) evaluating accomplishments of the civil rights movement and how they served as a model for later feminist, disability, and gender rights movements of the 20th and 21st centuries;
- (o) analyzing the important policies and events that took place during the presidencies of John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon;
- (p) analyzing the presidency of Ronald Reagan (1981–1989) and the rise of the conservative movement in American politics;
- (q) analyzing some of the major technological and social trends and issues of the late 20th and early 21st centuries;
- (r) evaluating the effectiveness of the federal government’s response to international terrorism in the 21st century;
- (s) examining contemporary civil rights struggles;
- (t) analyzing United States government policies to reduce climate disruption; and
- (u) comparing and contrasting the response and plan of the United States government during the Covid-19 pandemic with the AIDS epidemic and the 1918 influenza.

B. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

- (a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and
- (b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

- (a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

- (b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:

- (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and

(b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:

(a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;

(b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;

(c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and

(d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and

(b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.

[6.29.11.21 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.21, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.22 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL WORLD HISTORY:

A. Civics. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of roles and responsibilities of a civic life by:

(1) assessing options for individual and collective action to address local, regional, and global problems;

(2) applying a range of strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and out-of-school civic contexts; and

(3) evaluating methods people use to create, change, expand, or oppose systems of power or authority.

B. Economics.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of global economy by:

(a) evaluating the impact of global interconnectedness on international economic stability and growth; and

(b) analyzing how national and global economic trends and policies impact the state and local economies in New Mexico.

C. Geography.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of location, place, and region by analyzing and explaining the reciprocal relationship between physical and geographical locations, and the patterns and processes humans create within them.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by identifying, evaluating, and explaining the causes, characteristics, and impact of diffusion: the spread of ideas, beliefs, cultural practices and traits, language, artifacts, methods, technologies, and diseases across space and over time.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of human-environmental interactions and sustainability by assessing how social, economic, political, and environmental developments at global, national, regional, or local levels affect the sustainability of modern and traditional cultures.

D. History.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical change, continuity, context, and reconciliation by:

(a) identifying significant transformative moments in world history, analyze the reasons behind their transformative nature, and explain how they continue to shape contemporary global interactions;

(b) tracing political, intellectual, religious, artistic, technological, economic, and social developments in historical periods, and within individual societies;

- (c) identifying patterns of continuity and change over time in world history, focusing on patterns within and between historical eras;
 - (d) examining how historical events and developments were shaped by unique circumstances of time and place, and broader historical contexts; and
 - (e) identifying how individuals, groups, and events in New Mexico’s history that have influenced or were influenced by events in world history.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by:
- (a) identifying and evaluating multiple causes and effects of historical events within world history;
 - (b) distinguishing between long- and short-term causes in developing historical interpretations; and
 - (c) identifying contemporary global issues that influence or are influenced by New Mexicans.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of historical thinking by:
- (a) analyzing and evaluating the values and limitations of primary and secondary sources of information, including digital, with attention to the source, its context, reliability, and usefulness;
 - (b) effectively using and integrating evidence from a variety of diverse sources to evaluate and develop historical claims; and
 - (c) synthesizing historical information to create new understandings.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of critical consciousness and perspectives by:
- (a) using a variety of source materials to compare and contrast treatments of the same topic;
 - (b) examining historical events from the perspectives of diverse groups, including indigenous people, regional, racial, ethnic, class, and gender; and
 - (c) analyzing and evaluating multiple points of view to explain the ideas and actions of individuals and groups.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of power dynamics, leadership, and agency by:
- (a) using historical thinking skills to evaluate historical and contemporary sources of information relating to local, regional, and global problems, and identify challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems;
 - (b) investigating cultural and historical developments within societies with attention to belief systems, ideologies, the arts, science, and technology; and
 - (c) analyzing the complex relationship between dominant cultures and minority groups throughout world history, including constructions of race, ethnicity, gender, nationality, class or religion, reactions, and long-term effects of oppression.

E. Ethnic, cultural, and identity studies. The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by:

- (1) comparing and contrasting the various origins (including indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in world history;
- (2) examining the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups; and
- (3) examining the role colonization, assimilation, or syncretism plays in the evolution of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.

F. Inquiry.

- (1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by creating compelling questions representing key ideas in world history.
- (2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:
 - (a) evaluating the credibility of sources from a range of media (print, internet, audio, visual) by examining origin, author, context, content, and corroborative value; and
 - (b) gathering relevant information from credible sources representing a wide range of views and noting inconsistencies in the information.
- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
 - (a) developing claims and analyzing counterclaims about the significance of historical events using evidence that draws directly and substantively from multiple sources; and

(b) analyzing evidence to detect inconsistencies within the evidence to revise or strengthen claims.

(4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by presenting arguments and explanations that reach a range of audiences using print and oral technologies (e.g. posters, essays, letters, debates, speeches, reports, maps) and digital technologies (e.g. internet, social media, digital documentary).

(5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:

(a) evaluating historical and contemporary sources of information relating to local, regional, and global problems and identifying challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems;

(b) assessing options for individual and collective action to address local, regional, and global problems; and

(c) applying a range of strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and out-of-school civic contexts.

[6.29.11.22 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.22, 12/14/2021]

6.29.11.23 ANCHOR STANDARDS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL ETHNIC, CULTURAL, AND IDENTITY STUDIES:

A. Ethnic, cultural, and identity studies.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of diversity and identity by:

(a) recognizing and valuing the student's group identities without perceiving or treating others as inferior;

(b) identifying and analyzing cultural, differently abled, ethnic, gender, national, political, racial, and religious identities, and related perceptions and behaviors by society of these identities;

(c) identifying and exploring how current traditions, rites, and norms of identity groups have or are changing over time; and

(d) assessing how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of identity in history by:

(a) comparing and contrasting the various origins (including indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in the United States;

(b) examining the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups; and

(c) examining the role assimilation plays in the loss of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.

(3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of community equity building by:

(a) examining historical and contemporary cultural, economic, intellectual, political, and social contributions to society by individuals or groups within an identity group;

(b) investigating how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy; and

(c) evaluating the role of racial social constructs in the structures and functions of a 21st century American society.

B. Inquiry.

(1) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions by:

(a) creating compelling questions representing key ideas within the disciplines; and

(b) developing supporting questions that contribute to an inquiry and demonstrate how, through engaging source work, new compelling and supporting questions emerge.

(2) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by:

(a) gathering relevant information from multiple sources representing a wide range of views while using the origin, authority, structure, context, and corroborative value of the sources to guide the selection; and

(b) evaluating the credibility of a source by examining how experts value the source.

- (3) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of developing claims by:
- (a) identifying evidence that draws information directly and substantively from multiple sources to detect inconsistencies in evidence to revise or strengthen claims; and
 - (b) refining claims and counterclaims attending to precision, significance, and knowledge conveyed through the claim while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both.
- (4) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of communicating and critiquing conclusions by:
- (a) constructing arguments using precise and knowledgeable claims, with evidence from multiple sources, while acknowledging counterclaims and evidentiary weaknesses;
 - (b) constructing explanations using reasoning, correct sequence, examples, and details with significant and pertinent information and data, while acknowledging the strengths and weaknesses of the explanations given its purpose;
 - (c) presenting adaptations of arguments and explanations that feature evocative ideas and perspectives on issues and topics to reach a range of audiences and venues outside the classroom using print, oral, and digital technologies; and
 - (d) critiquing the use of claims and evidence in arguments for credibility.
- (5) The student shall demonstrate an understanding of taking informed action by:
- (a) using disciplinary and interdisciplinary lenses to understand the characteristics and causes of local, regional, and global problems; instances of such problems in multiple contexts; and challenges and opportunities faced by those trying to address these problems over time and place; and
 - (b) applying a range of deliberative and democratic strategies and procedures to make decisions and take action in their classrooms, schools, and out-of-school contexts.
- [6.29.11.23 NMAC - Rp. 6.29.11.23, 12/14/2021]

HISTORY OF 6.29.11 NMAC: [RESERVED]

6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, filed 6/30/2009, was repealed and replaced by 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, effective 12/14/2021.

[EXTERNAL] Comment

Vince Harrison <harrison6109@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 10:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr SENA,

Thanks for taking the time to read and respond if needed. Please do not entertain teaching or applying critical race theories in NM. We are not a country based on slavery, but freedom. Racism has always been around and deals with a deep rooted corrupt heart of man, not a theory. Only love for your fellow man should be taught Teaching critical race theory in schools is wrong. My family and friends are Hispanic, Anglo, black, Native American, and Asian and all except and love each other the same. We are all equal in Gods eyes and still live in the most free country in the world.

Thanks for your time.

God bless, Vince
505.350.1006

[EXTERNAL] "Major" Issues with Sante Fe Proposed Changes mratey <mratey@yahoo.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 11:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; HelpDesk, PED, PED <PED.HelpDesk@state.nm.us>; noreen.scott@rrps.net <noreen.scott@rrps.net>; amanda.galbraith@rrps.net <amanda.galbraith@rrps.net>; kim.vesely@rrps.net <kim.vesely@rrps.net>; catherine.cullen@rrps.net <catherine.cullen@rrps.net>; ghull@rrnm.gov <ghull@rrnm.gov>

Cc: Karim Ratey <karimratey@yahoo.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NMPED,

In regards to the proposed change to New Mexico's K-12 Social Studies curriculum, please consider removing "ALL" discussion relating to identity, gender, and sexuality (133 mentions... really ??).

As you are aware, this is a highly charged and personal topic... it is not your place to navigate around parents and push that garbage onto our children.

My family moved to New Mexico only one year ago and up until now had been considering a long-term stay, despite NM's relentless fight with Mississippi to place last in just about every national quality of life statistic.

My wife and I both have Masters degrees and considering PhD programs, we contribute significantly to NM's economic well being, and have been encouraging others from Colorado's Space community to relocate to Abq and fill Space related jobs with us on Kirtland AFB. If Sante Fe passes this change in an attempt to force unwanted social change, perhaps New Mexico wasn't right for us after all. My family will certainly be following a different path:

- Home school
- Private school
- Relocating to a different state

I will be taking highly coveted paid time off to drive up from Abq to attend the public hearing on 12 Nov.

I've CC'd several Rio Rancho school board members in addition to our mayor on this email, I apologize in advance for the shotgun approach. We do not take this proposed change lightly.

Please reconsider this dangerous move.

Marc Ratey
719-685-6360

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Albert Cheng <albert.cy.cheng@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 11:22 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Thank you for opening up this discussion to us concerned parents. We know that you will take what we have to say with the utmost respect and serious consideration.

My main point of concern is:

Theme 5 Social Identity

K.22. Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.

K.23. Describe ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not.

2.28. Describe ways we are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.

3.28. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups.

5.30. Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups.

5.31. Explain how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.

6.20. Identify how differences and similarities between diverse groups impact perspectives.

6.22. Explain how the treatment of people (past and present) shaped group identities and cultures.

7.28. Evaluate how society's responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.

7.49. Describe the relationship between their cultural heritage(s) and their personal identity/ identities.

7.50. Identify what students want the world to see when their culture is on display, and how to address negative perceptions.

7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.

7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.

7.72. Discuss how individuals want to be perceived when their culture is on display, and conclude how to address stereotypes.

7.82. Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impacts of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups

7.93. Identify how stereotyping influences social perspectives about members of a group.

7.94. Develop a claim about the extent to which identity can be modified by personal choice or external forces.

7.103. Identify, explore, and describe the traditions, rites, and norms of the groups to which the student identifies as belonging; and explain how these traditions, rights, and norms may have changed over time.

9-12.NMH.18. Demonstrate knowledge of their family history and cultural background and can describe how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.

9-12.ECI.13. Recognize and value my group identities without perceiving or treating others as inferior.

9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement

9-12.ECI.20. Examine historical and contemporary cultural, economic, intellectual, political, and social contributions to society by individuals or groups within an identity group.

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

9-12.ECI.22. Evaluate the role of racial social constructs in the structures and functions of a 21st Century American society.

In what ways will our Kindergartners be told that they belong to different groups?

My 6 year old child and her friends truly do not see race/ethnicity or even that anyone around her belongs to a different group. It is VERY concerning that she will be taught she doesn't belong with one of her classmates due to an arbitrary social group to which the curriculum relegates her.

This type of in group out group mentality will only further divide our communities. Certainly traditions and families differ, but we are all New Mexicans and Americans. It would be much more beneficial to view these ideas through the lens of tolerance. Instead of group identification, of which our young students have no concept, students would be benefited by being taught the common values that make us all citizens. A basic understanding of friendship, unity, tolerance of others' cultures and speech would go far in helping our students unify as a community.

We can address the cultural and ethnic issues of America's past without specifically forcing students to identify with any particular group. It seems to me that the curriculum aims at dividing our students based on race/ethnicity and then telling them that they are either oppressor or oppressed.

Please do not push more division among our children. We need to find ways to repair our common cultural identity as Americans. School is the best place to introduce the idea that we are all in this together and to build a more equitable world. My 6 year old is kind to everyone and stands up for those who get bullied around her. She does not do so based on any kind of group identification. Please do not teach her that she or others are different based on race.

Thank you,
Albert Cheng

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment- Rule Change - NMAC 6.29.11

Eloy Francisco Macha <francisco@macha4lcps.net>

Tue 10/12/2021 1:33 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern / NM PED Policy Division -

My name is Eloy Francisco Macha, and have established my residency in Dona Ana County since 2016.

Please include my public comment / rule feedback as allowed by PEDs' Policy and Legislative Affairs Rule Notification system -

The proposed replacement of NMAC 6.29.11 will CHANGE our State's Social Studies Curriculum by embracing and incorporating themes of oppression, class struggle and victimhood into our K-12 social studies programs. The Guiding Principles and the proposed 122 page standard causes serious concerns on whether or not we are going to teach factual and unbiased history to our students. It also raises a question if we will be embarking on the politicization of our Education System. As an immigrant to this country, and a product of the Public School System of the late '80s and early '90s, I distinctly remember my educators keeping their own ideology and political views private with their sole focus on facts when they presented their curriculum and material in Social Studies, Sciences, Math, and English, amongst others. NM PED's adopted guiding principles and proposed standards will have our Social Studies educators teaching a single ideology and a slanted political view as they teach our students based on this new proposed Social Studies curriculum. Not only is this the WRONG set of guiding principles, WRONG set of standards, it is also the WRONG time to embark on this proposal. New Mexico's Education System is afflicted by a number of more pertinent and highly impactful issues such as being 50th in Education across our country, having our state-wide reading and writing comprehension rates in the low 30%'s, and not being able to attract, and retain, good-quality employment opportunities for our recent high school and college graduates within our state. This proposed rule change will not address our low education ranking, will not address our low comprehension rate, and it will not improve our post K-12 students employment/employability outcomes. This proposed rule change needs to be stopped from being implemented.

Thank You.

Eloy Francisco Macha
Candidate, LCPS School Board District 3 francisco@macha4lcps.net
www.macha4lcps.net

[EXTERNAL] Feedback for Social Studies Changes

Mona Madison-Botter <mmad2527@aol.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 2:34 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hi,

I would like to provide feedback as a citizen and parent of a child (and two graduates) in the Rio Rancho school district.

I have skimmed through the document at the middle school and high school levels as that is the age group for our last child in the NM school system. It is hard to discern what the potential hot topics are without knowing how the material will actually be presented in the classroom.

My hope is that NMPED is trying to become more relevant with this update and set aside social ideologies within the education of our children. I believe the leadership needs to guide our educators in what their role should be to the children they are teaching. Teachers are a crucial part of our society and are tasked with an enormous burden in their profession. However, I believe we must insist that their job is to present facts/history/material in a completely unbiased and neutral tone. I believe we have allowed social and political biases to permeate the classroom/schools and it has added to the polarization of our communities.

Topics should always have both sides presented and not be slanted for or against any ideology. I refer to Section 9-12 ECI 16 & 18, 19 below. I do not believe children should assume advantages or disadvantages based on any category they may or may not fall in. Are there inherent "privileges" or "disadvantages" in any category? Sure. However, we should not allow our children to be "defined" but such categories. Have there been factual privileges or disadvantages systemically or culturally in the past? Sure. However, we can not assume that we are currently limited by any of these. We should not avoid, nor re-write, history and likewise, we should not teach the past will limit our future.

I would like to see our children taught by comparing what happened to how we've grown as a country. Let there be discussion on what we can learn from our history's past mistakes and become stronger and better, not defined by victimization.

Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 20. Identity in History	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.
Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 20. Identity in History	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.ECI.17. Compare and contrast the various origins (Indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in the United States. ● 9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups. ● 9-12.ECI.19. Examine the role assimilation plays in the loss of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.

I would also like to address sections 9-12 US123 & 9-12 US 125. On the surface this seems to negatively slant conservatism. I would like to assume the "impacts" of conservatism will be reviewed for the positive and negative impacts. Again, if conservatism is being studied for the short and long-term effects, then equally the impact of progressivism should be studied for it's positive and negative impacts.

an understanding of.
History 14. Historical Change, Continuity, Context, and Reconciliation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.US.123. Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people. ● 9-12.US.124. Examine the short- and long-term impacts of criminal justice policy implemented during the presidencies of Ronald Raegan and Bill Clinton. ● 9-12.US.125. Examine the push-pull relationship between progressivism and conservatism in America over time. ● 9-12.US.126. Evaluate whether the Cold War definitively ended in 1991.

In conclusion, I would like NMPED to support the development of well-rounded children to have a general knowledge of diverse materials, but not be influenced with social or political agendas/ideologies/biases on any side by their educators. My hope is teachers are able to present material to engage our children in productive conversation and encourage our future generation to think, grow, and learn.

Thank you for your time and efforts in bettering the education for our children.

Blessings,

Mona Madison-Botter

505-506-0720 cell / #283504

High Desert Home Lending, Inc #274033

& expRealty #44371

IMPORTANT NOTICE: Never trust wiring instructions sent via email. Always independently confirm wiring instructions in person or via a telephone call to a trusted and verified phone number. Never wire money without double-checking that the wiring instructions are correct. CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This e-mail message, including any attachments, is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential and privileged information protected by law. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender by reply e-mail and destroy all copies of the original message.

[EXTERNAL] Public Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Standards

Trish L Hernandez <daisy31673@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 3:31 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I like the new proposed rule for Social Studies Standards. I believe it is important for us to understand our history and its consequences so we don't make the same mistakes twice and build on what has worked in the past. I hope our children can learn and understand why we have inequalities and what we can do to help change them and they can celebrate and be proud of their differences. I would like to see more education on our country's founding and democracy and the fragility of it.

My concern is that when these new standards are implemented, how will you handle those that started on the previous standards to ensure they don't miss out on subject matter?

Thank you for your work and consideration.

Trish

[EXTERNAL] Public comment

Melissa Chavez <melissachavez16@yahoo.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 4:52 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

After reviewing the proposed changes, it is clear that this is politically motivated. Young children need to be worried about learning history, second to math and science. Young children don't need to be worried about identities when they can barely spell their own names. New Mexico is in the bottom of education for a reason. Adding more ridiculous blaming of one race is not going to fix that. Keep your politics out of school.

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] Proposed curriculum changes

Jason Anglin <jpanglin13@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 8:33 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I will keep this brief, but I want to simply beg of you to keep "Critical Theory" out of our children's curriculum. These viewpoints advance the message that race or ethnicity is the primary defining characteristic of any individual. This introduces the notion of race differentiating people into the minds of our youth, who would likely never see their peers in terms of race and color on their own. Critical Theory minimizes the concept of judging people by the content of their character, and puts a disproportionate emphasis on race. Critical Theory may have a place in high-level academic settings, but the K-12 environment is not an appropriate venue. In most cases, K-12 students have not yet acquired the academic and emotional maturity to properly appreciate the nuances of Critical Theory principles.

I am the parent of three school-age children, and we have been lifelong residents of New Mexico. It would be life-altering, but I feel strongly that the racial emphasis in the proposed curriculum is inappropriate for the state's youth, and I would be forced to move my family to a state that does not promote racially motivated "education."

Again, please reject Critical Theory in our public schools!

Thank you,
Jason Anglin

[EXTERNAL] New social studies

Alyssa Howells <howellsalyssa83@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 9:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I don't think we need to change our social studies, critical race theory does not belong in our community or schools

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Fw: "Your View" in the LC Sun- Rule is 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

CCIAWINUSA <cciawinusa@protonmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 9:39 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

This letter, from Associate Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction Tomlinson was published by the LC Sun as YOUR VIEW on 3 October 2021.

Ms Tomlinson is a paid Sr LCPS employee who wrote and identified herself as such. She was one of 60 "educators" (her comments).

Reading her letter, she gives the perception she works as an advocate for the progressives by focusing on the narrative being pursued by the progressive movement. Coincidence or planned, I dont know. You decide.

No mention of the America First Movement, Tea Party and other conservative events to give our students an equal view of both ideological sides.

A question for all parents, is how many different views were presented in the revision ? And why is a paid public official allowed to publish this type of letter and by doing so, give the perception she, as a public school official, endorses a liberal agenda when educators are supposed to be neutral and objective and not "cheerleaders" for the progressives. Or else I am mistaken and we should be even more concerned as to what our kids are being taught.

Do we really trust Ms Tomlinson to present an objective and neutral view of the historical events she is highlighting ? You, the parent decide.

In addition, her comment regarding "a misinformation campaign has already begun with goal of creating fear and division among New Mexicans, adds fuel to the Memo from AG Garland's response to the letter from the NSBA" As these acts of malice, violence, and threats against public school officials have increased, the classification of these heinous actions could be the equivalent to a form of domestic terrorism and hate crimes,".

It can be argued that Ms Tomlinson's public comments on 3 October 2021 are intentionally or coincidentally designed to cancel or stifle any anticipated criticism against the agenda she is highlighting. The NSBA letter was written 29 Sept 2021 and the AG memo was published 6 days later on 4 October 2021. Was the timing of Ms Tomlinson's letter coincidental or ???

"many public school officials are also facing physical threats because of propaganda purporting the false inclusion of critical race theory within classroom instruction and curricula. This from the memo from the NSBA to President Biden. You, the parent decide if racial divisiveness disguised as CRT is being taught and in the revisions ?

In addition NSBA specifically solicits the expertise and resources of the U.S. Department of Justice, Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), U.S. Department of Homeland Security, U.S. Secret Service, and its National Threat Assessment Center3. As these acts of malice, violence, and threats against public school officials have increased, the classification of these heinous actions could be the equivalent to a form of domestic terrorism and hate crimes.

<https://www.nsba.org/-/media/NSBA/File/nsba-letter-to-president-biden-concerning-threats-to-public-schools-and-school-board-members-92921.pdf?la=en&hash=642B7B91E0029BA4427D0F38D7054A007537160F160F>

<https://reason.com/2021/10/06/ag-merrick-garland-fbi-critical-race-theory-parents-schools-domestic-terrorists/>

In my opinion, is the heavy hammer of the DOJ, FBI, DHS, SS and NTAC being waved in order to silence or cancel parents opposing the indoctrination of their kids ? You decide...

Thank you

Las Cruces Sun-News | Page A06 Sunday, 3 October 2021

 Bookmark and Share

Revised social studies standards are long overdue

Your view Wendi Miller Tomlinson

Guest columnist Significant historical events have occurred since New Mexico last revised state standards for teaching social studies to our children, including:

- 9/11 - The Afghan War - The Arab Spring - The Great Recession Significant social movements also occurred in that time, including:

- Black Lives Matter - #MeToo - Climate activism - LGBTQ rights In other words, it's about time the Public Education Department revised social studies standards to assure that our kids have a historically accurate and up-to-date education. This work is long overdue.

That's why, as a former U.S. history teacher, I volunteered to join educators from all over New Mexico to serve on the standards revision committee. Among this team were experts in all the sub-disciplines: history, geography, civics and economics.

We outlined a three-step process for this work, which began July 2020. First, we collected and evaluated research and data from the field and promising practices from the classroom. Next, we reviewed our current standards to identify gaps and needs. And finally, we wrote the revised standards — work that wrapped up this summer.

Vigorous discussions occurred throughout the process, leading to minor tweaks and broad revisions as all 60 of us worked toward one significant goal: To create a framework to provide New Mexico children at every grade level with up-to-date, fact-based and culturally inclusive and responsive instruction that will prepare them for college, career and civic participation. I am proud of the revised standards, which the New Mexico Public Education Department posted on its website on Sept. 2. Now it's the public's turn to let us know what you think. The public can submit written comments ( rule.feedback@state.nm.us) through Nov. 12 or attend the public hearing that da.

Before you do, please read the standards and judge for yourself — a misinformation campaign has already begun with a goal of creating fear and division among New Mexicans.

The truth: There's nothing scary about factual information. There's nothing scary about including everyone in our country's narrative. And there's certainly nothing scary about teaching children to reflect on the issues and challenges that have plagued us in the past and most likely rest in their hands to be resolved.

Let's be sure we give them the tools they need to do so. These proposed standards are one such tool.

Wendi Miller Tomlinson is deputy superintendent in Las Cruces Public Schools and a former U.S. history teacher. She served on the committee of educators who revised New Mexico's social studies standards over the last two years.

Las Cruces Public Schools Associate Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction Wendi Miller-Tomlinson says social studies changes are overdue. Algernon D'Ammassa/Sun-News

 Bookmark and Share

Powered by TECNAVIA Copyright © 2021 Las Cruces Sun-News

Juan D Garcia
575-449-5821
Coalition of Conservatives in Action (CCIA)
CCIAWINUSA@PROTONMAIL.COM
<https://conservativesinaction.org/>

----- Original Message -----

On Sunday, October 3rd, 2021 at 21:06, CCIWINUSA <cciawinusa@protonmail.com> wrote:

Ms Tomlinson

I read your Oped today and was concerned and curious why the topics in the editorial only address "Progressive favorites". Wasn't the Tea Party Movement significant? Or perhaps the America First populist movement? Or American Exceptionalism? Of course, they may be part of the revision, you just chose not to touch them on your article.

Instead, the ones you listed give concerned parents the impression our educators are not objective and are "progressive activists" which may be part of the reason for your quotes below.

" — a misinformation campaign has already begun with a goal of creating fear and division among New Mexicans".

I am not calling you a "partisan activist", its just the "optics" of your piece that give many concerns.

OTH, the article has you as an employee in the LCPS which I assume means we should have non partisan educators who are willing to present both sides of history to our kids. Not just selected subjects to push a narrative.

For a "citizen/parent" reading your article while drinking coffee on a Sunday morning, this Oped comes across as a heavily progressive/partisan sponsored social studies standards revision.

The truth: There's nothing scary about factual information. I totally agree with you as long as we have both sides. And I "trust" both sides were presented.

Hope after inspecting the revisions, my concerns are for naught.

Thank you for your time

Juan D Garcia
575-449-5821
Coalition of Conservatives in Action (CCIA)

CCIAWINUSA@PROTONMAIL.COM
<https://conservativesinaction.org/>

[EXTERNAL] CRT parent opinion

Rachel Salyers <rombsalyers@gmail.com>

Tue 10/12/2021 10:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I have done quite alot of research on the critical race theory that is being proposed by the PED. I am 100% AGAINST it!. First off the purposed plan you have up on the site is so vague. What does it even mean when you have children as young as kindergartens learning about "groups" and "identifying" ? Identifying what? Their gender? Their ethical background? Whats political right at the moment?? More explanation would be great. Is this a way to separate the kids? Your going to have them in their groups?? I have done research where the crt is already being taught and it seems like the teachers and curriculum are pushing hate and more or less a one way of thinking..or really its whoever originally wrote this agendas way of thinking. There is so much extreme cancel culture going on right now, I don't believe that this would be a positive curriculum. Teach the kids how to read, write, math, science, and history! The PED shouldn't be forcing this type of agenda, our state is ranked LAST in education! Maybe have better goals for the basics first.

Thank you for your consideration,

R. Salyers

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards feed back

Jereme Woodruff <jereme.woodruff@elidaschools.net>

Wed 10/13/2021 8:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attached is a document where my observations and concerns with much of the proposed standards are spelled out.

As a whole these new standards are cumbersome, wordy, and for the normal person or parent hard to understand. We are proposing going from 29 pages of standards to 129 pages. Prior to this new proposal I thought the general consensus was to simplify the standards and to make them more easily understood, teachable, and less complicated; these current proposals seem to do just the opposite. In general the theme and spirit of these new proposals seek to reshape our understanding of History, Civics, and Geography from being tools by which we understand the past and the world we live in, and use that understanding to make sense of things according to each students' family history, tradition and community beliefs and cultures into a tool by which those in power use these subjects to indoctrinate students to the "proper" way of thinking and acting according to the state.

There is nothing more dangerous to a free society than an education system that seeks to indoctrinate instead of educate, for this reason alone these standards should not be adopted. Below is a copy of a breakdown of some of the worst parts of the proposed standards, a copy of this is also attached in a word document.

Thank You for considering my recommendation,

Jereme Woodruff
History teacher
Elida, NM

5th Grade

Theme 2: Inequality and Justice in the US

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

Civics 3. Civic Dispositions and Democratic Principles

- 5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

The focus on equity in modern theory seeks to change the historical understanding that the founding documents were seeking to provide equality in opportunity into equality in outcome; or it suggests that the founding documents were flawed because they did not provide for equality in outcome over equality in opportunity.

6th Grade

Theme 6: Encounters and Exchanges: 600 CE–1300 CE

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of

History 14. Historical Change, Continuity, Context, and Reconciliation

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

- 6.52. Examine instances of conflict, oppression, human rights violations, and genocide in Medieval times as well as responses to these violations.

This is an ideologically loaded standard that requires the student to make a value based assessment of historical events and people but base their assessment on modern moral and ethical standards, not on the standards of the time.

7th Grade

Inquiry

Anchor Standard

The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 26. Take Informed Action

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to

- 7.12. Explore opportunities to be an ally and describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally.
- 7.13. Engage in positive civic behaviors to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and communities.

The entirety of the Anchor point 26 needs to be removed. While the teaching of history and social studies should include some encouragement in civic participation such as voting and contacting legislatures, the focus should be more on how to do those types of things. Instead this standard essentially pushes for the students to adhere to a state sponsored set of morals and ideals and to actively participate in pushing those ideals in the public place.

Theme 4: The Spaniards Enter the Americas (c. 1490s CE – c. 1590s CE) (Continued)

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 19. Diversity and Identity

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

- 7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.

Again this is an ideologically loaded standard that requires the student to make a value based assessment of historical events and people but base their assessment on modern moral and ethical standards not on the standards of the time. In addition this standard essentially pushes for the students to adhere to a state sponsored set of morals and ideals and to actively participate in pushing those ideals in the public place.

8th grade

Inquiry

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 23: Gather and Evaluate Sources

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to

- 8.5. Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.

While it is true that some maps are biased in that they frame a certain area in the center of the map, the more important idea that should be studied is how different map projections change the scale of distances and land masses. It is also important to study WHY different types of maps are made, what purpose did they serve. By focusing on “cultural memory” the emphasis is on how the map makes people feel which is subjective and arbitrary, instead of factual evidence that can be proven or disproven.

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 25. Communicate and Critique Conclusions

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to

- 8.18. Conduct a research project to answer a self-generated question of historical significance, and apply problem-solving skills for historical research, to include: use of primary and secondary sources; sequencing, collecting, interpreting and applying information; gathering and validating materials that present a variety of perspectives; documenting sources in a structured, systematic way; communicating findings in a medium of the student's choice.

This is not a standard, it is an assignment... This is a problem with many of the proposed standards, they are written more as assignments or direct questions to be answered rather than standards that need to be achieved.

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 26. Take Informed Action

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

- 8.20. Identify facets of personal identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

- 8.21. Describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally and engaging in positive civic behaviors in classrooms, schools, and the broader community.
- 8.23. Synthesize historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action towards mending, healing, and transforming the future

The entirety of the Anchor point 26 needs to be removed. While the teaching of history and social studies should include some encouragement in civic participation such as voting and contacting legislatures, the focus should be more on how to do those types of things. Instead this standard essentially pushes for the students to adhere to a state sponsored set of morals and ideals and to actively participate in pushing those ideals in the public place.

HS Civics

The entirety of this section is terrible.

1 mention each of the US Constitution and New Mexico Constitution.

No significant mention if at all of Federalism or separation of powers, how elections work, Bill of Rights, the amendment process, or any standard that requires students to demonstrate the knowledge of those things.

No mention of understanding the roots of American representative democracy, the separate functions of states vs national governments, or the natural rights of man.

The section instead focuses almost entirely upon a contemporary view point of activism and social change with a progressive political view point enforced via the standards.

Instead of focusing on teaching students the functions of the government and how to interact with the processes of elections and lobbying their representatives, understanding which level of government handles which duties, the standards focus on directing the students to be “change-makers” and “allys” towards a progressive agenda.

This is not education, it is indoctrination.

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Geography 12. Movement, Population, and Systems

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

9-12.Geo.26. Predict future social, political, economic, cultural, spiritual and environmental opportunities, and obstacles associated with movement, population, decision-making, and perspectives in a given place or region.

How? How is this to be evaluated in the classroom? What is a spiritual opportunity in relation to a geographical place or region? What are the factors that students must weigh when trying to make a prediction about geographic regions when it comes to determining movement, population growth or decline, etc. This is vague and really seems to not have a valid educational point and is being added only to appeal to some sort of preconceived agenda.

9-12.Geo.27. Make reasoned ethical judgments about people, places, events, phenomena, ideas, or developments, and determine appropriate ways to respond.

Again for what educational purpose is this being added? This is a blatant attempt to push a moral standard in the classroom that does not come from the student’s family, culture, or community. The study of social studies should focus on facts, what happened when to whom and for what reason, not on making a moral judgement of the event or people involved.

Theme 3: Statehood and Functions of State/Tribal Governments

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

History 18. Power Dynamics, Leadership, and Agency

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

9-12.NMH.33. Contrast the rights given to people that live within a territory vs. a state.

Rights are not given to people by governments; people’s rights should be protected by the government.

HS U.S. History

This section is mislabeled. As the standards are written it should be labeled as the history of native indigenous people of North America and their European oppressors.

Absolutely minimal mention of the history of how the US was formed, the colonies, founding documents or ideas.

There is not a single standard toward knowing the impact of important figures or even specific documents such as:

George Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, neither Roosevelt is mentioned much less Adams or even George Washington Carver. The Bill of Rights, Articles of Confederation, Gettysburg address, Monroe doctrine, etc. Any mention of major world or US events such as the American Revolution, World War I or II are relegated to minor mentions and general standards while an inordinate amount of attention is put upon things like “changing gender and sexuality norms” or “Evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States.”

The American Revolution is not framed and taught as a unique event in the history of the world that later inspired other such revolutions but rather is relegated to just one of several revolutions that are to be compared and contrasted.

In this section the forced indoctrination of students into the modern Progressive “woke” culture comes in full force. With these new standards the history of the United States is transformed from being focused on major events, people, and ideas that shaped, transitioned, and changed the country over time, to being focused almost solely on minority groups and their oppression either real or imagined. The new standards demand that the teaching of US History becomes a review of how oppressed minority populations were across every aspect of American historical period. These standards present a picture of a United States that is not a country with lasting ideals of equality, justice, and opportunity, but rather a country that is merely the perpetuator of one long train of oppressive abuses seeking to enrich a certain privileged class (whites) at the expense of people of color.

5th Grade

Theme 2: Inequality and Justice in the US

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

Civics 3. Civic Dispositions and Democratic Principles

- 5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

The focus on equity in modern theory seeks to change the historical understanding that the founding documents were seeking to provide equality in opportunity into equality in outcome; or it suggests that the founding documents were flawed because they did not provide for equality in outcome over equality in opportunity.

6th Grade

Theme 6: Encounters and Exchanges: 600 CE–1300 CE

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of

History 14. Historical Change, Continuity, Context, and Reconciliation

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

- 6.52. Examine instances of conflict, oppression, human rights violations, and genocide in Medieval times as well as responses to these violations.

This is an ideologically loaded standard that requires the student to make a value based assessment of historical events and people but base their assessment on modern moral and ethical standards, not on the standards of the time.

7th Grade

Inquiry

Anchor Standard

The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 26. Take Informed Action

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to

- 7.12. Explore opportunities to be an ally and describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally.
- 7.13. Engage in positive civic behaviors to make decisions and take action in classrooms, schools, and communities.

The entirety of the Anchor point 26 needs to be removed. While the teaching of history and social studies should include some encouragement in civic participation such as voting and contacting legislatures, the focus should be more on how to do those types of things. Instead this standard essentially pushes for the students to adhere to a state sponsored set of morals and ideals and to actively participate in pushing those ideals in the public place.

Theme 4: The Spaniards Enter the Americas (c. 1490s CE – c. 1590s CE) (Continued)

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 19. Diversity and Identity

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

- 7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.

Again this is an ideologically loaded standard that requires the student to make a value based assessment of historical events and people but base their assessment on modern moral and ethical standards not on the standards of the time. In addition this standard essentially pushes for the students to adhere to a state sponsored set of morals and ideals and to actively participate in pushing those ideals in the public place.

8th grade

Inquiry

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 23: Gather and Evaluate Sources

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to

- 8.5. Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.

While it is true that some maps are biased in that they frame a certain area in the center of the map, the more important idea that should be studied is how different map projections change the scale of distances and land masses. It is also important to study WHY different types of maps are made, what purpose did they serve. By focusing on “cultural memory” the emphasis is on how the map makes people feel which is subjective and arbitrary, instead of factual evidence that can be proven or disproven.

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 25. Communicate and Critique Conclusions

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to

- 8.18. Conduct a research project to answer a self-generated question of historical significance, and apply problem-solving skills for historical research, to include: use of primary and secondary sources;

sequencing, collecting, interpreting and applying information; gathering and validating materials that present a variety of perspectives; documenting sources in a structured, systematic way; communicating findings in a medium of the student's choice.

This is not a standard, it is an assignment... This is a problem with many of the proposed standards, they are written more as assignments or direct questions to be answered rather than standards that need to be achieved.

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Inquiry 26. Take Informed Action

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

8.20. Identify facets of personal identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

- 8.21. Describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally and engaging in positive civic behaviors in classrooms, schools, and the broader community.

- 8.23. Synthesize historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action towards mending, healing, and transforming the future

The entirety of the Anchor point 26 needs to be removed. While the teaching of history and social studies should include some encouragement in civic participation such as voting and contacting legislatures, the focus should be more on how to do those types of things. Instead this standard essentially pushes for the students to adhere to a state sponsored set of morals and ideals and to actively participate in pushing those ideals in the public place.

HS Civics

The entirety of this section is terrible.

1 mention each of the US Constitution and New Mexico Constitution.

No significant mention if at all of Federalism or separation of powers, how elections work, Bill of Rights, the amendment process, or any standard that requires students to demonstrate the knowledge of those things.

No mention of understanding the roots of American representative democracy, the separate functions of states vs national governments, or the natural rights of man.

The section instead focuses almost entirely upon a contemporary view point of activism and social change with a progressive political view point enforced via the standards.

Instead of focusing on teaching students the functions of the government and how to interact with the processes of elections and lobbying their representatives, understanding which level of government handles which duties, the standards focus on directing the students to be “change-makers” and “allies” towards a progressive agenda. This is not education, it is indoctrination.

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

Geography 12. Movement, Population, and Systems

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

9-12.Geo.26. Predict future social, political, economic, cultural, spiritual and environmental opportunities, and obstacles associated with movement, population, decision-making, and perspectives in a given place or region.

How? How is this to be evaluated in the classroom? What is a spiritual opportunity in relation to a geographical place or region? What are the factors that students must weigh when trying to make a prediction about geographic regions when it comes to determining movement, population growth or decline, etc. This is vague and really seems to not have a valid educational point and is being added only to appeal to some sort of preconceived agenda.

9-12.Geo.27. Make reasoned ethical judgments about people, places, events, phenomena, ideas, or developments, and determine appropriate ways to respond.

Again for what educational purpose is this being added? This is a blatant attempt to push a moral standard in the classroom that does not come from the student’s family, culture, or community. The study of social studies should focus on facts, what happened when to whom and for what reason, not on making a moral judgement of the event or people involved.

Theme 3: Statehood and Functions of State/Tribal Governments

Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:

History 18. Power Dynamics, Leadership, and Agency

Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:

9-12.NMH.33. Contrast the rights given to people that live within a territory vs. a state.

Rights are not given to people by governments; people’s rights should be protected by the government.

HS U.S. History

This section is mislabeled. As the standards are written it should be labeled as the history of native indigenous people of North America and their European oppressors.

Absolutely minimal mention of the history of how the US was formed, the colonies, founding documents or ideas.

There is not a single standard toward knowing the impact of important figures or even specific documents such as:

George Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, neither Roosevelt is mentioned much less Adams or even George Washington Carver. The Bill of Rights, Articles of Confederation, Gettysburg address, Monroe doctrine, etc.

Any mention of major world or US events such as the American Revolution, World War I or II are relegated to minor mentions and general standards while an inordinate amount of attention is put upon things like “changing gender and sexuality norms” or “Evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States.”

The American Revolution is not framed and taught as a unique event in the history of the world that later inspired other such revolutions but rather is relegated to just one of several revolutions that are to be compared and contrasted.

In this section the forced indoctrination of students into the modern Progressive “woke” culture comes in full force. With these new standards the history of the United States is transformed from being focused on major events, people, and ideas that shaped, transitioned, and changed the country over time, to being focused almost solely on minority groups and their oppression either real or imagined. The new standards demand that the teaching of US History becomes a review of how oppressed minority populations were across every aspect of American historical period. These standards present a picture of a United States that is not a country with lasting ideals of equality, justice, and opportunity, but rather a country that is merely the perpetuator of one long train of oppressive abuses seeking to enrich a certain privileged class (whites) at the expense of people of color.

[EXTERNAL] EMS Board Resolution Social Studies

Tandee Delk <tdelk@elidaschools.net>

Wed 10/13/2021 8:44 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please upload the attached resolution to public comment.

Thank You,

Tandee Delk
Elida Municipal Schools
Superintendent
575-274-6211

"Perfection is unattainable, but if you chase perfection you catch excellence." - Vince Lombardi

ELIDA MUNICIPAL SCHOOLS

Box 8
103 Church Street
Elida, NM 88116

Phone: (575) 274-6211

Fax: (575) 274-6213

Petition of the ELIDA MUNICIPAL District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

ELIDA MUNICIPAL SCHOOLS

Box 8
103 Church Street
Elida, NM 88116

Phone: (575) 274-6211

Fax: (575) 274-6213

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Elida Municipal School District Board of Education (the "Board") deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to at least July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

ELIDA MUNICIPAL District Board of Education

President

[EXTERNAL] Feedback from concerned parents casieclover <casieclover@aol.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 10:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please do not teach my children racism of any kind. Against any group. That includes racism against Anglo Americans.

Sincerely,
CSW

Sent from the all new AOL app for iOS

[EXTERNAL] NMPED Proposed Social Studies Revision

Amy Trujillo <trujillo_amy@yahoo.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 10:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

There are some concerning subjects being proposed in the recommended changes. I suppose it depends on how these subjects are presented to students, but as a parent, I would not appreciate opinions from the government or other school board and political "authorities" to be pushed onto my children. There is a focus on conservatism, but why not review the social impacts of liberalism to balance the views of the students? Educators should present unbiased information and allow students to reason through the information themselves. We seem to be heading toward extremist views in this country and a lot of propoganda is being pushed on us from every direction.

Theme 14: Rise of Conservatism, 1968–2008
Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:	Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:
History 14. Historical Change, Continuity, Context, and Reconciliation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.US.123. Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people. ● 9-12.US.124. Examine the short- and long-term impacts of criminal justice policy implemented during the presidencies of Ronald Raegan and Bill Clinton. ● 9-12.US.125. Examine the push-pull relationship between progressivism and conservatism in America over time. ● 9-12.US.126. Evaluate whether the Cold War definitively ended in 1991.
History 15. Cause and Consequence	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.US.127. Analyze how communist economic policies and U.S.-sponsored resistance to Soviet military and diplomatic initiatives contributed to the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989 and the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991.

110

Theme 14: Rise of Conservatism, 1968–2008 (Continued)
Anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of:	Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to:
History 17. Critical Consciousness and Perspectives	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.US.128. Evaluate the significance of the 1990 American Disability Act. ● 9-12.US.129. Explore the movement against police brutality. ● 9-12.US.130. Examine the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes.
History 18. Power Dynamics, Leadership, and Agency	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 9-12.US.131. Analyze the presidency of Ronald Reagan (1981–1989) and the rise of the conservative movement in American politics.

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

Patriot <smyoung49@gmail.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 11:22 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

> I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequity", "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system.. this is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites out country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student.

> This is a biased agenda which does NOT belong in our public schools.

Sincerely,

Shirley M Young

Albuquerque, NM

[EXTERNAL] Opposition to Revision of Social Studies CurriculumBillie Waters <billiefwaters@gmail.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 12:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequality," "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system. This is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites our country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. This is a biased agenda which does NOT ever belong in our public schools.

Billie Waters

[EXTERNAL] PED Draft Social Studies Rules

Audie Brown <abrown.abqnm@gmail.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 12:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Ave., Room 121
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

The purpose of this email is to inform you that I vehemently and adamantly oppose the Critical Race Theory (CRT) being taught in our schools. The last thing we need right now is more fuel feeding the fire of division that is occurring throughout our country. CRT will undoubtedly cause more division and confusion among our children. Besides, CRT presents a biased, slanted and incomplete viewpoint that does not share the entire true and actual account of America's history.

I just don't understand why any curriculum that plants the seeds of victimization in young minds (producing the victim mentality) is even being considered taught to our children. Additionally, the presentation of this material very well could and/or would pit minority students against Caucasian students.

America certainly does have a dark past. Which country in existence doesn't? Even so, Americans have long addressed the fight against racism and have historically built up countries after defeat in wars. How many other countries have done that?

At the very least, consider how many people from all over the world are entering our country right now. There are MANY more entering than leaving...there must be a reason for that!

I believe it is wrong and counterproductive to plant seeds in young minds of America being bad and one race being oppressors while others are their victims.

At the very least, this proposed curriculum should present the ENTIRE and ACCURATE truth of American history...the good along with the bad and ugly!

Thanks to God Almighty, at the age of 23 and being a minority myself, I was able to start a very successful business from the ground up, providing jobs to many New Mexicans. My wife is self-employed and is also a proud Hispanic! In no other country is the opportunity available, as in America, for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

New Mexico is continually at the bottom of every list and especially in those that affect our children. Please reconsider what the long-term effects will be with such a curriculum to our students. Is it really worth potentially producing many more New Mexicans with the victim mentality as opposed to them believing in themselves and making the most of the opportunity that is available to them?

I thank you for the opportunity to share my viewpoints and I earnestly pray to God that you will do what is right for our children and leave politics at the doorstep of our schools.

Sincerely,
Audie Brown

[EXTERNAL] Request for additional time to review prior to adoption of 6.29.11

Dennis Roch <droch@loganschool.net>

Tue 10/12/2021 11:10 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Steinhaus, Kurt, PED <Kurt.Steinhaus@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attached please find a petition unanimously approved by the Logan Board of Education which requests that the public review period on the proposed social studies standards revisions in 6.29.11 NMAC.

The petition explains the rationale for this request.

Respectfully,

Dennis J. Roch, Superintendent
Logan Municipal Schools
301 N. 2nd Street, PO Box 67
Logan, NM 88426
(575) 487-2252

Petition of the
Logan Municipal School District
Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Logan Municipal School District Board of Education (the “Board”) deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

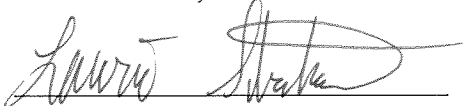

Now therefore, the Board, by action taken in an open meeting on Monday, October 11, 2021, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectfully submitted,

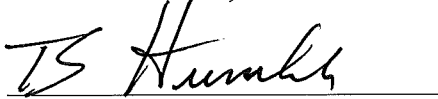

Logan Municipal School District Board of Education

Scott Osborn, President

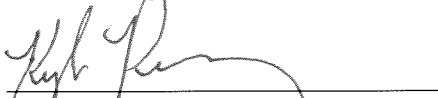

Laurie Strebeck, Vice-President

Thomas Humble, Secretary

Kene Terry, Member

Kyle Perez, Member

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies

Elaine Sullivan <elaine@cybermesa.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 1:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am in full support of the new social studies standards. We have a responsibility to our students to report history as it actually happened. We can right some of the wrongs from the past if we learn from what has been distorted and left out of our children's education. Please implement these standards immediately.

My thanks to those who have created this new day.

Elaine Sullivan

[EXTERNAL] Critical race theory

Lauren Lighthall <mamalala909@live.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 2:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please do not teach our children critical race theory. I don't believe that my children are responsible for my actions as a parent, let alone are they responsible for their extended great grandparents actions. Please look back in your family line and find someone who's behavior you're not proud of and ask if you should be held responsible for their misconducts and taught that you are fundamentally wrong or a victim because of it. All of it is wrong and stops the progress of the human family. If you were told you were a victim your whole life how would you ever achieve your god given potential? And on the opposite side, if you're told your inherently bad how can you thrive either?

All children are children of God with a divine birthright to be loved and worthy of respect and not discriminated against whatever the color of their skin or their heritage.

CRT also gets very messy because though my children look primarily Caucasian, their great great great grandfather was a Native American, named chief Massasoit. So there is no way to really understand who the "bad guys" and good guys really are.

Division is hurting our nation, only unity, respect for all, and love will heal it, not asking any one person or race to pay for the mistakes of others generations back.

Thank you for your time,
Lauren Lighthall

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Changes

Minarsich, Larry <larry.minarsich@lpl.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 3:41 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

My daughter is a fifth grade student at Vista Grande grade school in Rio Rancho. I do not support teaching or even bringing up the topic of Critical Race Theory to her in any class she attends. If it happens I will make arrangements for her to no longer attend a public school that engages in teaching this subject in any manner.

Larry Minarsich

Securities offered through LPL Financial Member FINRA/SIPC

The information contained in this email message is being transmitted to and is intended for the use of only the individual(s) to whom it is addressed. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient, you are hereby advised that any dissemination, distribution, or copying of this message is strictly prohibited. If you have received this message in error, please immediately delete.

[EXTERNAL] Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

Carol Obrien <carolkobrien@msn.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 5:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

We are opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequity", "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system. This is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites our country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. There are already school shootings with our youth being killed. This is a biased agenda which does NOT belong in our public schools. Our students need to be EDUCATED, NOT INDOCTRINATED!

Larry and Carol O'Brien
7913 San Francisco Road NE
Albuquerque, NM 87109

My husband and I are former graduates of Sandia High School, our three children graduated from Sandia and Del Norte High School, and we have two grandchildren attending Sandia High School. We own our home and support APS through property taxes and have since 1970. We have a vested interest in what is being taught in APS and ask you not to allow this curriculum to be taught. It is divisive and will be harmful to our children's mental health!

Thank you.

Sent from Outlook

[EXTERNAL] NMPED's proposed Social Studies Standards simeon schmidt <simeonschmidt581@hotmail.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 6:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon,

After reading the proposed draft, it is apparent that NMPED is attempting to introduce curriculums that would influence decision making based off skin color, race, or gender and not a child's individual value and/or talent. This effort to normalize the idea of systemic racism is the antithesis of how a child should view their hope and ability to attain the American Dream. My daughter is not a victim of anything, she is innocent, confident, and her value will not be defined by vengeful identity politics...especially from an education system.

Please note, my wife is an educator and I am in healthcare leadership (after a successful enlistment in the US Military). We understand the struggle of starting from nothing and overcoming organic hurdles. The idea of blatant reverse racism is such a step backwards for our country.

We highly value our school in Rio Rancho New Mexico, and we are supporters of the public education system. However, our commitment to

Rio Rancho Public Schools and NMPED is as follows:

If this curriculum is passed, my wife has stated she will not work as a teacher for Rio Rancho or any NMPED institution and my daughter will not attend any school that supports this.

Kindest Regards,

Simeon Schmidt MBA/HCA, RN

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies curriculum

Susan Grandle <grandle@zianet.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 6:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To: PED

I am a retired NM teacher and understand the need to revise curriculum from time to time. Now is the time to review the Social Studies curriculum.

I agree with the proposed changes that will require students to understand more about Navajo, Pueblo and other tribes.

I do not agree with changes that require high school students to study the history of the LGBTQ rights movement and the AIDS epidemic because there is potential for imposing non traditional values.

I also oppose any revisions that advance controversial agendas.

Thank you for considering my input.

Susan Grandle
Las Cruces, NM

[EXTERNAL] K-12 Social Studies Standards

David Elliott <dlelliott@epix.net>

Wed 10/13/2021 8:24 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have read through the proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards and believe that they constitute a valuable and necessary plan for education in New Mexico. Students need a truly comprehensive knowledge of historical events and issues from the past right up to the present.

David Elliott

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Changes

Tiffany Burningham <tiffanyterry27@gmail.com>

Wed 10/13/2021 9:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom this may concern,

The new proposed rules will do nothing to help our children understand our differences and bring us closer but instead seek to create more division.

I would like to add a proposal to the table, bring back civics. Teach children to balance a checkbook. Teach them math, science and history. Enough with this crap. They don't need opinions they need facts.

I vote no to the new proposed change.

T.B.

District Parent.

[EXTERNAL] History standards anne salzmann <annesalz@yahoo.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 6:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear PED:

As a retired school administrator in New Mexico, I find the proposed standards a huge improvement over the previous ones. They cover the reality of struggles for respect and equality of many peoples and they encourage thoughtful discussion and wide ranging thinking. This is what education should be. I am grateful for the important work that went into this work.

Anne Salzmann

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Our Children's future

Gayle Brigance <mama_gayle_1976@yahoo.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 7:23 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning...in this day and age hoping some human actually reads an email is sad! Our children are hurting from decisions made for them by people other than their parents on subjects such as "identity"...requiring " all high school students to study the history of LGBTQ rights movement "! History is totally fine with me but The State requiring anything beyond "history " is not ok...FINE line between teachers teaching history and teachers teaching their opinions on UNGODLY identity..on which our country WAS NOT founded on...yes I am a Christian and very proud of it and my own history! Please think about what everyone is putting in our children's heads!!! There is already way too much damning information out there...children already wonder who they are and PARENTS should help them figure it out...yes some parents can't/won't teach them but anyone stepping in to take their place shouldn't cause them to question what gender they are!!! There's only two and GOD made it pretty obvious until someone not Christian...was allowed to introduce a people approved concept..definitely not Godly opinions! Please pray before "rules" are put into a curriculum that ruins so many young peoples lives!! Remember GOD is watching us and will hold us accountable for all that we teach them! Thanks for your time and have a BLESSED day!

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Changes to Social Studies Curriculum in NM

KIMBERLY MATLOCK <kimberly.matlock@clovis-schools.org>

Thu 10/14/2021 9:18 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

I disagree entirely with the proposed changes to the social studies curriculum. Historical achievements and events included in the social studies curriculum for our students should be considered on their own merit. Distinguishing these achievements or events based on a person's race or sexual orientation detracts from that person's contribution to society, which should be the sole focus. Personal lives are not relevant in this context or certainly at this age level. Providing students with unbiased and factual instruction should be the goal, so that students are able to draw their own conclusions and pursue further study if they have unanswered questions. Encouraging intellectual freedom and teaching students to think for themselves is essential. Imposing a biased perspective on our students and conditioning them to view historical achievements and events through the lens of politically motivated theoretical perspectives regarding race and sexual orientation robs them of the opportunity to learn to think independently, develop their own perspectives, and form their own opinions.

Kim Matlock

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies CurriculumBillie Waters <billiefwaters@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 10:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequality," "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system. This is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites our country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. This is a biased agenda which does NOT ever belong in our public schools.

Billie Waters

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Kevin Susco Taylor <kevin.suscotaylor@aps.edu>

Thu 10/14/2021 10:41 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a social studies teacher who is aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist.

Sincerely,

Kevin Susco-Taylor

[EXTERNAL] Public Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Standards

Josh Matson <jmredwing1@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

Please accept my feedback on the proposed changes to the NM Social Studies Standards.

I have four Children in Rio Rancho Schools. I am in strong opposition to the proposed changes. It is very apparent the proposal and the 60 contributors were not from varying or diverse backgrounds. While I agree, people should learn how to think critically, presenting ideas or political perspectives as fact to children is extremely dangerous.

Can I ask, what are the backgrounds of those who contributed to the proposed curriculum changes? Did you search for a diverse committee or was the committee designed to accomplish a specific task?

Pushing LGBTQ affirming gender fluidity, Equity, presenting capitalism as negative or inequitable (the proposal doesn't specifically say that but I can only assume based on similar standards being drawn up in other states across the country). Capitalism is the reason people from around the world want to be a part of this great nation.

Does the U.S. have problems, of course. But is it productive to address and solve these problems as a K-12 student? These kids don't even have fully developed brains yet, they can't possibly process or understand the high level of critical thought you are proposing. If you want to do incredible and long term damage, than adopt these changes. If you want to be reasonable, listen to the majority and reject these proposed changes. Please, for the mental wellness of these kids and the parents.

If you impose these changes, our only course of action is to reject the teachings and instruct our children not to participate. As I read the public comments, that would be well over 75% of the kids in NM. I'm sure we could easily organize a movement to make that happen.

Please leave our kids out of your agenda and stick to just educating.

Respectfully,

Josh Matson
Rio Rancho

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies State Standards

Chanel Bencomo <chanel.bencomo@aps.edu>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a parent and teacher who is aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist.

Sincerely,

*Chanel BencomoReading Interventionist*Mitchell E.S."Everyone you will ever meet knows something you don't."-Bill Nye*

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Lucy Foma <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:21 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Lucy Foma
714 Rosita St.
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

William Mee <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:25 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

William Mee
2073 Camino Sam Montoya
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Proposed changes to social studies standards

Kate Bowen <albuqkate@yahoo.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a parent of a child who is Black and also a public school teacher, and I am excited that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I strongly support this decision and believe in the full integration of ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist. The students of New Mexico schools deserve nothing less!

Sincerely,

Kathryn Cadwell

Parent and Teacher

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

John Booker <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

John Booker
1327 4TH ST
LAS VEGAS, NM 87701

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Edward Baird <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:27 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Edward Baird
411 Tano Road
Santa Fe, NM 87506-7029

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Karen Milstein <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:28 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Karen Milstein
13 Blue Jay Dr
Santa Fe, NM 87506

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dora Davis <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:31 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Dora Davis
4125 N Mauri Lane
Hobbs, NM 88240

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Anne Beckett <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:31 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

After spending 30 years in banking I lost count of the number of people I worked with who had little or no understanding of personal finance - and were in personal financial trouble because of it. With a small amount of education those situations are almost completely avoidable. If the information is not provided in the home, then school is the place to receive it. In fact, school is the neutral and best place to receive this kind of information, as it is without any side emotions or demonstrations to the contrary.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Anne Beckett
P. O. Box 176
Youngsville, NM 87064

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dianne Rich <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Dianne Rich
84 California Pine Rd NE
Rio Rancho, NM 87124

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dianne Rich <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Dianne Rich
84 California Pine Rd NE
Rio Rancho, NM 87124

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

VICTORIA SEALE <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

VICTORIA SEALE
369 montezuma ave
Santa fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Thank you

Sylvia Miller-Mutia <sylvia.miller.mutia@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a parent of 3 New Mexico students, grades 5, 7, and 11. I am also a clergy person in Albuquerque, serving a congregation with a large population of children and youth. I am aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist.

Sincerely,Sylvia Miller-Mutia

--

The Rev. Sylvia Miller-Mutia

www.mothersylvia.com

Call/text: 510-932-1315

Note: I generally read & respond to email during my office hours, Sunday-Thursday, 8AM-2PM. If you need to reach me outside these times, please text me at 510-932-1315.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Valerie Smith <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. I believe these changes will improve the financial future of New Mexicans.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Financial education and protection from predatory practices can make NM more resilient. With improvements in financial literacy, changes can be seen in hunger, incarceration, health and education. Our people need to be better prepared and empowered.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Valerie Smith
1509 Valencia Dr NE
Albuquerque, NM 87110

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Mark Mansell <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Mark Mansell
202 South Oak St.
Magdalena, NM 87825

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Marilyn Bowman <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Marilyn Bowman
1434 Fruit AveNw
ABQ, NM 87104

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Marilyn Bowman <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Marilyn Bowman
1434 Fruit AveNw
ABQ, NM 87104

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Joan Sickler <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:41 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Knowing how to make a realistic budget. Knowing how to balance your checkbook. Knowing how to apply for a loan. These are all skills that our New Mexico students must have to survive and thrive in the world.

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Joan Sickler
2253 Espejo Place
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Sarah Maze <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:46 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Sarah Maze
308 Spruce Lane
Taos, NM 87571

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Sherry Malone <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:48 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Sherry Malone
po box 670
Abiquiu, NM 87510

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dorothy Starr <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:52 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Dorothy Starr
941 Calle Mejia #301
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Lynn Trojahn <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:53 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Lynn Trojahn
6401 Salamanca Ct NW
Los Ranchos, NM 87107

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Patricia Sheely <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

I believe that this education is particularly important for our low income students who are not exposed to this material in other ways.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Patricia Sheely
604 Jeff King Street
Gallup, NM 87301

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Susan Gallaher <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Susan Gallaher
853 Alto St
Santa Fe, NM 87501-2560

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Omar Ahmed <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:57 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Omar Ahmed
11409 Herman Roser Ave SE
Albuquerque, NM 87123

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment on 6.29.11 NMAC

Hope Morales <hmorales@teachplus.org>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:57 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (59 KB)

Financial Lit support letter (1).pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attached is a letter of comment. Thank you!

Hope

--

Hope Morales
Executive Director
Teach Plus New Mexico

575.626.3437 | Roswell, NM

October 11, 2021

To Whom It May Concern:

Financial literacy remains more crucial than ever, yet it is not top of mind in our state. In 2018, Teach Plus New Mexico surveyed 175 educators across the state to learn more about their perspectives related to their ability to teach and their students' understanding of financial literacy. Nine out of ten respondents indicated that they do not believe their students have a basic understanding of financial literacy or the skills to make financial decisions in the real world. And while most teachers support financial literacy being taught throughout the educational career for students, they do not believe that they are adequately prepared to do so.

As the New Mexico Public Education Department considers updates to the state's learning standards and options for training and resources for building a more effective educator workforce, we ask that you consider the following:

- Include financial literacy as a component of learning standards that are taught K-12 grades.
- Provide opportunities for teacher training to learn strategies related to teaching financial literacy, including ideas for activities and assessments.
- Provide a list of high quality curriculum that will support the instruction of financial literacy.

Financial literacy is an important component of education that many other states have already adopted and a well planned transition to the classroom should be a major part of our work in New Mexico.

Respectfully submitted,

Hope Morales
Executive Director, Teach Plus New Mexico

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Kristen Ferris <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Kristen Ferris
11129 Newcomb Ave NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of

ddonado@salud.unm.edu <ddonado@salud.unm.edu>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Damaris Donado
2300 Menaul Blvd. NE
Albuquerque, NM 87107

[EXTERNAL] I Say NO to Critical Race Theory being Taught In NM Schools

Clara Cates <claracates@yahoo.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:00 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a resident of New Mexico and I do NOT support the changes being proposed for the PED Social Studies Standards.

I do not want Critical Race Theory to be taught in any School in New Mexico

Name: Clara Cates

County: Valencia

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Sierra Netz <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Sierra Netz
1505 Hazeldine Ave SE
Albuquerque, NM 87106

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Yetta Massey <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty. As a parent and instructor, I have seen first hand that students are lacking in personal financial planning skills. While I advocate for families to teach these skills to their children, like our family does, the reality is that a majority of New Mexico's children/students do not get this education within the home.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Yetta Massey
2111 ASPEN ST
PORTALES, NM 88130

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

DANIEL ORTEGA <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

DANIEL ORTEGA
1416 Cardenas Drive Northeast
Albuquerque, NM 87110

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Nicolette Gonzales <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Nicolette Gonzales
33.1 Monroe St NE Unit K111
Albuquerque, NM 87110

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Larry Gioannini <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Larry Gioannini
205 hoagland rd
las cruces, NM 88005

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

James E. Bonnell <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

As a former teacher and administrators in New Mexico schools (as well as being a graduate of a NM high school), I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Our schools need to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

James E. Bonnell
8239 Raintree Drive, NE
Albuquerque, NM 87122

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

Nickie McCarty <mccartynickie@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:38 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

The new Social Study Standards are not good for children. They include Critical Race Theory (CRT) ideology, they promote the LGTBQ agenda, and Globalism. I am not in support of these standards.

Under the banner of equity, CRT is a divisive ideology that places moral worth on people based on the color of their skin. Minorities are uniformly portrayed as victims while whites are uniformly portrayed as victimizers and racists.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. would be shocked at what CRT promotes. It was his dream that one day children would not be judged by their skin color, but by their character. CRT intentionally judges children by skin color.

CRT separates people by race into categories of oppressors and oppressed in an effort to distort history and bring about a cultural revolution. The roots of CRT, in language and intent, are planted firmly in Marxism. Dividing people based on race is destructive and demeaning; this is racism on its face. This kind of teaching has no place in our public schools. CRT teaches that our Constitution and founding principles — the basis of our freedom — are racist and evil, and that “systemic racism” and “unconscious bias” are built into western society.

According to CRT propaganda, all white people have “white privilege” and are racists, whether they want to be or not. Their “whiteness” must be confessed and renounced, although there is no guarantee of forgiveness. This false doctrine fosters division and even hatred. It comes as no surprise that people are turning against one another, and do we want our children turning against each other? I can't even imagine what this will do to a child from an inter-racial family.

CRT teaches a worldview that others are not allowed to question. This is a suppression of free speech and a violation of the First Amendment. The First Amendment also protects freedom of conscience — the right to hold personal beliefs and thoughts without government intervention. Requiring teachers and students to take this kind of teaching is a perversion of education; it's indoctrination.

I ask you to look at these standards with a neutral eye and not one leaning toward any agenda. We need to teach our children about the real America, not some extreme curriculum. As a retired educator, I am appalled at what is happening in our schools. I have always supported public education; however, with these standards I would definitely support private and homeschool education.

Thank you,
Nickie McCarty
Retired Education
575-770-7838

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Diane LaFrance <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Diane LaFrance
44 Owens Road
Silver City, NM 88061-9767

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Alan Ley <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Alan Ley
11607 Herman Roser Ave. SE
Albuquerque, NM 87123

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Arthur Reeder <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Arthur Reeder
13 Buen Pastor
Santa Fe , NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] NEW Social Studies Standards

Claire Porter <porter_c@aps.edu>

Thu 10/14/2021 12:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I am an 8th grade US History teacher who is aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I have read the new proposed standards and agree with them whole-heartedly. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. I have witnessed first-hand in my 14 years of teaching history that students are more invested when they see themselves and their ancestors humanized in the curriculum. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist.

Thank you,

--

Claire M. Porter
8th Grade Social Studies Teacher
Madison Middle School
2015 Golden Apple Teacher of Distinction porter_c@aps.edu

"Tolerance is giving to every other human being every right that you claim for yourself." --Robert Green Ingersoll

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This email and attached documents may contain confidential information. All information is intended only for the use of the named recipient. If you are not the named recipient, you are not authorized to read, disclose, copy, distribute or take any action in reliance on the information and any action other than immediate delivery to the named recipient is strictly prohibited. If you have received this email in error, do not read the information and please immediately notify sender by telephone to arrange for a return of the original documents. If you are the named recipient you are not authorized to reveal any of this information to any other unauthorized person. If you did not receive all pages listed or if pages are not legible, please immediately notify sender by phone.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jenna Scanlan <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Jenna Scanlan
500 Hillcrest Drive
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

David Siegel <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:05 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

David Siegel
7014 Guadalupe Tr NW
Los Ranchos, NM 87107

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Paul Roop <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

As a professional accountant working in New Mexico, I can attest to the critical importance of personal finance education as a building block for a successful life and career. Financial decisions made immediately after high school can impact a person for years or decades, and we have a responsibility to prepare young people to face these decisions with relevant skills and a strong knowledge base.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefiting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Paul Roop
213 Monroe St. NE
Albuquerque , NM 87108

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Signe Stuart <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Signe Stuart
18 Gavilan Rd
Santa Fe, NM 87508-8840

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

SARI STEIN <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

AS A LIFE LONG NEW MEXICAN, I IMPLORE you to 100% adopt the recommended REVISIONS submitted by Think New Mexico AND IT IS CRITICAL TO ADD substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

IT IS DEPLORABLE/UNCONSCIONABLE New Mexico is one of only five states that GROSSLY FAILS to include personal finance in its education standards. ALAS, NEW MEXICO STILL LIVES IN THE DARK AGES IN MANY RESPECTS. NM EDUCATION DEPT GET WITH IT IF YOU REALLY WANT THE FORTHCOMING GENERATIONS TO BE PREPARED TO SUCCEED IN WORK AND LIFE!! This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefiting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation. ACT NOW OR CONTINUE TO FAIL OUR CHILDREN AS THEY LEARN AND GROW TO ADULTHOOD!!

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

SARI STEIN
PO BOX 1322
GRANTS, NM 87020

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of

amylevi@salud.unm.edu <amylevi@salud.unm.edu>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:21 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Amy Levi
726-1 Tramway Vista Court NE
Albuquerque, NM 87122

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies Standards

Blythe Clark <blythegclark@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a parent in Albuquerque who is aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist.

Sincerely,
Blythe Clark

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Scotti Romberg <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Scotti Romberg
9512 Bent Rd,NE
Albuquerque, NM 87109

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jim Plewa <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 1:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Jim Plewa
2986 Plaza Blanca
Santa Fe, NM 87507-5340

[EXTERNAL] New Education Standards - Yes!

Xolani Kacela <xolani.kacela@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 2:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please support the new standards for teaching social studies and history. Vote to affirm.

--

Xolani "xk" Kacela, Ph.D.

Las Cruces, NM

Cell: 919.949.2002

Get your FREE copy of Jumpstart Your Allyship here.

Buy your copy of The Black UU Survival Guide: How to survive as a Black Unitarian Universalist and how allies can keep it 100.

Visit my website | Email policy

Click here to find my links on Linktree

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

William Lindenau <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 2:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

William Lindenau
11 Virtue st.
Hillsboro, NM 88042

FW: [EXTERNAL] Civics Education

Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

Thu 10/14/2021 2:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: wdswift@spinn.net <wdswift@spinn.net>Sent: Thursday, October 14, 2021 2:20 PMTo: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>Subject: [EXTERNAL] Civics Education

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To: John Sena, Director of Policy, Innovation, and Measurement NM PEDFrom: Bill Swift, Retired 39 year educatorSubject: Restoring solid Civics Education to our curriculum

Research shows that students who receive quality civics education are more likely to vote, discuss politics at home, complete college, and develop skills that lead to employment. These students are also four times more likely to give back to their communities through volunteering and working on community issues and are more confident in their ability to speak publicly and communicate with their elected representatives.

As a retired educator, I regret that courses like Civics, Problems of Democracy, and American history have been short-changed or eliminated. Jay Leno discovered that only one-in-three citizens he encountered during his walks could name the three branches of government.

I believe the January 6th insurrection could only have happened because of a lack of basic understanding of how our government works by so many voters. "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free," said Thomas Jefferson, "it expects what never was and never will be."

Students who understand the principles of our Constitution will also understand that government is not a dirty word, but exists to "form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." As PBS' Mark Shields reminded us, "Politics is the peaceful resolution of conflict arising from legitimate competing interests."

The division in this country continues to grow as we neglect civics education and fail to build a nation adequately informed of our democratic principles, norms, and institutions. It works through achieving compromise. Bringing civics back into our educational system will help return civility to our nation.

Thank you.

wdswift

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Warren Payne <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

One final note: As a former teacher in NM and as a long-time real estate appraiser I feel very strongly that our schools are failing us. By that I mean in the actual and at least fairly intensive education in the BASICS. I taught at Garfield Jr. High, and that was a long time ago, but I was so terribly disappointed at the abysmal level of reading proficiency of all but the highest achievers, and I know we've fallen even farther behind since then. So I urge you to FORGET all the social/political nonsense and educate our students with a real and USEFUL set of skills and understanding! A firm grasp on the BASICS will serve them better than superficial learning in transitory issues.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Warren Payne
7809 Hendrix, NE
Albuquerque, NM 87110

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

MAg Sare <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

MAg Sare
7501 pennslyvania
Albuquerque, NM 87110

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Will Steinberg <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:10 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

I am really tired of New Mexico being a "Poor & Uneducated" state.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Will Steinberg
4104 Inca St. N.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Marjorie Kirkel <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Marjorie Kirkel
7804 PRIMROSE DR NW
ALBUQUERQUE, NM 87120

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Patsy Nelson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Patsy Nelson
3301 La Rambla St NW
Albuquerque, NM 87120

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Carol Campbell <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Carol Campbell
3413 Black Hills Rd.NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Peter Murphy <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:43 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Peter Murphy
50 Oshara Blvd
Santa Fe, NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] feedback on proposed social studies standards

Jesse Murray <jesse.d.murray@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 3:49 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello!

I am writing as the parent of a gender-nonconforming APS student and as a Ph.D. in history (University of Illinois, 2013).

I am delighted that the NM Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more inclusive and accurate. All children deserve an up-to-date, state-of-the-field education in social studies and history. Our push towards accuracy and truth-speaking is also slowly leading to an educational environment that honors the lived experiences of all children, not just a favored few.

Sincerely,
Jesse Murray

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Charles Karaian <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:00 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Charles Karaian
5001 Glenwood Hills Dr NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Rhonda Berger <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:03 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Rhonda Berger
1331 Tesuque Dr.
Española, NM 87532

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Chemen Ochoa <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:07 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Chemen Ochoa
1 Altura Drive
Santa Fe , NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies sarah brownrigg <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:33 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

sarah brownrigg
4821 solecito circle
santa fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dean Zantow <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. Along with reading skills, learning about personal finance is something that will benefit students for the rest of their lives. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Dean Zantow
7000 Prospect PI NE
Albuquerque, NM 87110-4359

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Eugene Farnum <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I have had to "bail out" three of my four now-college-age grandchildren because they were ignorant of basic, practical financial knowledge and accumulated credit card debt. All of them graduated from New Mexico High Schools without this crucial financial instruction. Hopefully they will learn from this experience, but how much better it would have been if they had learned about insidious credit card interest in high school.

Please take think New Mexico's advice and help our kids become financially literate.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Eugene Farnum
971B Chgicomoma Vista
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Ss Curriculum

Stacey Fernandez <stacey.rose@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 4:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I am writing to let you know that I have looked into the changes that you are interested in making to the SS curriculum and I am in full support of this. I think it is imperative for our children to know what has happened in America's past and the history that has lead and resulted from it. Being able to learn about all people and stories is how I feel all can relate, understand, learn empathy, and apply what they know to the present and future. Please work to pass this and bring it into our schools!

Stacey Fernandez

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

George Ginsberg <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 5:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

George Ginsberg
47 Vereda Serena Rd,
Santa Fe, NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Penny Baldwin <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 5:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. As a former banker and accountant in Bernalillo, Lea and Santa Fe Counties, I can personally guarantee you that our students need this important training to assure a successful future. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Penny Baldwin
3 Canjilon Ct
Santa Fe, NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Diane Berger <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 5:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Diane Berger
12101 coral dawn rd ne
Albuquerque, NM 87122

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Ellen Moore <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 5:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Ellen Moore
1571 Canyon Road
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Guidelines for History/Social Studies instruction

Steele, David <David.Steele@ttuhsc.edu>

Thu 10/14/2021 5:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a citizen and resident of New Mexico, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed new guidelines for the development of social studies and history curricula in New Mexico's schools K-12. It is important that our children be exposed to age appropriate instruction that is honest, balanced, and evidence-based. Thank you very much for your consideration. Sincerely, David Steele

David J. Steele, PhD

Professor, Family and Community Medicine (Emeritus)
TTUHSC at El Paso, Paul L. Foster School of Medicine

Home: 4358 Nambe Arc, Las Cruces, NM 88011

Phone: 575-449-4180

[EXTERNAL] Suspension of Authority of a Local School Board and Critical Race Theory

Mr. & Mrs. Lewis Saxton <tipisem@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 6:07 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The Suspension of Authority of a Local School Board, Superintendent, or Principal, SHOULD NOT BE REPLACED with 6.30.6 NMAC, Suspension of Authority of a Local School Board. It would overstep the bounds of state government authority and is unnecessary as there is already a procedure in place for suspending the school board, superintendent or principal. School Boards should have the power to make policy decisions with only limited oversight by the State.

The State has absolutely no business mandating the teaching of Critical Race Theory. It is a totally unproven and unscientific theory and it can not be proven. Further, tt is not provable.

--

Barbara Saxton
tipisem@gmail.com
Silver City, NM

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Rita Lujan <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 6:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Rita Lujan
Zia Street #55
Sanyo Domingo Pueblo, NM 87052

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

William Davidson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 6:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

William Davidson
19 Calle Arbolitos
Placitas, NM 87043

[EXTERNAL] CRITICAL! this critical race theory needs to stop!

sean <smjohnsen02@gmail.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 6:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Critical is, expressing adverse or disapproving comments or judgements; as well as, expressing or involving an analysis of the merits and faults of a work of literature, music or art.

Thats the definition of critical, no where in that definition does it say anything about facts or reality based in history.

To apply a critical perspective on the "theory" of race. Is just as bad as receiving an opinion of a slave from a slave owner.

No one should teach history from opinion. FACTS CAN BE LEFT OUT!

Sadly our higher learning and public institutions for the last 70 years have been influencing our history books as they are published by corporate interest.

CRT is the new indoctrinated narrative for the future . sadly this future is driven by communists, nazis, Marxists, socialists satanists, and pedos . The future is Grey and full of 1984 Orwellian playbooks.

CRT should not be taught to children. We need an understanding that secret societies have been manipulating humanity for too long.

WAKE UP AMERICA. WE ARE UNDER AN ATTACK BY IGNORANCE DRIVEN BY EVIL! IN THE NAME OF THE GREATER GOOD !

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Glen Kappy <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 7:00 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Glen Kappy
701 Carlisle Blvd. SE
Albuquerque, NM 87106

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies shirley anderson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 7:07 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

shirley anderson
2180 W. Alameda#11, ,
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Tom Krajci <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 7:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Tom Krajci
4 Aspen Grove Road
Cloudcroft, NM 88317

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Robin Spalding <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 7:39 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

I work in the banking industry. I have been a teller in my current position for over six years. I had previous banking experience of over thirteen years. I am amazed every day at the teenagers who don't even know how to sign their names or where to sign their names. They have no understanding of the concepts of basic financial principals. We are failing our children when we don't teach them how to be fiscally responsible and how to manage their money. I fear that they will fall prey to the many scammers out there as well as not having a basic understanding of how it all works. It's time for New Mexico to step up and ensure our children have a basic knowledge of the financial systems in the United States.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Robin Spalding
P. O. Box 852
Moriarty, NM 87035

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Welcome Lindsey <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 8:27 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Welcome Lindsey
409 Martinez Lane
Taos, NM 87571

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Michael Purdy <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 10/14/2021 11:27 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Michael Purdy
4840 Southern AVE, SE
Albuquerque, NM 87108

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Diane Wesner <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 7:49 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. When children complete the eighth grade without knowing such basics as that it costs more money to buy on credit, we are not setting up our citizens for success.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, especially if they are entering the workforce directly from high school or without graduating.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Students who learn personal finance concepts in school may bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefiting them, their families, and their communities for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt this recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Diane Wesner
2911 Arizona PI NE
Albuquerque, NM 87110

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Denise Welsh <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 7:50 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Denise Welsh
3008, Linden Ave
Las Cruces, NM 88005

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Gerald Garcia <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 8:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Gerald Garcia
6 sacramento pl.
Los Lunas , NM 87031

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies - PUBLIC COMMENT

Kevin Summers <adsummke@aztecschools.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 8:07 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (96 KB)

AMSD SS Petition 10.14.21.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

Please find attached a petition from the Board of Education of the Aztec Municipal School District regarding the proposed repeal and replacement of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Please add this attachment to the official record of public comment.

Submitted Respectfully,

Kevin Summers

Superintendent

Aztec Municipal School District

Petition of the
Aztec Municipal School District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous COVID 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the COVID 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

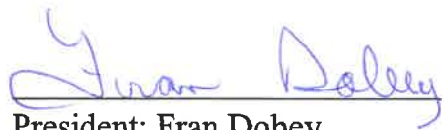

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Aztec Municipal School District Board of Education (the "Board") deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

Aztec Municipal School District Board of Education

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Fran Dobey". The signature is written in a cursive style with a large initial "F".

President; Fran Dobey

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

James Riggs <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 8:35 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

James Riggs
9508 Villa del Rey NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111-1651

[EXTERNAL] Please don't pass the changes..

Stephanie Salazar <stephanie-marquez@hotmail.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 8:59 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I don't agree with the changes being done to social studies. I don't think students need to be taught identity studies. I am also against critical race theory. If this passes I will be pulling my children out of public school.

If social studies changes to teaching a less watered down version of the truth. But it is all FACTS and not perspectives or opinions. I think that is fantastic. History cannot and should not be changed. History is not pretty but as long as we teach our children that the beauty of the present and future is that we can do better and be better.

They need to learn empathy through hearing the facts that happened. I remember learning about slavery and Anne Frank and other ugly history facts and thinking I would have helped them. Nobody needed to put their opinions in my head for me to know that.

I also don't think any other race other than my own needs to tell me I matter, just like I don't think any other race needs my help to know they matter. Of course they matter they don't need my blessing. That's ridiculous. Us as parents need to teach our children they are important and they have purpose no matter what other people say. Sticks and stones, yes words can hurt but you have to keep on keeping on. If you work hard and try your best to be a good human you will succeed. Life is not perfect or fair and it never will be. LIFE IS NOT FAIR AND NEVER WILL BE. The sooner our kids learn that the better off we all will be.

Please rethink the changes, and don't pass the changes to Social Studies!

A concerned mother,

Stephanie Salazar

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Claudette Sutton <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 9:14 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

As editor of Tumbleweeds, Santa Fe's parenting magazine, for over 25 years, I have recognized the importance of financial literacy and provide articles from local experts to support parents and youth in this lifelong learning process. After reviewing the recommended revisions to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, submitted by Think New Mexico, I am writing to urge you to adopt these revisions to add substantive personal finance standards to the school curriculum.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Claudette Sutton
837 Don Diego Avenue
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Charles Clements <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 9:24 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

In the 50-60s I had this type of schooling and benefited up to the present time. What our children get now is "greed" education on our media 24/7.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Charles Clements
2141 N Solano Dr #305
Las Cruces , NM 88001

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Robert Bradley <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 10:15 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

As an anadote, when I and my wife were getting ready for marriage 50 years ago, we were required by the Catholic Church to attend Pre-Cana Conferences which included extensive discusion of finances including budget, debt and savings. I being older (20's) was astounded at the lack of understanding that most of the attendee's (mostly younger) had on finances. My wife and I actively chose to raise our family with and understanding of finance - cash flow, debt, budget, savings etc. It is disheartening to see that this continues to this day and we must rectify this by adding it to the curriculum like basic knowledge of mathematics. You would think this is unnecessary but it is. Look at the statistics on credit card and student debt.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Robert Bradley
13304 Comanche Rd NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of

jacastro@salud.unm.edu <jacastro@salud.unm.edu>

Fri 10/15/2021 10:30 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Jacqueline Castro
9851 Wilshire Ave. NE
Albuquerque, NM 87122

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jim Fisher <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 10:30 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

As I am sure you are aware, New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that we, our schools, are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce in order to be a more functioning, successful adult.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families which have little if any personal financial literacy. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Jim Fisher
2120 Ridgeview Circle
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: Feedback DRAFT

Sha Lyn Weisheit <sweisheit@bsin.k12.nm.us>

Fri 10/15/2021 10:47 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please re-evaluate the K-3 standards in regards to the developmental appropriateness of each. Students at the primary grades tend to be egocentric. Asking them to consider global issues or to compare our nation to other surrounding nations will not be a relevant task. Many students this age have not travelled beyond their own communities and some have never left the state. Asking them to discuss global issues will require a level of abstraction that they are not developmentally prepared for at such a young age. Discussing topics relevant to their classrooms or local communities is relevant and appropriate.

In regards to the 7-12 grade standards, the number of standards teachers are expected to cover are in excess. It seems the goal is to superficially cover a great many standards rather than to delve deeply into fewer key standards. Please revisit the number of standards that need to be covered within a given school year for the secondary level.

[EXTERNAL] Standards and Assignments

Thomas Hunt <thunt@bulldogs.org>

Fri 10/15/2021 11:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

Our students need to be able to think critically about our history and societal issues. They do not need a biased opinion piece on anything in history at any point. They should be given the facts and be able to come up with their own thoughts. It should not be from a point of view that is taught, but should be the overall facts. All major historical names need to be taught and regardless of opinions of any individual. It is a disservice to our students, parents, teachers, and our country as a whole to not properly educate our upcoming generation with honesty and accuracy. Imposing restrictions on the education of our students only limits their ability to discern good and bad, right and wrong. It is building a polaristic view of all events and leaves no room for discussion on particular topics. Which will devastate the growth of our children.

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies Proposed Rule Feedback

Elle Seybold <elseybold@yahoo.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 11:24 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern:

This letter is written to protest, and oppose, the proposed changes to the social studies curricula [6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies].

First, the primary stakeholders (parents and guardians) have not had sufficient time to review them. The proposed standards are 129 pages long and contain vague language. Further, the average parent is not even aware of the proposed changes. Parents must be allowed to make their voices heard.

Second, racism should not be promulgated by public education. The Critical Race Theory, amongst other topics being proposed, most certainly foster racism. We must stop forcing division.

There is no room for politics in education. This is a politically motivated and politically driven proposal. This is not what New Mexicans want.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Donna Bradley <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 1:43 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Teaching financial literacy will pay off for years to come. Having educated citizens will save our state substantially. I

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Donna Bradley
13304 Comanche NE
Albuquerque , NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Updated Social Studies Standards

Dave E. <myabq311@yahoo.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 2:59 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear NMPED:

After reviewing the State's proposed updated Social Studies standards, I noticed several things. While it is good to provide different cultural perspectives:

- The terms "equity," "inequity," or "equitable" are mentioned no fewer than 17 times;
- The word "systemic" is used at least 3 times.

While these are popular buzzwords in today's politically correct climate, their use in school curriculum is concerning. The terms "equality" and "equity" are often conflated, but they do not mean the same thing. Our nation was founded on the principle of equality (i.e., equal opportunity) but that is quite different than equity (implying equal outcomes, as determined by government policy, for example). If such terminology is going to be used in the classroom, then students clearly need to understand the difference, as well as how "equity" policies might affect non-minority groups.

Similarly, "systemic" has not been clearly defined. If it refers to institutionalized (racist) policies, then it is debatable whether that exists today, certainly nothing like it was in the past (Jim Crow era). Again, this needs to be put into perspective so students understand the difference.

Finally, there is a difference between migration (both legal and illegal) and immigration (a legal process). Illegal immigration is not mentioned anywhere in the revised standards, yet it is an important issue that affects our country both socially and economically.

Thank you for your consideration and for providing the opportunity for feedback.

Dave E.
Albuquerque

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of

lfullerton@salud.unm.edu <lfullerton@salud.unm.edu>

Fri 10/15/2021 4:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to encourage you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This may be why our state continually ranks near last in important lists such as income, education, child poverty (where we are near the top), and success. We need to give our kids the basic tools to function as adults.

Debt is easy to create and difficult to erase. Banks are happy to make credit card offers to young people and get them into debt. Buy now, pay later offers sound like free money to the unprepared. People are vulnerable to such schemes and find themselves paying interest and finance payments for items they may not have really wanted in the first place! It is preventable with a solid education and New Mexico should provide that education.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Lynne Fullerton
716 California St SE
Albuquerque, NM 87108

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Paula Lozar <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 8:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Paula Lozar
7499 Sagebrush Rd
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

Kathy Ledingham <kathyledingham03@gmail.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 9:27 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am completely opposed to teaching our kids CRT! I am the Instructional Coach in a school that borders the reservation and I can only imagine the dissension this would cause in my school. We spend hours and hours developing relationships with families, parent nights, meetings where we try to help as much as possible and encouraging parents to be a part of their child's education. There is already a thread of distrust because of previous history. Please, please, pleas do not pass any ruling about teaching CRT.

On a personal level, I am appalled that the state where I was born and still live, would accuse me of being racist because of my color. How can you accuse an entire group of people without knowing them personally? What an insult!

I would like to invite you to my school where we face numerous challenges educating our students. Adding a layer of universal racism would only undermine all the progress we have made in our community.

We are facing additional challenges with the pandemic AND the recent legalization of marijuana. Please do not add this burden to our already stressed educational system. New Mexico cannot find enough teachers as it is. If you add this additional layer of stress, you will only be increasing the shortages. Please do not let a few liberals determine our state education policies.

Thank you for your consideration.

[EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

Paul Gruber <gruberpaul@rocketmail.com>

Fri 10/15/2021 10:10 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am urging you to stop critical race theory to be pushed in schools and ask you kindly to stop indoctrinating our children with hatred and racism.

As a white male I have children who are part caucasian and part Hispanic and one of my daughters is also married to a Native American and I have Native American Grandchildren whom I love very much.

If you push crt on kids you are teaching them racism and racism will never go away. As a concerned grandparent I cant imagine them turning their backs on me because they think white people are evil.

I am in no way being hateful in this email. As a believer in Christ I am quoting the words of Jesus Christ

In Matthew 18:6, He says the following;

"But whoever causes one of these little ones who believe in Me to sin, it would be better for him if a millstone were hung around his neck, and he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

I will also quote the words of God in Jeremiah 1:5;

"Before I formed you in the womb^(A) I knew^{a} you, before you were born^(C) I set you apart;^(D)
I appointed you as a prophet to the nations.^(e)

God created all life, males and females.

Genesis 5:2

2 He created them ^(A)male and female, and ^(B)blessed them and called them Mankind in the day they were created.

I urge you to carefully think about this. God does not like anyone teaching children false doctrine and/or harming them in any way. There will be a day when we stand before God to face His judgment and anyone who harms children will have to answer to Him.

Again this email is not to be mean in any way but I do write these words with the love of Jesus Christ in mind.

If my children were still younger and still in school and this was being taught I'd pull them.out of public school and I will try to encouragem my daughter to take my grandchildren out of school. As a person who fears (Which means to respect and honor Him) God I hope you would do the same.

Respectfully,
Paul Gruber

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] November 12 Meeting on Changing Social Studies to add CRT

Richard Williams <rtw88220@yahoo.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 7:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; johnsena@state.nm.us <johnsena@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning. We are against any changes in Social Studies that will add CRT, Critical Race Theory, false history, false values, false teaching to our children's education. We should have pride in how America was formed, our history, our values, not have our children raised to hate our great country to appease some socialist, anarchist agenda.

Our children should be raised and taught to love America, not hate it.

Those in favor of CRT should realize they would not be here to force this agenda on us if it had not been for all the brave men and women who gave their lives to create and maintain this great nation, all the soldiers who have died in all our wars so that some fake teaching can be rammed down our children's throats. Have pride in our country and vote not to add CRT to our education system.

New Mexicans should not have to watch our great state be destroyed by Anti-American rhetoric to please a one political party who wants to destroy American history, values for their own benefit. Mexican Americans, Blacks, Whites, Chinese, Japanese Americans have all contributed to creating the greatest nation on the face of the earth and CRT wants to lie about the forming and continual greatness. We are one nation that contributes large amounts of money through taxes and through charitable contributions through our Churches to help our own people, to help other people in other countries.

CRT wants to put their own agenda in place. CRT hates America and what it has done for the world. Without America fighting for what is right, we would still be under England's control, there would be no America. Without America Hitler would have won. Without America, Stalin would have won. Without America Japan would have won. Respect American history, American values and vote against CRT's lies. Vote not to have Critical Race Theory in our school system.

Richard and Emilia Williams

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Margaret Williams <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 8:12 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Margaret Williams
601 Vassar Dr NE
Albuquerque , NM 87106

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards 6.29.11

Allen Willard <allenwillard@outlook.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 8:33 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

As a father of a 4th grader, I am deeply concerned about the proposed set of rules. The ambiguity of the language leaves too much to be determined by future policy. The legalistic nature of the wording and the length of the proposed document do not give, educators nor parents enough time to evaluate and determine what is trying to be taught to the children. There are no examples of how this is going to be implemented, or what kind of material will be introduced. Also, no clear outlying of who's going to be choosing the material and how it will get implemented into the learning environment. With the things that are going on in other states around the county I am afraid of what might creep into the curriculum for our students. The Covid-19 pandemic has already made it difficult for our children. The lack of dedicated school time and the social toll it has taken on these poor kids are already hard enough on them. I do not understand why we don't focus on the core subjects and help them understand the math, science, and language arts better instead of trying to re-write history. I understand the importance of history and learning from past mistakes but erasing them and trying to create new facts does not feel like the proper way to help us learn from our history. There has already been an exodus of talented families from New Mexico with the current political and economic climate, and a rule change like this could drive more of them away. We all should want the best and brightest for our kids future. Please take these concerns into account when you are implementing changes and listen to the parents input.

Thank you,

Allen Willard

[EXTERNAL] History curriculum

Margaret Marti <mmarti505@gmail.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 8:42 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

History is difficult. We're living proof of that during these times. Let's teach our children about the controversies so that, perhaps, they can be better prepared to deal with the ones they will face. Let's frame US history as it actually happened.

Margaret Marti

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

John Thayer <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 11:36 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

John Thayer
POB 124
Buena Vista, NM 87712

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Cynthia Jacques <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 1:59 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Cynthia Jacques
7012 Husky DR NE
Rio Rancho, NM 87144

[EXTERNAL] PED Social Studies proposed standards

Daniel Banks <danbanks@usa.net>

Sat 10/16/2021 2:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (18 KB)

PED Comments.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Daniel C. Banks

9 Sagebrush Trl
Artesia, NM 88210

Public comment and rejection to NMPED Social Studies Standards proposal

On your web site you stated: You redeveloped the Social Studies Standards “ using current evidence-based practices, research and data to create a culturally responsive set of Social Studies Standards that focus on the knowledge, skills and dispositions critical to ensure ALL students in New Mexico are college, career, and civic ready.”

That is a bold face lie, as there is no evidence-based need to “redevelop Social Studies Standards. What you have proposed is exactly what NM Children DO NOT NEED! And those proposed redeveloped standards will NOT lead to your “mission: ensure all students are college, career, and civic ready.”

You falsely claim the current standards do not address the increasingly diverse perspectives and histories of the peoples of New Mexico. You present no evidence to support that claim. And you are wrong.

You claim you used a series of “guiding principles” to help give the actual curriculum writers something to consider as they were creating the new standards. But these “guiding principles” have some rather troubling words and phrases that seem to indicate a far different type of social studies curriculum than a traditional social studies curriculum which focuses on dates and events, constitutional rights and processes, etc. Words and phrases like “power,” “class conflict,” “social justice,” “equity” (not equality), “relationship between power and oppression,” “strong historical consciousness representative of many perspectives while allowing students to maintain his/hers/their own cultural integrity” are all elements of critical theory and its subgroup CRT. These words and phrases are the warning signs that our children are at risk FROM YOU!

There are numerous areas where CRT concepts are being mandated to be taught, (especially in the Ethnic, Cultural, and Identify Studies arena). You know this, yet you want to impose this on OUR children. SHAME ON YOU.

Local school boards have an important responsibility in making sure that public schools teach content that accurately reflects American ideals and your proposal certainly does not do that. Our local school board is rightfully concerned by what you want to impose on us against our will. How can that be civic? Or American? It isn't.

I believe and request that PED to provide a detailed briefing to all state legislators once the new standards are released publicly. Legislators NEED and DESERVE to know what you are trying to force on our schools

Our Social Studies curriculum should promote civics knowledge, not social action and diversity training. Educators should focus on teaching how our government functions, the importance of constitutional rights and the equal treatment under the law, as well as historical facts and content that prepare students for life after school. Is not that what you implied here: "Social Studies Standards that focus on the knowledge, skills and dispositions critical to ensure ALL students in New Mexico are college, career, and civic ready."

There is no rational reason why a student should be forced to attend a school within their zip code if that school is teaching content that is antithetical to the values and ideals of that family. And there is no valid reason PED should be imposing such things to our schools.

Your proposed Standards have wrong dates and information. European nations of 15th century? No names of specific explorers. 16th Century not included.

Little to no guidance on content specifics (people, places dates, events).

None of the following are included: Pocahontas, Juan Ponce De Leon, William Penn, Anne Hutchinson, George Washington, James Madison, John Locke, The Prophet and his brother Tecumseh, Five Civilized Tribes, Trail of Tears, Indian removal Act, Manifest Destiny, Hiram Revels, Blanche K. Bruce, Dred Scott, John Brown, Fredrick Douglas, just to list a few.

THERE ARE MANY OTHER PROBLEMS WITH THESE "STANDARDS".

History 16 8.48 "Compare and contrast the causes, demographics, and results of the American Revolution with those of later revolutions inspired by the American Revolution." The causes of the American Revolution should be standard, but is not under these new proposals. Even the results of the American Revolution are not clearly taught and much of our history has been raped and pillaged by those who wish to change it to more closely match their own thoughts and ideas.

Even more troubling is the claim that Indigenous peoples around the world have the potential to inform solutions to global problems as every human being has the same potential as do indigenous peoples. History is SUPPOSED TO BE FACTS THAT HAVE BEEN ACCEPTED AS TRUTH, NOT WISHES, HOPES AND DREAMS.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of jraldrich@earthlink.net <jraldrich@earthlink.net>

Sat 10/16/2021 7:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

The proposed standards for teaching social studies/economics in New Mexico schools are truly astonishing. I consider myself among the blessed because my accountant father, also a Baptist deacon, and my mother sat me down at age 7 or 8 to begin giving me an allowance. The 25 cents was broken into pennies, nickels, and dimes so that father could explain about the 10% of "earned income" that should go to God and the church. Fortunately for me, such personal finance instruction continued as needed throughout our lives -- but I don't recall his talking about a "budget" until I was well into high school.

I'm trying to say that the standards for teaching/learning about personal finance are set high, it seems to me, but if even half of the proposed standards/topics are presented and learned, New Mexico's public school students will be winners! Thus,

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments -- and for what you have done already for "the greater good" of New Mexico.

Sincerely,

Johnnie Ruth Aldrich
4653 Maxim Court
Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Robert Kossmann <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 8:03 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Robert Kossmann
2003 Calle Lejano
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Newly revised Social Standards

Cate Moses <cmoses@montedelsol.org>

Sat 10/16/2021 8:58 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am resending this because it does not appear to have been received and published on the NMPED website. I originally sent it on Oct. 8.

I wholeheartedly support the newly drafted K-12 Social Studies Standards that focus on tribal sovereignty, social justice, and sustainable futures. It is important that they go forward without changes. This is how we create a more just and compassionate world.

I have five grandchildren in NM public schools. These new standards will go a long way toward helping them on the path to understanding and compassion in our complex times.

We are all indebted to the educators who committed many thoughtful volunteer hours to bring these thoughtful new standards into being.

Best regards,
Cate

Cate Moses, Ph.D.

she her hers

McKinney Vento Specialist

Monte del Sol Charter School

4157 Walking Rain Rd., Santa Fe, NM 87507

Mon. & Wed. 9:00-4:00; Tues. 9:00-12:30

mobile: 505-920-8227

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jo Ann Benenati <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 10/16/2021 9:58 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

I live in McKinley County, where so many families are living paycheck to paycheck, or public assistance check to public assistance check. So often, families resort to payday lenders without realizing the hole they are digging for themselves.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Sincerely,

Jo Ann Benenati
3502 Church Rock St
Gallup, NM 87301

[EXTERNAL]

stacie@americanwestre.com <stacie@americanwestre.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 7:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

This is the most damaging, racist, Marxist rules that will make our current state worse off. Not only to I NOT AGREE with teaching children this horrific, damaging education, I also do not agree that schools need to be in this position, period. Children are natural not race conscious.... They are naturally focused on just playing, this teaches them to be conscious and therefore defeats the actual purpose of this ridiculous law. YOU NEED TO STOP BEING A SOCIALIST AND CONCENTRATE ON BEING AN AMERICAN!!!

Stacie Ewing

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Robert Kossmann <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 9:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Robert Kossmann
2003 Calle Lejano
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Comment on proposed rule for teaching of history and social studies in NM

David Rice <dr45236@gmail.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 11:55 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

As citizens of New Mexico, we appreciate the effort which PED is making to provide our teachers with improved guidance on the teaching of history and social studies.

We strongly support this highly detailed guidance for teaching these important subjects over the grades K-12. Adoption of these standards and the support of our educators throughout the state will provide our citizens with a strong, fact-based foundation for their careers and for their participation in governing New Mexico in the future.

Thank you for considering our input.

David and Virginia Rice, 4074 La Purisima Dr,, Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] 4th grade social studies curriculum

Pete Kinnas <pkinnas@fms.k12.nm.us>

Sun 10/17/2021 2:00 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Lambson, Nicole <nlambson@fms.k12.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Unless I missed something, it looks like all of the 4th grade social studies curriculum is about New Mexico. If so, I believe this is very limited for the students and confining for the teachers. Fourth graders are very capable of learning the branches of government, bill of rights. Our students last year role-played the 3 branches of government, creating a law through Congress, and moving it up to the executive level. The students formalized a Playground Rights Document, which is now displayed in various places on campus.

Our current 4th-grade social studies reflects the proposed 5th-grade standards. These should continue to be taught in 4th grade, and the 5th-grade should enhance the complexity of the same standards. I would be very discouraged teaching an all New-Mexico curriculum. Again, maybe I misinterpreted things.

Respectfully,

--

Pete Kinnas, M.S., Curriculum and Instruction/Reading
4th Grade Teacher
McKinley Elementary School

This is a staff email account managed by Farmington Municipal Schools. This email and any files transmitted with it are confidential and intended solely for the use of the individual or entity to whom they are addressed. If you have received this email in error please notify the sender.

Confidentiality Notice: This e-mail, including all attachments, is for the sole use of the intended recipients and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure, or distribution is prohibited unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message.

[EXTERNAL] Re: social studies curriculum/standards, NM PED Comment Period thru Nov. 12, 2021

Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>

Sun 10/17/2021 2:57 PM

To: Michael Potts <michaelspotts1951@gmail.com>

Cc: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr Potts,

Thank you for such a direct and focussed evaluation of this lunacy. In my review of the social studies standards I find nowhere religious practices and beliefs mentioned, Those beliefs and practices were and are the major driving force in how a culture functions not only in our Native American cultures but in the influence those practices had in Mexico 500 years ago and are now prevalent in our own State culture to it's demise. One cannot be culturally sensitive without a comparative study of religious influences whether they be pagan sacrificial or biblical and everything in between. One would be hard pressed to find a decent such course in any University in the U.S.. Why, because of man's inherent prejudiced nature.

As I keep pointing out. Justice in America is defined as treatment without prejudice. Social Justice defines as treatment with prejudice, therefore social justice is unjust.

Rob Wood

On Oct 16, 2021, at 5:18 PM, Michael Potts <michaelspotts1951@gmail.com> wrote:

Here are the comments I would like to share with the Rules committee on the Primary and Secondary Education Standards for excellence in Social Studies. Please see attached.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Michael Potts

On Thu, Sep 30, 2021 at 12:16 PM <rick@verde-environmental.com> wrote:

Rob, thank you for your thoughtful comments to the NM PED. We are also going to Promote Comments later today or tomorrow, the more the better.

I have read thru the standards, they're reviewed about 10 years, and there's a whole lot of social justice/cultural focus content that doesn't belong.

Rick R.

P.S. I attached the standards with my "rough" quick look highlighting of what I see doesn't belong.

From: Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>
Sent: Thursday, September 30, 2021 10:49 AM
To: CCIAWINUSA <CCIAWINUSA@PROTONMAIL.COM>; Sandra Macha <sandra@macha4lcps.net>; rick@verde-environmental.com
Cc: abel@abelforschoolboard.org; Henry Young <chaphy65@gmail.com>; francisco@macha4lcps.net
Subject: social studies curriculum

Hi All,

Here is my feed back to the NM Dept. of Education on a new culturally relevant social studies curriculum.

How to submit feedback:

- By email to rule.feedback@state.nm.us
- By regular mail addressed to John Sena, Policy Division, New Mexico Public Education Department, 300 Don Gaspar Ave., Room 121, Santa Fe, NM, 87501.
- By fax to 505-827-6520.

Submit before Nov 12th.

Rob

Dear Mr Sena,

On a new social studies curriculum.

The establishment of some grand new curriculum that reflects the 109 year history of New Mexicans is a complete travesty in thinking. Making it in some way seem culturally relevant makes it a complete distortion of reality because of attempting to confine it to some simple minded time frame as if nothing existed before culturally. Before ever embarking on formalizing anything I suggest looking at Mexican history and the impact the Spanish had when they conquered what was at one time New Mexico by reviewing Carl Lawrence's "The Cross and the Sword". Without the relevance of that history the only culture relevance you would have is to the Native American history of our state which way predates it becoming a state.

I understand the desire to come up with some seemingly socially just curriculum but that is no different than attempting to make all of life fair.

Justice is defined as: Treatment without favoritism.

Social Justice is defined as: Treatment with favoritism.

Therefore, Social Justice is Unjust.

My suggestion is to base social studies on what is offered in the most credible history book ever written and studied to establish factual time frames and human behaviors, the "Bible". Social Studies is the study of how society behaved. Sure we all look better and smell better, but it is no different today than the thousands upon thousands of years of history contained within that book (actually 2 books, The Old Testament and The New Testament).

Sincerely,

Rob Wood

<Comments on Social Studies Standards.docx>

Comments

Primary and Secondary Education,
Chapter 29, Standards for Excellence
Part II, Social Studies

I, Michael Potts, will attempt to keep this short although with 38 pages of Standards to wade through, that might not be possible. After having gone through all 38 pages and stopping to think about this work that you have done, I have arrived at the conclusion that in order to really assess the work one needs to compare a curriculum of each grade / a course of instruction used by the teacher in the classroom, to these standards in order to further evaluate just WHAT you expect teachers to teach each child.

You have created a very ADULT, convoluted set of Standards that I am sure even teachers in the classroom will have difficulty understanding. As I have had no children in school for some 20 plus years, I am sure the field of education must have changed drastically. However, it is my opinion that in kindergarten we should expect a child of 4 or 5 to be able to color between the lines, know their shapes like Circle, Square, Triangle. They should be started on telling time, know their address, perhaps know a phone number. They should be started on their A, B, C's and learn to spell their name. Perhaps start on reading just a little. For example, "Look Jane, See Spot, See Spot run. Spot is a dog". For a kindergartener to be able to demonstrate an understanding of "Incentives and Choices" by distinguishing between a basic need and a want is just a little farfetched. A 4- or 5-year-old ONLY understands what they WANT. I am wondering if you have forgotten how to be a teacher and how a child reacts to things. A child of that age cannot communicate the PURPOSE of rules nor explain how rules help people work together. That is a little bit more advanced than a 4- or 5-year-old can handle. For Geography it is a little too much to expect a 4- or 5-year-old to be able to demonstrate an understanding of movement, population, and systems by explaining why and how people move from place to place within a community. Heck, even I, at the age of 70, have a hard time trying to explain why people move from place to place.

You have a 4-year-old demonstrating an understanding of constructing compelling and supporting questions. Do YOU even know what a compelling question is? Those questions are questions we ask about topics, event or ideas and are open to different interpretation or opinions and have multiple possible answers. Do you REALLY think a 4- or 5-year-old could possibly have a different interpretation or opinion on any subject? Those questions also make a claim that is backed by facts and evidence so I ask you, how many 4- or 5-year-olds can possibly have any facts at their fingertips when they have just begun to learn the basics. Where are the building blocks that need to be taught before they can even begin to know what a fact is? Where have you mentioned teaching the basics and when have you begin to build that child into someone in later years who can find the facts?

In going through your Standards you have included "Ethnic, cultural, and identity standards" in every grade. I think you have heard a multitude of times from all walks of lives and from many Parents mouths that they do NOT want ethnic studies included in the classrooms. These "Ethnic Studies" include for example in third grade you want a 7-year-old to compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups and demonstrate an understanding of community "Equity Building" by identifying the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the WORLD"??? Are you kidding me!!! A 7-year-old cannot even begin to understand much less identify people and groups who have worked to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

In who's world are you living when you say you can identify groups that have done that? Are you speaking from the view point of the leaders of Communist China who think their way is right and just and fair or are you speaking of the Socialistic ideals of leaders of Venezuela who have driven their country to the brink of ruin? Just WHO do you think these groups are. It would be BEST if you taught our children the Ideals that we in America grew up with. The ideals of hard work, of honesty, of integrity, of doing things for yourself and making something of yourself through your own hard work. Freedom ---- Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, Free to own property, right of people to keep and bear arms. You need to look at starting to teach the basics of our Constitution to these young kids.

In high school, your section on Ethnic, cultural, and identity studies includes (b) identifying and analyzing differently abled, ethnic, gender, national political, racial and religious identities, and related perceptions and behaviors by society of these identities” YOU MUST take the attempted teachings and expectations of gender, race and politics out of these standards. You are interfering with and usurping the rights and duties of the parent. YOU seem to think that YOU and your teachers should serve as a PARENT model and that is FAR from what we want you to do. We will teach our children the ethnic, gender, national political, racial and religious mores that we have formulated in our lives and what WE BELIEVE to be true. This, will we teach to our children, and we do NOT want you to teach them otherwise! What we have strived to teach them at home in these arenas is not up for interpretation by teachers or Government! It is NOT your job to be a parent, it is your job to teach the subject matter in which you are supposed to be proficient. There is NO teacher who is qualified to do and instruct in the manner you have laid out in your Standards. In these standards you have broken people and society into “GROUPS”. This is unacceptable as we have striven for 170 years to Unite EVERYONE and teach them that they are AMERICANS. We do not need to be teaching a division of people or making groups of people.

In section (3)(b) You want to investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community. In my Humble Opinion, there is no such thing as Systemic Inequity. That is a term made up in the 1960's in California. Understanding systemic inequality is impossible because it isn't visible. Systemic inequality is something that cultivates and distributes an array of values, concepts, realities that pave the level of available resources which eventually shape the general ability for one to succeed.

After a couple of more examples I will finish up. On page 29 of your Standards for High School United States History: paragraph “A” section g, the standard is “comparing and contrasting global historical reconciliation and reparations efforts, (Denazification, Australia Mabo Case/ Terra Nullius) with reconstruction.” The Mabo Case / Terra Nullius is an Australian problem and case and in no way relates to United States History. What should be taught here is Manifest Destiny first coined in 1845 and is the idea that the United States is destined – by GOD, its advocates believed – to expand its dominion and spread democracy and capitalism across the entire North American Continent. Denazification (German: Entnazifizierung) was an Allied initiative to rid German and Austrian society, culture, press, economy, judiciary, and politics of the Nazi ideology following the Second World War. It was carried out by removing those who had been Nazi Party or SS members from positions of power and influence and by disbanding or rendering impotent the organizations associated with Nazism. Does this really belong in United States History? Perhaps a part of what you suggest does but nothing dealing with the Mabo Case is relevant to U.S. History. Take that part of your standard out.

Section X “examining the short- and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America”. Again, which of your teachers is knowledgeable enough about what the CIA actually did to teach it? This is not for U.S. History.

Section (cc) “assessing the short – and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people” I would ask, where is the equal study of Liberalism /Progressivism on diverse groups of people? Are you not going to teach the failure of the Liberal Left so as to compare it with the Conservative Right? Being pretty biased here, aren’t we?

Section (ii) examining anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States over time and the experiences of diverse immigrant groups past and present” There really is NO anti-immigrant sentiment that is prevalent or has been prevalent in the United States. The Truth of the matter is that people just want the LAW to be followed and the law to be abided by. This is a good place to look at the curriculum in the teachers’ hands to see what is being taught in the classroom. Are we teaching our children about Ellis Island in New York Harbor and Angel Island in San Francisco Harbor? Immigrants came there, were processed and then legally sent on their way to become Americans. Are you teaching our Children that just ANY Tom, Dick, and Harry can come into the United States whenever they want to?

Paragraph (2), The student shall demonstrate an understanding of causes and consequences by section (a) “examining the course and consequences of the Columbian exchange.” Now who has ever heard of this before. The Columbian Exchange is defined “The Columbian Exchange is one of the most significant events in all of world history. It led to a major transformation between the New and Old Worlds that fundamentally changed the way of life for people across the entire world. When Christopher Columbus set sail to the Americas in 1493 on his second voyage he brought with him many seeds, plants and livestock. This cargo started a 'grand exchange' and revolution between the New World and the Old World that would alter the world forever because he had brought with him seeds, plants and livestock that were not originally occurring in the New World.” This section should be taken out of U.S. History and put into World History.

There is so much more that is wrong with these Standards that I really have run out of time and space to comment on. Needless to say, I can’t see where they are helpful in any way to the teachers that have to teach each class. They are convoluted, make no sense as they are written for each grade and try too hard to usurp the responsibilities of the Family Unit. Race, gender, politics, liberalism and or conservativeness need to be taken out or treated fairly as opposing ideologies in our Nation. Best to leave it out and let the Parents decide how they want to teach their children in regards to ethics, gender, religion, and diversity. It is not the schools place to play Parent and usurp the parents’ role in raising out children.

Those are my comments, take them or leave them but a LOT more work needs to be done on these standards to make them coherent.

Michael S. Potts
Las Cruces, New Mexico

[EXTERNAL] Revamping guidelines for teaching history and social studies in K-12

VIRGINIA HERRICK <vherrick1@comcast.net>

Sun 10/17/2021 3:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Changing the guidelines is absolutely essential in order to improve the self esteem of our Hispanic, Native American and Black children as well as other children who do not fall into the category that follows the present guidelines. Viewing on line the statistics of each group of the above listed, in New Mexico 47.8% or more are Hispanic and of those 1 out of 3 speak Spanish at home, 9.55% are Native American, which is 2nd to Alaska in numbers and 2.6% are black.

Are we a segregated society? I hope not, but our present school curriculum certainly indicates we are.

Virginia VanMeter Herrick
Northern European Heritage

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards 6.29.11 NMAC

Nancy Koenigsberg <nmkberg@gmail.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 5:47 PM

To: Nancy Koenigsberg <nmkberg@gmail.com>; FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello:

I write to whole heartedly support the proposed Social Studies standards and ask that you adopt them.

The 60 member committee did an amazing job drafting them. The standards require students to learn about, recognize and examine the perspectives of people and communities, both historical and current, who are different from themselves. In addition, the standards are designed to teach critical thinking about the New Mexico's complex and diverse social history. 6.29.11.13 F Inquiry, describes the overarching theme well: "Demonstrate an understanding of gathering and evaluating sources by determining the credibility of multiple sources."

Please adopt these proposed regulations as written.

(PS: you might consider adding "Oil and Gas" to 29.11.12 B (3).)

Sincerely,

Nancy Koenigsberg

--

Nancy Koenigsberg

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Bill Bright <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 6:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Bill Bright
402 W Morgan Ave
Gallup, NM 87301

[EXTERNAL] Social studies curriculum

Allen Andersen <dadandersen@gmail.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 6:59 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Greetings,

As a parent of 8 students in New Mexico schools, I am greatly interested in the changes you are making to the social studies curriculum.

I believe updates are long past due.

My concerns are, given the current political climate, you are going to get a lot of feedback from people who haven't really read through the document and are instead only going to key in on buzzwords and phrases.

You're going to get emails saying we need to teach "America First" and "no Critical Race Theory" and "don't mention gun control" and other "conservative" talking points.

I beg you, please, don't bow to peer pressure.

I have reviewed the outline and I believe the updates you've made are important to keep our students informed of our past as well as our present and are to critically think about important events as they encounter them, past or present.

I sincerely hope that as you review the feedback you get that you dismiss, outright, any notes you get that are politically motivated and focus solely on what is best for our students and instructors.

Peace.

[EXTERNAL] Re: proposed rule regarding Social Studies curriculum

Stephen W Kennedy <swkennedy49@gmail.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 7:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

On Sun, Oct 17, 2021 at 7:28 PM Stephen Kennedy <swkennedy49@hotmail.com> wrote:

John Sena, Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

Over the past several months, I've spoken with many New Mexicans who are concerned that government-funded schools (public schools) are actively pursuing a Social Studies curriculum that embraces systemic racism. Parents feel that the New Mexico Public Education Department is actively promoting a change in curriculum that, although disguised as something else, is nothing more than a movement to teach critical race theory.

New Mexico funds "public education" at one of the highest levels in the nation, with the poorest return on the investment. I know; because, I served in the New Mexico Legislature and worked specifically to make the public school funding formula more equitable for rural districts with significant federal impact aid for minority students. New Mexico ranks at the very bottom in education results - not a bragging point.

Critical race theory, even disguised as updating of Social Studies curriculum, is designed to rewrite American history in a manner that makes some people feel guilty due to their ethnicity or the past actions of people of their ethnicity. "Race" and "racism" are widely misused words when you consider that all people belong to the human race.

Supporters of CRT curriculum claim that they are protecting the dignity of all people. Do you propose teaching students from minority ethnic groups about Irish and Scottish slaves brought to America and held in indentured servitude? Have remunerations for the descendants of these slaves from the British Isles been discussed in your study group that proposed this regulation? Some of them live in New Mexico.

Some people feel this regulation will protect the dignity of all people. Who is the arbiter of how this regulation does so? Some say this proposal would not change what history can and cannot be taught, but would simply prevent schools from endorsing discriminatory concepts. Who is the arbiter of what is discriminatory? The Public Education Department? Local school boards? Teachers? Parents? Supporters argue that no one, especially children, should be made to feel inferior because of the color of their skin. They point out that students should not be used as instruments in a political game. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr famously said in an oft-quoted speech nearly 50 years ago that he dreams about the day when his children are judged by the content of their character, not the color of their skin. This proposed PED regulation has the opposite impact by judging people by the color of their skin.

It is not up to people in 2021 to rewrite parts of our nation's history from 50 years ago, 150 years ago, 235 years ago, 400 years ago, or even 525 years ago. It is the responsibility of educators to teach history...the good, the bad, and the ugly. In doing so, educators must demonstrate and practice impartiality. It is not the role of educators to engage in a presentation of history that is clearly intended to foster ethnic hatred.

I'm not aware of a single American born after the Great Depression who is responsible for the practice of slavery that lead to the Civil War. I grew up in Gallup, NM among 30 different ethnic groups. I grew up as a minority within several other minorities. For that matter, I'm not aware of a single Hispanic New Mexican who is responsible for the savagery attributed to Don Juan de Onate.

This regulation does nothing to promote harmony between many diverse ethnic groups that make up the fabric of our state and nation. It's a bad idea that should be tossed on the as heap of other bad ideas. The NM Public Education should be focused on processes that put New Mexico schools in the top 10% of all states, not dead last, behind even Puerto Rico. I ask you to withdraw this regulation.

Sincerely,

Stephen W Kennedy
1503 S Cliff Dr
Gallup, NM. 87301-5903
swkennedy49@hotmail.com
(505) 879-2207

--
"We in America do not have government by the majority. We have government by the majority who participate. All tyranny needs to gain a foothold is for people of good conscience to remain silent."
President Thomas Jefferson

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Stephen Feldman <smfeldman01@gmail.com>

Sun 10/17/2021 10:24 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern

We are the grandparents of two pupils in Albuquerque Public Schools who have multi-ethnic and multi-racial backgrounds. We write in strong support of revising the Social Studies curriculum to reflect teaching with a sensitivity towards ethnicity and racial diversity. Students should gain a more enhanced life perspective when they learn accurate information in school regarding the accurate history of racism in America since 1619, the reality of oppressed groups including indigenous peoples and slavery, the continuing effort of African-Americans to achieve equality with Caucasian-Americans, the continuing struggle of women in achieving equality with men and the accurate history of Native American people and other marginalized groups including Hispanics and Latinos. It is also important for pupils to be educated on how to become civically engaged in current events such as writing letters to representatives and the newspaper and actively participating in appropriate protests. This curriculum should be focused on treating people of all backgrounds humanely, especially oppressed people, so as not to further racism and stereotyping.

Thank you,

Stephen and Anna Feldman

Retired teachers

Albuquerque, NM

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Albert maze <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 8:01 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Albert maze
308 spruce lane
taos, NM 87571

[EXTERNAL] I Fully Support The Newly Drafted Social Studies Standards.

Wendy Leighton <wleighton@montedelsol.org>

Mon 10/18/2021 8:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I fully support the newly drafted K-12 Social Studies Standards focusing on tribal sovereignty, social justice and sustainable futures. As a life-long educator and activist, I commend the New Mexico Public Education Department and the teachers involved for taking steps to improve education in our state. The updated standards are much needed as it has almost been 20 years since they have been thoroughly revised.

These professional educators continue to work passionately and tirelessly on developing the most thorough, up-to-date and historically accurate social studies standards for our youth for generations to come. We are dedicated to ensuring students are provided a well-rounded and multi-faceted education where all voices and stories are part of their school experience including the contributions of marginalized groups in history.

For example, in addition to learning about the struggles and contributions of women in society throughout history, students will now be required to learn about important events, people and civil rights movements led by the disabled and LGBTQ+ communities. In most schools, students are taught about the historic 1963 March on Washington for jobs and freedom where Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. gave his famous speech, I Have a Dream. Now, students will also learn that Bayard Rustin was the organizer of that march, mentor to Dr. King and an important activist. Bayard Rustin played a central role in the civil rights movement for African-Americans. Most Americans may not know that Mr. Rustin was openly gay and a key figure in United States history. Despite being jailed many times for speaking up for equal rights for gays and lesbians, he peacefully protested for the rest of his life for non-violence and human rights.

I am encouraging the members of the Rules Committee to endorse these updated Social Studies Standards and show that New Mexico is ready to take a lead in education in our nation. Let's stand together with those who have come before us like Bayard Rustin who paved the way for equal opportunity in education and society.

In solidarity,
Wendy Leighton
Founding Faculty Member
Monte del Sol Charter School
Santa Fe, New Mexico

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jennifer Wilson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 9:11 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Wilson
3481 CORRALES RD
CORRALES, NM 87048

[EXTERNAL] 6:29.11NMAC, Social Studies

DOLORES REMINGTON <dolores.remington@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 9:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have perused the outline for teaching social studies. Most of it seems adequate. I am, however concerned and opposed to the section labeled Ethnic, cultural and identity studies. If the NMPED wishes to teach critical race theory it should be a separate class that parents agree to. Maybe it could be taught as critical race theory or even a self awareness class. It could be and probably should be an elective class.

It seems inappropriate to add any subjects when so many students have fallen so far behind because of COVID 19. This state is not one of the top 10 states when it comes to national testing and adding a mandatory critical race theory hidden in the social studies curriculum seems to be counterintuitive.

Thank you,
Dolores Remington

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Social Studies Benchmark Proposal

Glenn Wikle <glennwikle@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 10:09 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Clearly, out-of-state fringe political groups have ganged up to flood this process with comments that suit their political agenda.

I hope it is clear to educators and associated decision makers that informing students of the experiences of diverse groups of people who live among them will improve tolerance both in our schools and in our society. You simply cannot deny the existence of any subgroup: it opens the door for discrimination and hate.

I'm sure a majority of New Mexicans agree with me. Don't be thrown off course by campaigns of a minority of Americans to skew this process.

Glenn Wikle
Former School Board Member
Santa Fe

[EXTERNAL] Feedback

You <allenamy773@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 10:20 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

New Mexico ranks at or near the bottom of almost all education rankings. There are more important things to focus on than gender and sexuality norms, etc.

We need to teach unity, not division among kids. Our world is already divided enough. If this curriculum is something that will be passed in the future or now, my kids will not be attending middle school or high school.

I want our kids to learn respect for others, not hatred.

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Mona Kirk <mskirk@mail4me.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 10:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Policy division,

I am very much a post to the repeal of 6.2 9.11 NMAC social studies standards. I do not agree with the revisions, in addition we need more time to unpack the newly proposed lengthy Standards. I believe in teaching history as factual as written without implementing beliefs or opinions. Individuals beliefs or opinion have no place in education. Facts only!

Thank you, Mona Kirk

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, in support of initiative for public health

Elizabeth Fryer <modharma@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 12:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Elizabeth Fryer2835 Don Quixote*Santa Fe NM 87505*10/18/21*John Sena*Policy Division*New Mexico Public Education Department

300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena;

Please consider this letter to be my formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

I am writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. I want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and I was impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. As a psychotherapist having worked with children and families for over 40 years I believe the mental/emotional health of our children is primary and synonymous with the health of our communities. Educators, naturally, focus on cognitive development but there's always a quantifiable concurrent mental/emotional impact to education. Many of New Mexico's students have been living with the trauma of being misrepresented, under represented and marginalized; essentially undervalued, which has been perpetuated in NM (and national) education. This affects ALL New Mexican children! This community based trauma is quantifiable in numerous research and obvious to anyone paying attention. It's demonstrated in behaviors from simple apathy to active behavioral problems and suicidality. These new standards aim at mending this public health issue in a number of ways:

Elevating and including marginalized groups/students reflects their explicit and implicit value

Teaching fact based history that's NOT biased/ethnocentric demonstrates value and relevance

Critical thinking and DIALOGUE based in fact (not bias) facilitates healing and development of active creative citizenship

Understanding inclusion and empathy for differences/others is a skill and basic to any healthy initiative, personal or civic

Pride/self confidence of each individual's uniqueness translates to agency and how we each can CONTRIBUTE to the health and effectiveness of the WHOLE community

My emphasis is on the public health aspect of this new curriculum, the mental and emotional health of NM children and communities. NM has very rich history with amazing diversity where we, as a state, can take a unique stand in setting an example of how that's our asset. The curriculum will begin to address the inequalities in the current curriculum but it's just the beginning. I would hope that the curriculum continues to be refined and updated as it is implemented. It might also be part of a larger public health strategy to research it's mental/emotional impact on students over time.

10/18/21, 1:44 PM

Mail - FeedBack, Rule, PED - Outlook

In closing, I urge the department to adopt these as the new standards for the health and well-being of our communities now and future.

Respectfully,

Elizabeth Fryer

--

Elizabeth Fryer

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Barbara Bloomberg <bbloom8800@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 1:06 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena,

Please consider this letter to be my formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.2911 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.2911 NMAC, Social Studies.

I am a citizen concerned that our children graduate equipped to be critical thinkers and actors on behalf of their own interests. I am also a grandmother who has lived through McCarthyism, the New Deal, and now a polarized country.

I am writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. I want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and I was impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. I believe the K-8 standards and the framework of the 6 strands works beautifully. If I were to teach to these standards, I can envision how I or an experienced teacher might do so effectively engaging students. Had my generation been taught to these standards, I am convinced we would have a healthier democracy. While I found the high school standards also admirable, they could be better organized to ensure a clearer presentation. In their present form there is a lot of repetition.

These standards respect the intelligence of children, concentrate on teaching critical thinking, evaluation of the credibility of data sources. I am especially impressed by the following strand:

For history, children learn about past events and historical change as well as continuity and context. They also learn about traditions and reconciliation. They are introduced to the meaning of leadership, their own agency, and power.

In closing, I urge the department to adopt the bulk of these standards, with refinements. I hope the department will stand up to those who seek to preserve the old approach to teaching social studies and history, that is Eurocentric and fails to enable children to face the challenge that are ever-present in their daily lives. Children need to master the standards outline in this regulation to prepare to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectfully,

Barbara Bloomberg
11 Camino Esperanza
Santa Fe, N.M. 87507

[EXTERNAL] Socail Studies Standards

Stephanie Feldman <stephaniefeldman17@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 1:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Stephanie Feldman
31 Arroyo Privado
Santa Fe, NM 87507

October 18,2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Dept.
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, room 121
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Dear Mr. Sena,

Please consider this letter to be my formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. As a former educator with 33 years of experience I applaud these new standards. They are inclusive and innovative. I believe these new standards will make our students better citizens which will make our state better as well.

I urge the rules committee to adopt these new standards.

Respectfully,
Stephanie Feldman

[EXTERNAL] draft social studies standards stephen murillo <lobo362@yahoo.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 1:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I do not support the new social studies standards being proposed. This standard is is racists, anti-hispanic, anti-American and pushes a LGBTQ agenda. I do not support this. I also do not support the socialist/communist aspect that this standard is pushing.

The way in which the Constitution is being presented as a racist document is ludicrous. The Constitution says "all men are created equal" and that is the standard American has been pushing more than any other country in the world. America is not perfect, but has been the leader in making people more equal and free. If this social studies standards are adopted, we will see America become the leader in oppression and slavery.

Stephen Murillo
5 Ladera Ct.
Edgewood NM, 87015

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards need to be updated

Kristine Mayle <kamayle@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 1:33 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern,

I believe that the NM Social Studies standards for K-12 need to be updated to reflect a more accurate portrayal of our history and to prepare our students to become full, participatory citizens in our democracy. Instead of giving in to people that do not believe our students can handle the ugly truths of our nation's past, we need to prepare our students to be critical thinkers who analyze first person texts and participate in discussions about the nature of democracy and the country we want to live in. The last couple of years have shown that people across this country do not understand some of the most basic tenets of our democracy. They don't understand how different groups of people have been impacted over time. A friend just pointed out that we are all taught the names of the ships Columbus brought to the "new world" but very few of our citizens have been taught about, or can even name the peoples that were removed from their land and brutalized beginning after Columbus's arrival.

My understanding is that these new standards were developed by social studies teachers who know their content area, what skills students currently possess and need, and will be the ones tasked with implementing these new standards. I trust that my colleagues know best how to do their jobs and what our students need to be successful.

Please demonstrate that you understand and appreciate that history needs to be taught from multiple perspectives and that our students need to be presented with real facts in order to understand the impacts and implications of our complicated, and often sad history.

Sincerely,
Kristine Mayle, MAEd
Level III Teacher, APS
15+ years experience

--

Kristine

This electronic message may contain confidential, proprietary or privileged information.
It is intended for the use only of the named recipient. If you are not the intended recipient, please notify the sender and delete the message; do not disclose, distribute, or copy the information.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Rules

Dena Patterson <hisimageinc@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 2:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am very displeased and would like to recommend that the longer that we continue to teach and proceed to add more things in our schools to separate cultures and individuals in this country the more we are going to divide the country. We should be teaching our children things like reading, writing, and arithmetic and not trying to separate and point out and exploit peoples different cultures. Give the truth!! If we do not want our children to see different races and feel separated from each other than we need to be teaching more on being one! Americans! Teach the children that they are the only ones that can dictate who they are and what they can become. Not teaching them the struggles of different cultures due to history.

We need to encourage our young minds to be what they set their minds to be. And teaching unity and not separation.

I can see that the goal of a lot of the modifications in this document are to point out the differences and I strongly disagree.

Dena Patterson

New Mexico State Resident and mother of 4

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

debbiebakerhomes@gmail.com <debbiebakerhomes@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 2:28 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As the mother of a high schooler, I am opposed to public schools teaching Critical Race Theory.

Thank you!

Debbie Baker
Cell: (505) 620-8933

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Sarah Stanley <sarah.stanley@aps.edu>

Mon 10/18/2021 3:01 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a parent and teacher who is aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist.

Sincerely,

Sarah Stanley

7th grade science

Madison Middle School

Sarah.Stanley@aps.edu

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This email and attached documents may contain confidential information. All information is intended only for the use of the named recipient. If you are not the named recipient, you are not authorized to read, disclose, copy, distribute or take any action in reliance on the information and any action other than immediate delivery to the named recipient is strictly prohibited. If you have received this email in error, do not read the information and please immediately notify sender by telephone to arrange for a return of the original documents. If you are the named recipient you are not authorized to reveal any of this information to any other unauthorized person. If you did not receive all pages listed or if pages are not legible, please immediately notify sender by phone.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Re-Development Comment

Danny Parker <dparker@bulldogs.org>

Mon 10/18/2021 3:24 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see the attached letter concerning the re-developed social studies standards.

State of New Mexico
Department of Education
Santa Fe, NM

To Whom It May Concern:

As a parent, a retired classroom teacher, and Director of Curriculum, I am very concerned about the proposed revision of the Social Studies guideline and curriculum. Let me remind you that we are supposed to teach students how to think objectively, not what to think. We are not supposed to interject our political and cultural biases into our classrooms.

In Social Studies we teach about the world as it is, the geography and where it is, regions of the world and where they are and what they look like, history as it really happened (not how we wish it had happened), continents, countries and how they are alike and different, governments and the correct terms to describe how they operate and other factual information.

It is my opinion and what I was always careful to remember that political views and cultural customs and religion were the values taught by parents and the family. We expect educators to instruct our students as equal individuals no matter what they look like, or what culture they represent, or any other differences they may have. We are all American citizens and we should not be trying to be divisive, we should be trying to educate students to be knowledgeable, responsible, contributing future citizens of our country.

126 pages of guidelines is too detailed, too many, too long, and does not allow for schools and communities to have much say in the curriculum presented to their students. It is my hope that you will edit the proposed guidelines to be what they are supposed to be: guidelines. Be careful not to overstep your authority and forget the actual purpose for these guidelines.

Please consider all the parents, students, and teachers of New Mexico. Do the right thing.

Camille George - Flores

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Spri Aubrey <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 4:49 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Spri Aubrey
3000 Majestic Ridge Apt 57
Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] DO NOT AGREE WITH THE PROPOSED CHANGES

Kristina Naber <kristinanaber@gmail.com>

Mon 10/18/2021 4:55 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

I do not agree with the proposed changes to public education. As has been suggested, proposing new guidelines implementing CRT and gender identities will not help our children. There are two genders and to teach children there are more than that is WRONG and not factual or science justified. I do not want my children participating in identity studies, that is a personal issue and should be addressed at home not at school in the classroom setting. I am baffled by this new progressive teaching that is trying to manipulate and brainwash the future of our country to have a biased education that will inhibit free thinking and exploration of facts. It is heartbreaking to know where our country is heading if these changes are implemented. DO NOT IMPLEMENT CRT or IDENTITY STUDIES.

Thank you,

Kristina Naber

Mother of 4th and 7th graders

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Nicole Gray <coleighgray@gmail.com>

Tue 10/19/2021 9:29 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

In the proposed new social studies standards (specifically K) when the standard says things such as, "Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities" or "Describe ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not," what identities are we talking about? I would like some more specific details and not such a generic term. Are we talking about anything that a child might feel identifies them? Religion, ethnicity, gender? What exactly are we talking about here?

Nicole Gray
575-302-7246

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Social Studies Standards

Adrian Chavez <adrian.chavez@abhs.k12.nm.us>

Tue 10/19/2021 11:17 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

My name is Adrian Chavez and I am a student at Amy Biehl High School.

I find that these new standards are a move in the right direction for New Mexico education. It's important to view history from every point of view, not just a single story. There have been multiple people and events throughout history that have played a huge role in shaping today's society. Viewing only one side of a story creates naive students. We must be taught perspectives from multiple cultures and backgrounds.

As someone from a Hispanic heritage, being taught about Hispanic history gives me the drive to push myself even further in life. History -- especially relatable history -- gives inspiration to those who want to learn it.

-Adrian Chavez

This message contains information, which may be confidential or privileged, and is intended only for the individual or entity named above. It is prohibited for anyone else to disclose, copy, distribute or use the contents of this message. If you received this message in error, please delete immediately and notify the sender.

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies Standards

Kait Gustafson <kaitlyn@coopconsultinginc.com>

Tue 10/19/2021 2:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello there,

Writing a brief email to voice that I deeply believe the standards should be updated and include the proposed. It is important as educators that we minimize misinformation about history and allow space for more perspectives and viewpoints to be explored.

Please strongly consider the following changes that have been outlined and do what is right for our students and state.

"This rule establishes the academic content and performance standards for social studies for grades kindergarten through 12. The social studies standards include six strands: (1) civics, (2) economics, (3) geography, (4) history, (5) ethnic, cultural, and identity standards, and (6) inquiry."

With respect and hope for a brighter future,

Kait Lochner

--

Kait Lochner | New Mexico PAX Program Manager

a: Coop Consulting Inc. | 228 Griffin Street, Santa Fe, NM 87501 | P.O. Box 22822, Santa Fe, NM 87502

e: kaitlyn@coopconsultinginc.com | w: www.coopconsultinginc.com

p: (505)428-0932 m: (916)412-9392

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Lorraine Hewitt <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Tue 10/19/2021 3:51 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Lorraine Hewitt
1 Mary Ellen Ct
Sandia Park, NM 87047

[EXTERNAL] Proposed social studies standards comment

Ann Nihlen <asnnewmex@gmail.com>

Tue 10/19/2021 6:05 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (881 KB)

Proposed social studies standards.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Ann Sigrid Nihlen, PhD
5310 10th Court NW
Albuquerque, NM 87107 U.S.A.
505-385-4130
asnnewmex@gmail.com

October 19, 2021

Dear Public Education Department,
RE: New Proposed Social Studies Standards

I have had an opportunity to read and reflect on the new proposed social studies standards and wholeheartedly support their acceptance by the PED. It has been many years since the last update and we certainly need to offer our students the most updated information for teaching social studies.

Historic events such as 9/11, the Afghan War, and a major recession have occurred. Significant social movements are presently changing how we see each other, witness the Black Lives Matter, the #MeToo movement, climate activists led by many younger people, and LGBTQ+ rights. Youth have participated or watched on TV all of these events and we need to include these emerging issues in our social studies curriculum in order to engage honestly with our current American history as well as the distant past.

For past history we must talk about slavery in an honest and forthright manner for that horrible piece of history is our American history and we must come to terms with it. Also we must re envision the "conquest of the west" that killed and destroyed so many Native communities and people. And as a country of immigrants as well it is important to honor their contribution to the building of the nation: the Chinese building the railways and slaves building the White house for example.

This does not "tear down" our great nation: it honestly looks at where we came from and what we need to do and learn in order to make a better and more democratic country. As Wendi Miller Tomlinson, a former U.S. History teacher said "it is time to teach children to reflect on the issues and challenges that have plagued us in the past and most likely rest in their hands to be resolved." (Albuquerque Journal, 10/4/21)

It appears that the social studies standards committee was fairly formed and has done a tremendous amount of work over the last two years. The committee included experts in all the sub-disciplines of history, geography, civics and economics. It included educators from various sections of education like high school, middle school, and elementary school. They had a 3-step process of collecting and evaluating current data from the field and included promising practices from the classroom. They then did due diligence and looked at the current standards to see what gaps existed. And then they wrote these revised standards.

We owe the committee a debt of gratitude for their honest and fair work. And I hope you will accept these newly revised social studies standards as part of the newest iteration of our social studies curriculum.

Ann Nihlen, PhD, Emerita faculty
College of Education, University of New Mexico
Albuquerque, NM

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Jennifer Dudley <dudleyjennifer25@gmail.com>

Tue 10/19/2021 6:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a Kindergarten teacher and have been teaching for 19 years. When presented with these proposed social studies standards, I was shocked that there had been standards added that would require me as a teacher to tell my students what identity group he/she fit in in KINDERGARTEN or what group their family would be in. It is NO TEACHER'S place to tell students these things. Other concepts focusing heavily on individual differences throughout K-12 grades and pushing individual diversity INSTEAD OF valuing the uniqueness of individuals and a common goal. THIS WILL BUILD A DIVISION IN OUR SCHOOLS WHICH WILL BECOME HATRED. I WILL NOT TEACH THESE STANDARDS. I hope you reconsider in adopting these standards and put NM kids FIRST!

Thank you.

J. G.

Seasoned Teacher

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies standards

Cherie Widmayer <cwidmayer@pvtnetworks.net>

Tue 10/19/2021 7:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am a retired NM public school educator with 36 years experience - 26 of those years teaching World History. I appreciate the amount of work in this effort.

While reviewing the World History standards, I find them well-written with an adequate amount of standards for guidance - allowing the teachers the latitude to teach their subject. However, I find it difficult to imagine why 7th grade NM History would need 103 standards while High School World History - "the history of the entire world!" - has 37 standards. This is an issue throughout the Social Studies standards - an inconsistent amount of standards, some with a broad guidance while others appear to micromanage the subject. Many of these standards take lesson planning out of the hands of teachers by assignments in the standards.

It is also worrisome that the emphasis of many standards concentrate on oppression, class conflict and group identity. These are worthy principles but should not be the focus of so many standards.

In my years of teaching, we covered multiple civilizations and discussed both the positive and negative aspects of each civilization. Many factors shaped these civilizations - location, time in history, neighbors, both good and bad, etc. Hopefully no child ever left my class feeling that they were responsible for what their "group identity" did or did not do at any period in history. We always hope to learn from the mistakes of the past, but laying guilt at the feet of today's students is not what history is about.

Please consider eliminating the "assignment" or micromanaging standards, standards that could be considered to be divisive, and the excessive amount of standards for some subject areas.

We want all students to feel worth - not guilt from the actions of others in the past.

Cherie Widmayer

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] Proposed social studies draft

Melinda V <melindavigil9@gmail.com>

Wed 10/20/2021 9:29 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning,

I was on the PED page looking at the proposed draft and I noticed that the draft does not have a Spanish option.

I think this decision needs to be put on hold until we can a draft in Spanish to include every New Mexican on this matter.

I think we are doing a disservice to all students if we can't even get a draft in Spanish to include all parents in this state.

To think that all parents speak English knowing that we have many students who come from only Spanish speaking backgrounds shows again how out of touch the education system is. Please do not intentionally leave these parents out.

They should be able to speak on the proposed draft. It will affect their children.

Please add a draft in Spanish.

Thank you,
Melinda Vigil

[EXTERNAL] Support for Updated Social Studies Standards

Hank Hughes <hhughes@santafecountynm.gov>

Wed 10/20/2021 1:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Friends:

I support your proposal to update the New Mexico Social Studies Standards to be inclusive of LGBTQ folks and to talk about tribal sovereignty among other additions. We need to update what we teach from time to time and always work toward being more fair and inclusive to groups that have been marginalized historically.

Hank Hughes
Santa Fe County Commissioner
District 5

Fw: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Wed 10/20/2021 3:18 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: Nicole Gray <coleighgray@gmail.com>

Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2021 9:26 AM

To: Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

In the proposed new social studies standards (specifically K) when the standard says things such as, "Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities" or "Describe ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not," what identities are we talking about? I would like some more specific details and not such a generic term. Are we talking about anything that a child might feel identifies them? Religion, ethnicity, gender? What exactly are we talking about here?

Nicole Gray
575-302-7246

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Elizabeth Cochran <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Wed 10/20/2021 3:38 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Cochran
10025 Michelle Loop NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies curriculum 2021

Molly Madden <mollymadden3@gmail.com>

Wed 10/20/2021 8:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Molly Madden <mollymadden3@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Molly Madden

2312 Calle del Estavan NW, Albuquerque, NM 87104

mollymadden3@gmail.com

October 20, 2021

John Sena

Policy Division

New Mexico Public Education Department

300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena;

I am writing in support of the proposed 2021 social studies standards, which I have read in the draft form on PED website. I want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and I was impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. I am a retired Belen Schools elementary teacher and have been concerned for many years that with the pressure to get ELA and MATH scores raised, Social Studies has had little attention/time in elementary lesson planning.

The six strands (civics, economics, geography, history, cultural identity, and inquiry) of standards that run through grades K-12 provide an excellent framework for critical thinking, and support students building their understanding of their own agency at their own speed. These standards respect the intelligence of children, concentrate on teaching critical thinking, evaluation of the credibility of data sources, and values that respect differing cultures and perspectives.

I urge the department to adopt these standards. Children need to master the standards outlined in this regulation to prepare to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectfully,

Molly Madden

[EXTERNAL] Standards

Mary Kelly <mary.kelly@aps.edu>

Thu 10/21/2021 7:07 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The new standards are great and give a complete and holistic view of our history. Students deserve the whole truth about history and these standards deliver. PED should approve these new standards!

--

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Changes

ANDREA DENNISSON <romeandr5@aol.com>

Thu 10/21/2021 11:05 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

As a parent of three school age children, I am STRONGLY opposed to the proposed Social Studies changes. I have reviewed the proposed changes and if implemented my family will no longer attend public school in New Mexico.

I respectfully and strongly urge you to reject these changes.

Regards,

Andrea Dennisson
McIntosh NM

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Rules

Jeremy Sabloff <jerry.sabloff@gmail.com>

Thu 10/21/2021 11:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

2159 Plazuela Vista
Santa Fe, NM 87505-5873

October 21, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

rule.feedback@state.nm.us.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing in strong support of the proposed regulations for social studies standards. The proposed revisions will clearly enhance the teaching of social studies in our state by inclusively and equitably teaching history so that all New Mexican citizens are represented. These excellent guidelines will strengthen and expand learning in all grades to the benefit of students and ultimately the public at large. They definitely deserve to be approved!

I am a retired Professor of Anthropology and a retired administrator (former museum director and past president of the Santa Fe Institute) and have a long-standing interest in education. Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,

Jeremy A. Sabloff

[EXTERNAL] Supporting changes to K-12 social studies.

Paula Sabloff <psabloff@gmail.com>

Thu 10/21/2021 1:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Dr. Paula Sabloff <psabloff@gmail.com>; Rachel Feldman <rlfeldman1949@gmail.com>; Sandra Forquer Dransfield <sandra.forquer@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena,

I am an anthropologist, former professor at the University of Pennsylvania, current (retired) professor at the Santa Fe Institute, and long-time New Mexico resident. I am writing today to support the proposed revised social studies standards, 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, for New Mexico public education schools (K-12). There is nothing more important for the future of New Mexico than the careful education of its students, which includes learning to evaluate different perspectives and representing history accurately. Only then can they become true patriots. In short, I strongly believe that the revisions proposed by the PED will greatly enhance the perspectives and knowledge of New Mexico's students and, through them, the entire New Mexico community.

While I am impressed by the standards proposed by the hard-working committees, I have read through the 129- and 36-page versions of the revisions and would like to make one suggestion: The revisions only mention teaching the similarities and differences among peoples in grades K, 2 and 6. While similarities are as important as differences, LIMITING THE STUDY OF SIMILARITIES TO 3 GRADES IS NOT ENOUGH.

- Furthermore, teaching similarities are not the same as teaching children that ALL PEOPLE ARE THE SAME UNDERNEATH. That is, ALL PEOPLE GO THROUGH THE SAME LIFE CYCLE—FROM BIRTH TO PUBERTY TO MATURITY AND EVENTUALLY DEATH.

And:

- The social psychologist Paul Ekman, through a careful comparison of people in several cultures, has proven that ALL PEOPLE SHARE THE SAME BASIC EMOTIONS. These include love, hope, joy, curiosity, anger, fear, and sadness. A child in kindergarten needs to be taught that hitting anyone no matter their ethnicity or race causes hurt; hugging anyone no matter their ethnicity or race causes pleasure and acceptance. Of course Shakespeare already said this in The Merchant of Venice in Shylock's famous speech:

Hath not a Jew eyes? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions; fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer as a Christian is? If you prick us do we not bleed? If you tickle us do we not laugh? If you poison us do we not die?

I urge the department to adopt the proposed standards but to add my suggestions (teaching the universality of the human life cycle and human emotions) as part of the revisions. I hope the department will stand up to those who seek to continue teaching Eurocentric social studies and history. This antiquated approach fails to prepare children for the challenges that are ever-present in their daily lives.

Respectfully,

Paula L.W. Sabloff

Member, Indivisible SOS

Member, Retake Our Democracy

External Faculty Fellow

Santa Fe Institute
1399 Hyde Park Road
Santa Fe, NM 87501
psabloff@santafe.edu

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies State Standards

Leonard Moore <moore.leonardj@gmail.com>

Thu 10/21/2021 2:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am a parent who is aware that the New Mexico Social Studies State Standards are being updated to be more justice-oriented. I support this decision and believe in integrating ethnic studies into the curriculum, teaching accurate history that is inclusive of marginalized people, teaching about oppression, and humanizing oppressed people to avoid perpetuating racism and stereotypes. Thank you for working to make history education in New Mexico more just and anti-racist. This work will help New Mexico stand out as a premier educational state.

Sincerely,

--

Leonard Moore

moore.leonardj@gmail.com

505-551-2836

[EXTERNAL] Objections to Proposed New Standards

Debra Hope <dhope@bulldogs.org>

Thu 10/21/2021 3:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I am a junior high teacher in the state of New Mexico, as well as a parent whose children have and still do attend New Mexico schools. Although I am not a history teacher, I have attended the public forums on this topic and have spoken at length with history teachers in my district. I have some objections to the proposed changes for the history standards.

Social Studies Standards 2021

1. WRONG dates and information

- a. Theme 2 History 14 8.32 “Identify key explorers, places, and ideas from major European nations of the 15th century, and be able to describe their accomplishments.”

- Major European explorers explored in the 15th AND 16th Century.
- The new guidelines DO NOT list any names of specific explores.
- 15th Century = 1400’s so Portugal and Spain up to Columbus.
- 16th Century = 1500’s Portugal, Spain, & France should also be included in the standard. They are not included after this standard either.
 - b. Little to no guidance on content specifics (people, places, dates, events)
 - c. None of these important people or events are mentioned: Pocahontas, Juan Ponce De Leon, William Penn, Anne Hutchinson, George Washington, James Madison, John Locke, The Prophet and his brother Tecumseh, Five Civilized Tribes, Trail of Tears, Indian Removal Act, Manifest Destiny, just to list a few, Hiram Revels, Blanche K. Bruce (African American Senators during the Revolution), Dred Scott, John Brown, Fredrick Douglas,

2. Written as Assignments, not Content Standards

1. History 16 8.48 “Compare and contrast the causes, demographics, and results of the American Revolution with those of later revolutions inspired by the American revolution”

-The wording of this standard implies teachers are to have already taught the

-Causes of the American Revolution (which should be a standard, BUT IS NOT under these new proposals)

-the demographics (What does this mean? Like the geography and location of the battles of the American Revolution?)

-and the results of the American Revolution.

THEN tie all of that together and compare it to Revolutions that came after ours. Which ones? As a veteran teacher, the answer here is the French Revolution.

New Teachers will not know this, and neither will teachers who have strictly taught from a textbook.

2. 8.30 “Support a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of Indigenous peoples of North America, and Indigenous Peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems.”

-What history/social studies content is being taught here?

-“Support a claim” What claim? Anyone’s ideas? Or historical fact? This Assignment would require many weeks of teaching indigenous lifestyles and histories from around the world PRIOR to writing a response.

-“Global Problems” How broad can one be? There must be more direction and specifics for teachers to be cohesive across the state. This is a U.S. History standard, not World History.

3. “Biased Maps”

Anchor Standard

-8th 6-8 Inquiry 23 8.5 “Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.”

a. Maps are not biased. They have facts of space and time but are inherently

UNBIASED in nature and design. They reflect time periods. Forcing Bias into mapping is BIASED!

4. U.S. Histories overlap 400 years. No need for H.S. history to travel back to the Columbian Exchange! That’s an 8th grade standard/time-period, and should stay that way

All I ask is that teachers be given standards NOT Assignments. Standards which guide and provide specifics for the content of historical people, places, events, times, eras, and into the future. We ask for standards that are UNBIASED. Standards that let history teach itself. Teachers or districts should be able to choose HOW the standards are taught (lesson plans/assignments/assessments/projects).

This is a direct quote from a history teacher at my school: "I have never had to explain the evils of the Trail of Tears, The Long Walk, slavery, the Holocaust, The Spanish Inquisition, or any other human travesties as my students are thinkers and have always been able to think and reason on their own. The way the new guidelines are written is taking away students’ right to think and formulate their own opinions. Many historical events are filled with human evil, and it’s easy for students to pick that out. Many human events are also filled with grace, compassion, love, change, and these are the events omitted from the new social studies guidelines.

The new standards for history and social studies do not meet the criteria of standards, nor do they seem to cover all pertinent information.

Thank you,

Debra Hope
Artesia Junior High School
Business Office Technology

(575) 746-9892 ext. 2524

[EXTERNAL] Petition requesting extension of current SS Standards

Adan Estrada <aestrada@cimarronschools.org>

Thu 10/21/2021 3:54 PM

To: Bannerman, Vickie, PED <Vickie.Bannerman@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>;
FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (81 KB)

Signed Petition.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dr. Perea-Warniment and Dr. Bannerman,

Thank you for the time and effort that you have dedicated to help us understand the need for an update on Social Studies standards. Cimarron Schools would request that this work would be delayed to give our staff and community time to fully understand the changes in the standards.

I am including the petition (resolution) from my school board respectfully making this request.

Sincerely,
Adán

--

Adán Estrada
Superintendent
Cimarron Municipal Schools
165 N. Collison Ave.
Cimarron, NM 87714
(575) 376-2445 office
(575) 376-2442 fax

Petition of the
Cimarron District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the New Standards Draft is considerably more lengthy and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

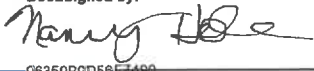

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Cimarron Municipal School District Board of Education (the “Board”) deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to at least July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

Cimarron District Board of Education

DocuSigned by:

96359B9D56F7490...

Nancy Hooker, President

10-18-2021

Date

[EXTERNAL] SS Public Comment

Chanda Crandall <chcrandall@bulldogs.org>

Thu 10/21/2021 4:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

My Comment is based off how the SS standards are written. First, are the chronologically in line? Comprehension of historical events is highly improved when the events leading up to the events, eras, consequences are understood, Historical Context must be relevant. Standards must be objective to context and chronologically taught.

Secondly, the standards are written in a manner that stifles a teacher's modes of instruction, collaboration, and creativity because they are written as assignments rather than analytically for students to interpret and determine an understanding.

Thank You,
Chanda Crandall
Artesia Junior High School Principal

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Benjamin Imbus <benjamin.imbus@aps.edu>

Thu 10/21/2021 9:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I highly praise the effort to include more diverse perspectives in the standards and the effort to teach history more accurately and honestly, even when it's not flattering. Social studies should not be nationalist mythology or fairy-tales.

I do think the huge achievements of US Reconstruction should be explicitly laid out since they are typically glossed over or even unknown. These should include the expansion of voting rights, widespread election of Black politicians, the creation of public schools across the South, legal civil rights protections against discrimination, and more.

Benjamin Imbus
Social Studies
John Adams Middle School
Albuquerque Public Schools

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Resolution

kristie medina <kristie.medina@ratonschools.com>

Thu 10/21/2021 5:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>; Bannerman, Vickie, PED <Vickie.Bannerman@state.nm.us>; Mizell, Dr. Kimberly <kmizell@bsin.k12.nm.us>; Rounds, Stan <stan@nmcel.org>

 1 attachments (94 KB)

1049_001.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good evening,

Here is the resolution the Raton Board of Education approved on Monday, October 18, 2021. Thank you!

--

Kristie L. Medina
Superintendent
Raton Public Schools
575-445-9111 (office)
505-414-8082 (cell)

Resolution of the Board of Education of Raton Public Schools

Resolution No. 2021-10

Petitioning the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft, and the time period proposed by PED for evaluation is insufficient;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues, which severely strain the resources of the districts;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve proficiency in their proper grade levels, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Raton Public School District Board of Education (the "Board") deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

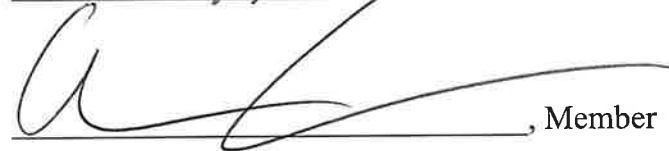

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Approved by the Raton Board of Education this 18th day of October, 2021.

 _____, President

 _____, Vice President

 _____, Secretary

 _____, Member

 _____, Member

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Social Studies Standards

Sierra Corriveau <scorriveau@montedelsol.org>

Fri 10/22/2021 8:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

I have been an educator for 20 years in the state of New Mexico, Colorado, Pennsylvania and Iowa. The majority of those years were spent as a history teacher. I graduated from a New Mexico high school, as well as a New Mexico college and I am quite proud to live in this state.

The newly proposed history standards are not only sane, appropriate and accurate, they are also humane and important to supporting the diversity and students of our unique state.

As an educator, there has always been a public voice that is loud and does not understand what really goes on in schools. Unfortunately, in today's political climate, that public voice has decided they want to contribute and comment on something they have not taken 20 years to understand.

I would ask that you listen to the voices of students and educators as to what we do and what we need.

These standards are a small step towards truly learning about ourselves and our place in the world.

Thank you for your time and I highly encourage you to approve these standards.

Sierra Corriveau

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: K-12 Social Studies Standards- first submission not published

Dayni Staddon <kalos-karuna@earthlink.net>

Fri 10/22/2021 8:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Begin forwarded message:

From: Dayni Staddon <kalos-karuna@earthlink.net>

Subject: K-12 Social Studies Standards

Date: October 19, 2021 at 5:30:18 PM MDT

To: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

I would like to submit a comment supporting the revised Social Studies Standards for K-12. I understand that the new standards include unrepresented and underrepresented voices and prioritize social justice, tribal sovereignty, and sustainable futures. It is vital that we update our standards and teach historically accurate information inclusive of diverse voices. New Mexico has the opportunity to lead the Nation in creating inclusive standards. I fully support the new standards.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Support

Erick Druva <edruva@montedelsol.org>

Fri 10/22/2021 9:18 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Wendy Leighton <wleighton@montedelsol.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern:

After a devoted 14 years teaching, I am in support of NM educators and community members revising the state's social studies standards, which have not been updated in 12 years.

I am in support of using an open and transparent process, as editors relied on the strength of that diversity to create revisions to the standards that mirror our unity in education of history as a community of learners in New Mexico.

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Social Studies Standards

Roberta Colton <roberta.colton@gmail.com>

Fri 10/22/2021 12:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (116 KB)

10.22.21 Comments on Social Studies Standards.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see my attached letter.

--

Roberta F. Colton
Santa Fe, New Mexico
roberta.colton@gmail.com
cell phone: 202.244.2495

Roberta F. Colton
556 Los Nidos Drive
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501-8356
roberta.colton@gmail.com

October 22, 2021

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us
John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

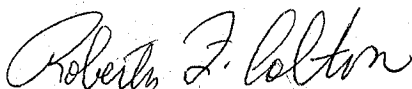

Dear Mr. Sena;

I am writing in support of the proposed revised social studies standards, 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, for New Mexico public education schools (K-12). As a resident of Santa Fe, the former chair of the Board of Trustees of a public charter school in Washington, DC, and an observer of politics, I am concerned about the lack of civic knowledge of so many citizens. I think the best place to start addressing this deficit is by making sure Santa Fe Public Schools is teaching a curriculum that gives students a strong foundation in how our government is organized and how to maintain a strong democracy.

I want to commend the New Mexico Department of Public Education (the PED) for undertaking the development of new standards for the teaching of social studies. I am favorably impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. I think the six-strand approach is an excellent way to organize the standards that cover the broad topic of social studies. The proposed standards demonstrate respect for the intelligence of children as well as their differing cultures and perspectives. I applaud their focus on teaching critical thinking, including the evaluation of the credibility of data sources.

I urge the PED to adopt these standards. We cannot continue teaching Eurocentric social studies and history if we want to prepare children to be effective citizens. Contrary to the many negative comments claiming that the standards include critical race theory, I find that the standards do not blame white people living now for what white people did in the past but, instead, promote the teaching of history accurately. Unfortunately, that history includes ethnic cleansing of Native Americans, exploitation of African-Americans as slave labor, and massacres of African-Americans in Tulsa, Oklahoma, among other unfortunate incidents. The sooner our children learn the truth, the better.

Respectfully,

Roberta F. Colton

[EXTERNAL] Updated Social Studies Standards

Nancy Sue Michels <nmichels@montedelsol.org>

Fri 10/22/2021 12:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am in support of the updated Social Studies Standards. These updates are not about Critical Race Theory, but rather about teaching a more accurate view of history where all voices are heard. It is about time. I have been an educator in New Mexico since 1994.

Nancy Sue Michels
Santa Fe, NM

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Draft Social Studies Standards

Gary Seger <gseger46@gmail.com>

Fri 10/22/2021 1:00 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have read through all 122 pages of draft standards. I take exception to the personalization of certain standards relating to culture and identity. These are the following: K22, 23,24,25; 2.27,28; 3.27, 28; 5.30; 7.6, 7.72, 7.82, 7.103; 8.19,20,21,22, 23; 9-12. NMH.18. These border on indoctrination and embedding divisiveness. They should be deleted.

Gary Seger
10 Falling Star Cir
Santa Fe, NM 87506

[EXTERNAL] CRT being taught

Teresa Nienhueser <roohoops23@yahoo.com>

Fri 10/22/2021 1:28 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I would like to voice my opinion and strongly oppose the teaching of "critical race theory" or any of its components in San Juan County and New Mexico schools.

Thank you,
Teresa Nienhueser
Farmington, NM

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Natalie Deibel <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/22/2021 1:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Natalie Deibel
128 Candelario St, Apt. B
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Fw: [EXTERNAL] social studies:

Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Fri 10/22/2021 4:52 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: WILLIAM HARLEY <wharley505@yahoo.com>

Sent: Friday, October 22, 2021 1:48 PM

To: Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] social studies:

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

How can anyone with a conscience actually try to twist and pervert a child's mind with these proposals? BLM is nothing but a Racist, Marxist org. How insane are you people? Who do you work for? I was a lifelong Dem until people such as yourselves took control of the party. No longer. STOP NOW, I beg you!

William Harley

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standard

Mary Bissell <mcbisselli@gmail.com>

Fri 10/22/2021 9:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

As a teacher, mother, and aunt, I approve of the new social studies standards.

Thank you for working so hard and taking so much time to ensure our students have updated standards that embrace culturally- and linguistically-responsive teaching.

Sincerely,
Mary Bissell
Rio Rancho, NM

[EXTERNAL] comments to the proposed NM social studies standards barbara_and_mike@comcast.net <barbara_and_mike@comcast.net>

Sat 10/23/2021 12:21 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I skimmed through the more recent history updates (1968 and beyond). I also looked at the guiding principles (P 9). Since I have no knowledge of the current standards I cannot comment as to whether these are improved (or not). Here are the comments I can provide:

1. I suggest re-ordering the guiding principles to reduce the number and weight of negative comments from conservative members of the community. Specifically, I would move the #2 principle to the #1 position. It is best to start from a position of unity, and I think that “developing student agency and leadership, employability skills, critical thinking ...” would be a universally agreed upon goal for social studies.
2. It seems that with the guiding principles we are trying to challenge the objective/subjective duality. Hence the emphasis on stories. Maybe tackling that topic head-on in the guiding principles would be appropriate, rather than sneaking it in.
3. One thing I feel is missing (and not just with this standard, but in general in American discourse) is the impact that systems have on people, on economics, on culture. The chronic over-emphasis here in the US on individual responsibility and agency, with a corresponding lack of emphasis on systems (how they constrain and shape our lives). This comes up again and again. In terms of health, environmentalism, inequality. We are all scolded that we are not (individually) doing enough to solve these problems when much of it is locked in by a system we are all existing/working within.

Why is there no mention of socialism? Nor of taxes? How can one discuss the economy while never mentioning taxation?

One thing I saw that was missing was a discussion of red-lining in terms of housing and how this disadvantages entire races. And not just those individuals first affected; it has a trickle-down disadvantage in terms of preventing generational accumulation of wealth. And in terms of the opportunities afforded to people living in different neighborhoods.

I searched for the word “slave” to see how it is discussed. I think it would be important to provide some context. Slavery is not a US invention; it has a long history around the world and, in fact, still exists today. This is something I did not learn in my public education and when I did learn about it I thought “what the heck? Why wasn’t that explained before?”.

In general, the standards are a bit light on how economics affect society. It is a lie that we have a laissez-faire economy ... our government provides incentives and penalties to manipulate the economy. As do other governments.

Barbara Mills

barbara_and_mike@comcast.net

(505) 256-4110

[EXTERNAL] Social Study Standards revision feedback

Barbara Balik <balik.barbara@gmail.com>

Sat 10/23/2021 3:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Thank you for the extensive work to revise the standards. We support the revisions and the efforts to provide a wide view of our world, nation, and state history and the impact on how we live together.

We do not have children in NM schools who will directly benefit from the revised standards however as citizens we all benefit from well-educated graduates. We all have a stake in their well rounded education.

Teaching the truth about the experiences of a diverse range of people is always a sign of strength that we build together. To narrow the views offered is to limit all children and demean far too many. The horrible examples from friends in Texas and their limited view of social studies and history is counter to developing well educated, compassionate, and talented young people who will be equipped in a world that welcomes and benefits from the gifts of all people. Thank you for these revisions.

Barbara & Dan Balik

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

PAUL GREENBAUM <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 10/23/2021 4:03 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

PAUL GREENBAUM
6609 BEAU CHENE NE
albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Margaret Keen <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 11:09 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Margaret Keen
308 Andrews Ln
Corrales, NM 87048-7454

[EXTERNAL] New guidelines for teaching history and social studies

Lanny Eyre <diane.llee@yahoo.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 12:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I approve of the new proposed guidelines for teaching history and social studies in New Mexico. It is very important that our children learn all of our history and not just the pretty parts. No history is all good and we need to learn from the ugly parts of ours.

Diane Lee

[EXTERNAL] Comments on 21-15540-Draft-NM-Standards-For-Teachers-(Social Studies) ibdbanker@gmail.com <ibdbanker@gmail.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 3:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have two major objections to the attached Draft NM Social Studies Standards for Teachers that make them completely objectionable and unacceptable in my view: (1) the standards mandate teacher and student (political) activism at all grade levels and (2) These standards overemphasize the many potentially divisive individual, cultural, and ethnic differences among us.

1. Mandated teacher and student (political) activism:

- Page-8 of the attachment describes a “rigorous and relevant K-12 social studies program ... led by teachers who are committed to active civic participation?” Will such participation be a requirement for all teachers? Will such participation be part of the teachers’ annual performance evaluations? Participation in civic actions should be a personal matter and not a directed requirement for professional conduct. Would attending a MAGA rally be appropriate for such directed civic action? Or perhaps a BLM protest, or maybe a pro or anti-abortion protest? Voting rights? Inner-city crime, etc? Who will choose those actions and what will be the objectives of those actions? All are appropriate areas for academic inquiry, perhaps, but completely inappropriate for mandated / directed civic / political actions by either students or their teachers!
- In conjunction with fielding teachers as civic / political activists, there is an “Anchor Standard” titled “Inquiry” that is pervasive at every level from Kindergarten all the way through 12th grade which requires students to “take informed action” i.e. to be political activists – beginning in Kindergarten! No kidding – 5-year-olds in Kindergarten! Kindergarten Performance Standard K4 for Inquiry is “Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, or global problems” (see p. 14). These performance standards become more involved with higher grade levels but the focus on “taking informed action” / activism remains throughout. Action on what problems and in pursuit of what objectives? Who decides? What are the actions to be taken? How will students be graded on these actions and by what standards? This type of mandated political activism is way out of bounds for any K-12 learning environment.

2. Enabling divisiveness and separateness

- There is a pervasive emphasis on such topics as Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standards; Diversity and Identity (in Kindergarten) and every following grade level up to 12th grade. There seems to be an overarching emphasis on addressing the many potentially divisive individual (race, gender, sexuality, disability, nationality, class, etc. etc.) and cultural differences among students rather than on stressing the American values, principles and traditions that define us and unite us as a nation and a people. The emphasis seems to be more on our faults rather on those common interests that unite us as a people and as a nation.
- There are pervasive undertones that seemingly portray America as a basically unjust and unfair nation that needs to be fixed rather than an imperfect nation still striving to “form a more perfect union” (5th grade Theme 2: Inequality and justice in America;... “5.12: Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.”

3. Other observations:

- Discussions regarding economics appear to focus on how groups deal with issues of scarcity rather than explaining the free-market and free-market principles (K.17, 1.14, 3.16, 3.17, 5.19-20). Good to compare capitalism / free-market principles with other economic systems throughout history, but should focus on the inter-relationships between economic freedom and political freedom and how the free-market system has lifted tens of millions of people out of poverty – even in formerly socialist countries.

4. My personal recommendations:

- Reject these proposed Social Studies standards and send them back for major revision, much wider dissemination, coordination, review, and input. Changes of this magnitude should be very deliberative and participative.
- Expunge all requirements for teacher and student activism / “active civic participation.” There should be no place enforced political activism in our schools!
- Focus on developing educated, responsible, and ethical American citizens through an honest and contextual teaching of the American values, founding principles, institutions, history, and traditions that unite us as a people and a nation while at the same time engendering knowledge of, and respect for the many individual, ethnic, and cultural differences that enrich us as a culture and as a nation.

Richard Farr
Las Cruces
575-652-5266

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] SS Standards

E.K. VanWie <vanwieek@yahoo.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 5:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Feedback on the proposed Social Studies Standards

The two new strands (1. Inquiry and 2. Ethnic, Cultural & Identity Studies) are critical and important additions. With Inquiry, students will learn life and analytical thinking skills to investigate and find reliable information and to ask relevant, credible, and compelling questions. With the Ethnic, Cultural & Identity Studies, students will learn to better understand themselves and others. This will support the development of self-confidence and empathy for others. Self-confidence improves individuals' ability to problem-solve, communicate, focus on learning, and achieve important goals. Empathy, the ability to identify and understand other people's feelings, is crucial for establishing relationships, making moral decisions, and enabling successful teamwork. It's important for all students to see themselves and others in their learning experiences.

The Performance Standards provide clarity for educators to develop curricula and learning materials. They contain high expectations for students, which is good. Hopefully educators are encouraged to set priorities, as there may not be enough time in the school year to address all of the Performance Standards.

There is extensive information to review in the standards, so the following suggestions may be in the standards someplace. It seems like Inquiry Standards could have more attention to developing technology and media literacy and graphic representations as they relate to the social studies. The Geography Standards have significant use of mapping skills, which is still important, a long side the use of Global Positioning Systems (GPS).

As a citizen who supports empowering voters and strengthen democracy, it's good to see the Civics standards integrated in the K-8 grades, with a high school course in Civics. New Mexico history appears at several age levels as well, including in the 4th and 7th grades, and as a high school course.

In the 6th grade Inquiry Standard 24, be more specific about the types of "claims" that will be studied. Add the dates of the time periods being studied (e.g. Post-Classical, 500-1450 C.E.). In the high school Economics course, is there room for learning about bank accounts, credit and debt management? How might the PED encourage social studies and mathematics teachers to collaborate on this subject?

Thank you for the thoughtful work that has gone into drafting the social studies standards. I support them.

E.K. VanWie
Las Cruces

E.K. VanWie, Ed.D.
Email: vanwieek@yahoo.com

*"We are all bound up together in one great bundle of humanity."
Frances Ellen Watkins Harper 1866*

*"To me there is nothing complicated about ordinary equality."
Alice Paul - Circa 1917*

*"No one can make you feel inferior without your consent."
Attributed to Eleanor Roosevelt - Circa 1940*

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Susan A Casey <susancasey14@gmail.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 7:08 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To all people who have decision-making power in revision of our Social Studies Curriculum:

DO NOT IMPLEMENT CRT INTO OUR NM SCHOOLS.

AS A PARENT, GRANDPARENT, AND RETIRED ELEMENTARY EDUCATION TEACHER, DO NOT ALLOW CRT INTO OUR STUDENTS' EDUCATION.

THIS ISSUE IS GOING ON IN SCHOOL STATE CURRICULUMS ACROSS THE COUNTRY. DO NOT BE STUPID LIKE SOME, ONLY TO HAVE PEOPLE PROTEST TO GET RID OF IT. NEW MEXICO NEEDS TO BE A LEADER IN DOING THE RIGHT THING.

DO NOT IMPLEMENT CRT INTO OUR NM SCHOOLS.

SUSAN A CASEY
LOS LUNAS, NM
betrayed4.sc@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] On CRT

Linda Schalk <linda.schalk@icloud.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 7:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello and thank you for taking comments on CRT. In New Mexico especially, where our pledge proudly espouses the respect between the diverse cultures, CRT would be an anathema.

I find that most people now-a-days do not know how important the black race was to our winning the American Revolution. Their were many great people and great stories that were erased from our history books under the Presidency of Woodrow Wilson in the early 1900's because he was an avowed racist (KKK and all).

Wouldn't it be grand if we went back to the real history of our country (good and bad) and put all the names and stories of all who helped through the ages, regardless of race, guard our freedoms in this country?

Thank you,
Linda Schalk

[EXTERNAL] PLEASE SEE ATTACHED LETTER

Cathy Walters <cathwalter@aol.com>

Sun 10/24/2021 7:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (58 KB)

Sample_Letter_NMPED_Anit-CRT copy PDF.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

"I will praise you, Lord my God, with all my (new) heart;
I will glorify your name forever!"

Psalm 86:12

John Sena,
Policy Division,
New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED),
300 Don Gaspar Avenue,
Room 121,
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena,

RE: Reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11

My name is Cathy Walters and I'm a constituent from Los Alamos, New Mexico

I am writing to urge you to reject these standards as they promote and may instill assumptions about race and inequality as the basis for America in our students. This progressive/liberal bias is not new. It stems from an ideology of Critical Race Theory (CRT). Critical race theory is destructive and rejects the fundamental ideas on which our constitutional republic is based. Applying the philosophy would violate a multitude of American civil rights laws by treating people differently according to race. It should not be elevated in American classrooms or in our military.

Specifically, I urge Michelle Lujan-Grisham's NMPED to promote knowledge of civics, not social action, and diversity training. Many schools around the country are spending significant amounts of money on so-called anti-bias training. Educators should focus on teaching how our government functions, the importance of constitutional rights and the equal treatment under the law, as well as historical facts and content that prepare students for life after school.

Here are a handful of the most egregious new standards:

1. In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies, a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces "offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity." This standard assumes that there are only 2 choices.
6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)
2. Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continued focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This has the purpose of dividing people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.
3. There are also numerous examples where a teacher can impose the notion of "justice and fairness," unequal power relations, "past and current injustices," although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also pejorative as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)

4. Within High School U.S. History, numerous references, or preoccupation with slavery during the formation of America which echoes both CRT and the 1619 Project that slavery/ racism is the foundation of American society. 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(b) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(d) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(e) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(k) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(g) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(h)

5. Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” This standard assumes that there is no such system in the US and it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)

6. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. Embedded in this standard is the assumption that America and its founding principles are unjust and inequitable to various minority groups. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)

7. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to understand how gender and sexuality norms were changing during Reconstruction and 1920s, as well as are required to examine the activities the LGBTQIA+ community during a recent 40-year period. Why is this a standard rather than an option? This standard imposes a liberal bias on students. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(m) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(z) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(ll)

8. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)

9. In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. This standard pits race against race and stresses racial disparity and inequality. Again see the socialist class v class assumption herein. 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)

10. Within High school U.S. History, students must examine the short-and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America. Why? 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)

11. In the 7th Grade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction, and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. How about the benefits of the occupation such as western civilization? 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)

12. Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. How about the movement back the blue? 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)

Government funded bias has no place in our classrooms, our military, or in our country. We emphatically reject the overall progressive – even socialist- bias that these standards are intended to impose on our children and grandchildren.

Thank you for your time and have a great day.

Sincerely,
Cathy Walters
1001 Oppenheimer Dr #117
Los Alamos, NM 87544
505-690-2309
cathwalter@aol.com

CC: Ms. Melanie Colgan, President
LAPS School Board
2075 Trinity Drive
Los Alamos, NM 97544

[EXTERNAL] Social Study Standards: 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Ellen Marder <ellenmarder@gmail.com>

Mon 10/25/2021 11:48 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please accept my recommendation of support for the new social studies programs as set forth in 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies

Ellen Marder
8 Paintbrush Ct.
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87506
ellenmarder@gmail.com

October 25, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing in support of the proposed revised social studies standards, 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, for New Mexico public education schools (K-12). I am a retired physician, mother, grandmother and a citizen concerned about the ability of our public schools to educate our citizens. It is the only way to keep our democracy functioning and strong.

I want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and I was impressed by the scope of work undertaken by her committee that drafted them. I believe the K-8 standards are consistent and I support the critical thinking portion especially.

Suggestions I offer are:

- Replace references to “white supremacy” with “European supremacy”
- Include more emphasis – perhaps in the form of an overview course – of
The states’ rights v federalism tension that underlies much of our history

I urge the department to adopt these standards. I hope the department will broaden the scope of social studies and history instruction to reflect the diversity of the real world, incorporate informed history and avoid bias as much as possible in course material. At the same time courses should be designed to develop an understanding of and appreciation for our form of government to prepare them to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectfully,

Ellen Marder

[EXTERNAL] In Support of Revised Social Studies State Standards

Lisa Harmon <lisajmartinez@unm.edu>

Mon 10/25/2021 12:06 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern,

I am a proud native New Mexican and have been an educator for the past 13 years in the state, teaching in the humanities at a school whose population directly reflects New Mexico's overall demographics.

When I say that New Mexico desperately needs these revised Social Studies standards, that is not an exaggeration.

While many of the skills inherent in the standards are relevant and important to young New Mexicans, as they learn about themselves and the world they've inherited, the content is entirely Eurocentric.

There are only 2 references to "Indian" and 2 references to "Indigenous" in the 9-12 Social Studies Standards. In a state with over 20 unique pueblos and reservations in New Mexico, we are denying our youth an opportunity to know our history, as painful as it may be, and it is at the cost of our Indigenous youth and their families. This is especially true when many of our schools are built on land stolen from these same communities that have been displaced in the standards and are reduced to a footnote in textbooks.

Similarly, there are zero references to "Mexican," in the 9-12 grade standards and only two references to "Spanish," both of which reference events outside of the U.S. This denies the truth of the complex relationships between generations of New Mexicans and denies young people of color in our state the opportunity to engage fully in a curriculum that otherwise leaves them out.

The number of these references in the 5-8 grade standards are only a few more, the highest being 5 references in the entire set of standards. To me, this suggests that New Mexican youth stop learning about themselves and our complex histories by the 8th grade.

These new standards incorporate complex New Mexican history throughout the high school curriculum, even in the high school Civics standards, asking students to "Distinguish the powers and responsibilities of local, state, indigenous, national, and international civic and political institutions."

How can we New Mexicans move forward without truly confronting our past?

Young people deserve better than the standards that have been in use since I started teaching, 13 years ago. Young people deserve to hear the truth of their communities spoken in their schools. Young people deserve authentic learning experiences that do not deny their culture, language, and lived experiences but instead ones that celebrate them.

White washing New Mexican history and focusing on European standards, culture, and values has not served us well. Now is the time for change.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of

jackseigel@frontier.com <jackseigel@frontier.com>

Mon 10/25/2021 1:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Jack Seigel
18 Avenida Aldea
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Comment Letter responding to proposed regulations 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies rlfeldman1949@gmail.com <rlfeldman1949@gmail.com>

Mon 10/25/2021 1:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Rachel Feldman
#1 Via Bella
Santa Fe, NM 87507

October 25, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us-
Dear Mr. Sena;

Please consider this letter to be my formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. I am a retired health system administrator, policy and budget analyst, researcher, and negotiator. I am also a mother and have a number of children in my life, whose futures I work to protect.

I am writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. I commend the PED for undertaking these revisions. I was pleased to see that the advisers and teachers contributing to this work appear to truly represent the wonderful diversity of this state. It is also evident that those drafting the standards worked hard to put them in politically neutral and behavioral language and to be inclusive of all voices, regardless of political affiliation.

I think that the many objections submitted so far claiming bias, referencing “critical race theory”, and worried that such standards will turn children against their country represent a desire to not recognize the reality of change, and fear that standards inclusive of all somehow de-value the voices of European descendants. We need to prepare children to adapt to change and no one’s voice is devalued by these standards.

In my career, I have hired and supervised hundreds of young people coming out of high school and college, and it has distressed me that many seem to have little sense of history and most don’t understand how government or business work. I believe the proposed standards would remediate this situation and better prepare young people to be effective citizens who contribute to the community and their workplaces.

I support the structure of these standards, including the six strands and associated anchor standards. I would like to see additional structure added to the middle and high school standards, because the volume of material makes it difficult to distinguish what is mandatory and must be mastered from individual topics that would make more effective choices for in depth study based on personal interests, or from which teachers might choose for special attention. I think there is too much material to cover everything, given time and other constraints on teachers and schools. It would help for the state to set principles for prioritizing to ensure students across the state cover substantively the same material, and so that material is not excluded because of bias.

I would like to see a clearer treatment of “reconciliation” and “healing” that addresses the reality and universality of the emergence of conflict, and introduces students to basic conflict resolution skills as well as formal tools such as mediation, negotiation, arbitration, litigation, and some of the national movements of reconciliation. If children learn to see small conflicts in their homes and on the playground, and experience solutions, including compromise, they will be better prepared as conflicts they encounter are more complicated and dangerous. These standards have the potential to build survival capacities in children, as well as citizenship skills. Our culture tends to be conflict averse: to treat conflict as something bad, rather than something that naturally emerges out of differing interests and competition for resources. We avoid conflict at our peril.

I would also like to see an explicit articulation of the “social contract” that underlies our founding documents. This can be introduced when rules and laws are discussed with young children under the civics standards. It is critical that children understand that democracies use rule of law to balance the interests of individuals against the welfare of the many. The value of the social contract addresses the challenge of the bully as well as the oppression of the autocrat. “Balancing” the wants of individuals against the needs of the community and nation should be understood as a civic responsibility.

With respect to those who want to include personal finance in the social studies standards, while I agree personal finance knowledge should be required for graduation, I think this material is its own subject matter, and not a subsidiary of the “economics strand” as seen in these standards. I also think it requires math skills that cannot be taught or assumed in the social studies and history curriculum. Space needs to be carved out elsewhere to teach this important material.

In closing, I urge the department to adopt these standards, with refinements.

Respectfully,

Rachel L. Feldman
Rfeldman1949@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

JK Melton <meltonjk@gmail.com>

Tue 10/26/2021 7:55 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern:

I am writing to give my support to the proposed social studies standards. I think they represent an important improvement over the previous (good) standards, and they provide a solid educational foundation for our social studies curricula throughout the state.

I particularly appreciate how the standards approach controversial issues. They lay out several opportunities for students to explore how majority and minority groups function in society. They set a high standard for exploring history from multiple viewpoints, considering race, gender, ethnicity, and indigeneity. They strongly encourage historical thinking and research skills. They are centered in fostering and developing critical thinking skills. They help students develop the skills to think about short term and long term consequences.

I wish to commend the task forces that drafted these standards and the hard working educators who shaped them. I encourage their adoption.

JK Melton, Ph.D.
Farmington, NM

[EXTERNAL] the proposed repeal and replace of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

M J <mlejolley@gmail.com>

Tue 10/26/2021 9:35 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (16 KB)

CRT.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see attached comments. Thank you.

NM PED, the proposed repeal and replace of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies:

Regarding the proposed standards update for New Mexico Social Studies. These standards focus on our differences rather than our similarities which promotes discord in society.

These standards adopt Critical Race Theory, Gender Theory, etc., as fact, not theories. These theories are against individualism and are a fear-focused rebranding of Marxism; Marxism where equity means equal outcome (dumbing down). Americans believe in equality which leads to opportunity and success. These new standards are a war on capitalism and freedom.

New Mexico's social studies curriculum should not include revisionist history. This "new" history (an oxymoron) is dangerous, divisive and un-American. Fictional narratives will invalidate actual objective historical events. We should be encouraging our children to be independent thinkers, to look at both sides of our history, the good along with the bad. Historical facts describe where we have been as well as where we are going.

Racism exists in America, as it does in every other country, but America is not racist. Systemic racism was outlawed by the Civil Rights Act of 1964. We have made tremendous strides in creating opportunity based on competence not skin color.

New Mexico would do more for its children by concentrating on reading, writing, math and science. Think where our students would be right now if we had used our funding on basics, not ideology. We certainly would not be at the bottom of the list of student exceptionalism. Social engineering does not have a place in our schools. Political agendas have no place in our schools. These new standards create fear in our young people at a time when they should be enjoying their lives and looking forward to all the opportunities that are available to them in America.

"In a report released in August, WalletHub looked at 12,927 school districts throughout the U.S. and ranked them comparing average household income and per-pupil spending at public schools in those districts. The bigger the difference, the worse the state scored. Of the 10 states with the least equitable school districts, seven are Democrat: New York, California, Illinois, Oregon, Maine, New Jersey, and New Mexico..."

The new Social Studies standards will not help achieve higher graduation rates or higher literacy rates. New Mexico needs to concentrate on reading, writing, math and science. Give our children a chance to grow up without fear of their neighbor or what their neighbor thinks of them. New Mexico schools should not be participating in ideological agendas. New Mexico schools should be promoting love of country and pride in how far America has come in promoting equality, not encouraging victimhood.

[EXTERNAL] Comments on Social Studies Standards

Tony Monfiletto <tony@futurefocusededucation.org>

Tue 10/26/2021 10:02 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I support the new Social Studies Standards proposed by the NM Public Education Department. The standards are a positive step in our collective responsibility to care for the well-being of our young people. Because of COVID-19, the past 18 months have been punishing for students. The trauma of being isolated from school, peers, and extended family has left many of our young people anxious and depressed about their future. We believe the proposed social studies standards are one important step toward healing.

By offering social studies curricula that address the complicated and nuanced histories and identities of New Mexicans, we can challenge young people to be critical thinkers that imagine a future different from the world we live in now. Our students are inheriting a state and nation weighed down by racial divides, climate change, and cynicism. These new standards will help build our students into the leaders that we so desperately need to solve these problems.

Our social studies standards have not been updated in over a decade. Adversaries are falsely conflating this much-needed update with the Critical Race Theory discussion. We urge you not to be confused by this misdirection. What we should be talking about is how young people deserve authentic learning experiences that do not deny their culture, language, and lived experiences—but celebrate them instead. Creating healing, inclusive lessons that build positive personal identity is essential for student health and future success.

In 2019, Future Focused Education held focus groups with young people across the state in partnership with NMPED. Many of the students told us about how they struggled in schools that could not adapt to their needs. Kenia Alonzo told us that,

“A lot of Native students learn differently and they have a lot of trauma which is why they are in special education. Their needs are different. At my college [Southwest Indian Polytechnic Institute] we talk about our personal experiences. I didn’t have a Native teachers until I got to college. I have never had a Navajo class before, and now my peers and I have a way to learn together. I have learned a lot more in college because I have Native teachers and I’m a better student because of it.”

How many young people are there like Kenia in our state? How many of them never made it to college so that their needs could be met? The new Social Studies Standards can help schools meet the challenge that Kenya articulated, and that’s why we support them so wholeheartedly.

Finally, Future Focused Education operates X3, a paid internship program that has partnered with more than 75 employers in New Mexico. It has paid out over $330,000 to young people who have participated in more than 450 internships in Albuquerque, Las Cruces, Rio Rancho, Santa Fe, and Cuba. It's an immense success for the students, most of whom are off-track to graduation or have returned to school after dropping out. One thing we know from our experience is that confident, self-assured young people make the best interns and employees — they are the key to making our communities healthier and more prosperous.

We live in a complex world that demands students see events from multiple perspectives. These new standards will help students see themselves as assets who can make a positive contribution. To do this our schools must reinforce the notion that our young people can be successful because of who they are and where they come from, rather than in spite of it.

Thank you,

Tony Monfiletto

Tony Monfiletto
Executive Director

FutureFocusedEducation.org
200 Broadway NE
ALBUQUERQUE NM, 87102

[EXTERNAL] Proposed New Social Studies Standards

John Przyborowski <johnp@montedelsol.org>

Tue 10/26/2021 10:57 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing in support of the newly drafted K-12 Social Studies Standards. The additional focus on tribal sovereignty, social justice and sustainable futures will help bring New Mexico into the 21st century and establish our state as a thought leader in education.

Thank you.

--

John Przyborowski

he/him/his

Teacher

Monte del Sol Charter School

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Kandice Barley <kbarley@bulldogs.org>

Tue 10/26/2021 11:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

As a teacher, parent, and historian I find the following disturbing:

Social Studies Standards 2021

1. WRONG dates and information

a. Theme 2 History 14 8.32 “Identify key explorers, places, and ideas from major European nations of the 15th century, and be able to describe their accomplishments.”

- Major European explorers explored in the 15th AND 16th Century.

- The new guidelines DO NOT list any names of specific explores.

- 15th Century = 1400’s so Portugal and Spain up to Columbus.

- 16th Century = 1500’s Portugal, Spain, & France should also be included in the standard. They are not included after this standard either.

b. Little to no guidance on content specifics (people, places, dates, events)

c. None of these important people or events are mentioned: Pocahontas, Juan Ponce De Leon, William Penn, Anne Hutchinson, George Washington, James Madison, John Locke, The Prophet and his brother Tecumseh, Five Civilized Tribes, Trail of Tears, Indian Removal Act, Manifest Destiny, just to list a few, Hiram Revels, Blanche K. Bruce (African American Senators during the Revolution), Dred Scott, John Brown, Fredrick Douglas,

2. Written as Assignments, not Content Standards

a. History 16 8.48 “Compare and contrast the causes, demographics, and results of the American Revolution with those of later revolutions inspired by the American revolution”

-The wording of this standard implies teachers are to have already taught the

-Causes of the American Revolution (which should be a standard, BUT IS NOT under these new proposals)

-the demographics (I don’t know what this means here. Like the geography and location of the battles of the American Revolution?

-and the results of the American Revolution.

THEN tie all of that together and compare it to Revolutions that came after ours. Which ones? As a veteran teacher, the answer here is the French Revolution.

New Teachers will not know this, and neither will teachers who have strictly taught from a textbook.

b. 8.30 “Support a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of Indigenous peoples of North America, and Indigenous Peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems.”

-I don’t know what content I am supposed to teach here.

-“Support a claim” What claim? Anyone’s ideas? Or historical fact? This Assignment would require many weeks of teaching indigenous lifestyles and histories from around the world PRIOR to writing a response.

-“Global Problems” How broad can one be? There must be more direction and specifics for teachers to be cohesive across the state. This is a U.S. History standard, not World History.

3. “Biased Maps”

Anchor Standard

-8th 6-8 Inquiry 23 8.5 “Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.”

a. Maps are not biased. They have facts of space and time but are inherently

UNBIASED in nature and design. They reflect time periods. Forcing Bias into mapping is BIASED!
4. U.S. Histories overlap 400 years. No need for H.S. history to travel back to the Columbian Exchange!
That's an 8th grade standard/time-period, and should stay that way
All I ask is that teachers be given standards NOT Assignments. Standards which guide and provide specifics for the content of historical people, places, events, times, eras, and into the future. I ask for standards that are UNBIASED. Standards that let history teach itself. I have never had to explain the evils of the Trail of Tears, The Long Walk, slavery, the Holocaust, The Spanish Inquisition, or any other human travesties as my students are thinkers and have always been able to think and reason on their own. The way the new guidelines are written is taking away students' right to think and formulate their own opinions. Many historical events are filled with human evil, and it's easy for students to pick that out. Many human events are also filled with grace, compassion, love, change, and these are the events omitted from the new social studies guidelines.

Please take these into consideration. We must do what is RIGHT for our children, not what is popular in today's culture.

Kandice Barley
Artesia Junior High School
kbarley@bulldogs.org

[EXTERNAL] K-12 Social Studies Standards

Susha Pratt <spratt@montedelsol.org>

Tue 10/26/2021 1:51 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing as a parent and an educator in support of the K-12 Social Studies Standards that focuses on social justice and tribal sovereignty. I want my children to grow up in a state that honors diverse voices and where our teachers teach the whole truth of our state/nation and not a partial truth. How many elementary students can name the tribes who were already here when Europeans "discovered" America? Compare this to how many can name the man who is credited with this "discovery"? We need to update the narrative and these Social Studies Standards will help do that. I strongly encourage the members of the Rules Committee to endorse these updates; New Mexico has the opportunity to lead the way in a time when it's needed more than ever.

Thank you,

Susha Pratt

Monte del Sol Counselor/Consejera (Grades 7-9)

NBCT

505-982-5225 ext. 116

I'm here Mondays, Tuesdays & Thursdays*

Estoy aquí lunes, martes, y jueves*

[EXTERNAL] Revision of the Social Studies Curriculum

CORY CORY <cwilhite10@comcast.net>

Tue 10/26/2021 1:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as “inequity”, “racial injustice” and “ unequal power” to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system.. this is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites out country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. I have 5 Grandchildren in NM schools. This is a form of brainwashing!

This is a biased agenda which does NOT belong in our public schools.

Valerie Wilhite, Albuquerque, NM

[EXTERNAL] Re: 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies - PUBLIC COMMENT

Kim Mizell <kmizell@bsin.k12.nm.us>

Wed 10/27/2021 11:33 AM

To: Summers, Kevin <adsummke@aztecschools.com>

Cc: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Steinhaus, Kurt, PED <Kurt.Steinhaus@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>; Rounds, Stan <stan@nmcel.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Thank you!

Dr. Kimberly Mizell, Ph.D.

Superintendent

Bloomfield Schools

kmizell@bsin.k12.nm.us

O. 505-632-4333

C. 505-215-0854

On Wed, Oct 27, 2021 at 8:48 AM Kevin Summers <adsummke@aztecschools.com> wrote:

Good morning, Secretary Steinhaus and Deputy Secretary Perea-Warniment,

Please find attached a summative report from the review of the proposed social studies standards pursuant to the repeal and replacement of 6.29.11 NMAC as completed by the Aztec Municipal School District.

The review was conducted by 20 grade level and content leaders within the District and utilized the NMPED's criteria for high quality standards as the primary tool for discussion. While members of the greater community were invited to participate, it should be noted that they were not in attendance for the review and discussion of the standards. I would ask that you give special consideration to the Plus, Deltas, and Additional Concerns sections for each grade level within the attached report.

Please add this attachment to the Public Comment for Proposed Rulemaking regarding 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Respectfully Submitted,

--

Kevin Summers

Superintendent

Aztec Municipal School District

Inspired, Safe, & Fulfilled

Instruction and Federal Programs

Social Studies Standards Report

October 26, 2021

SOCIAL STUDIES STANDARDS REVIEW COMMITTEE

As NMPED works to finalize new Social Studies standards, Aztec Municipal Schools felt it was vital to gain feedback from our stakeholders regarding their thoughts on these new standards.

Grade level leaders and content team leaders were asked to complete a rubric during PLC meetings with their grade level/content teams. The rubric included NMPED's eight criteria and descriptions for High Quality Standards. Teams were asked to add their thoughts on each of the eight indicators. Teams were also asked to add additional thoughts including pluses, deltas, and other concerns with the standards.

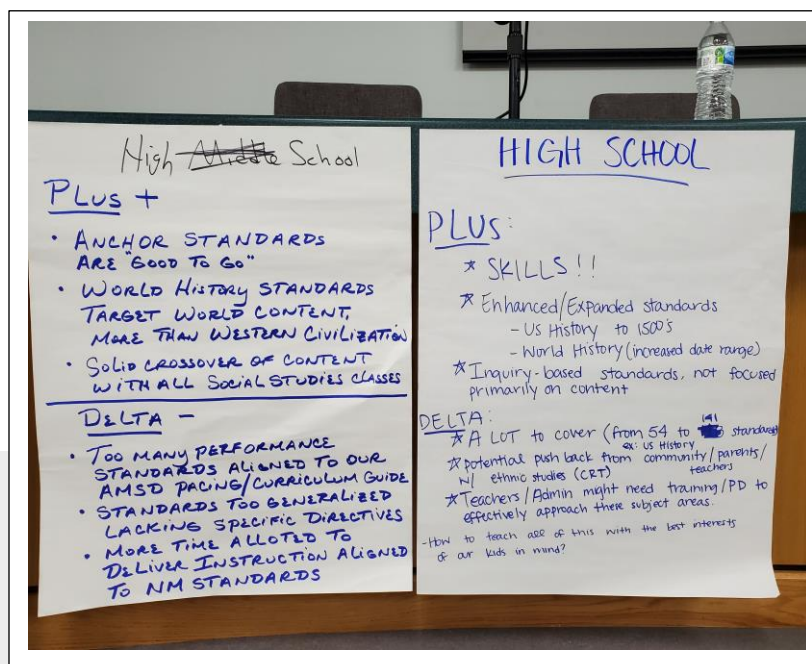

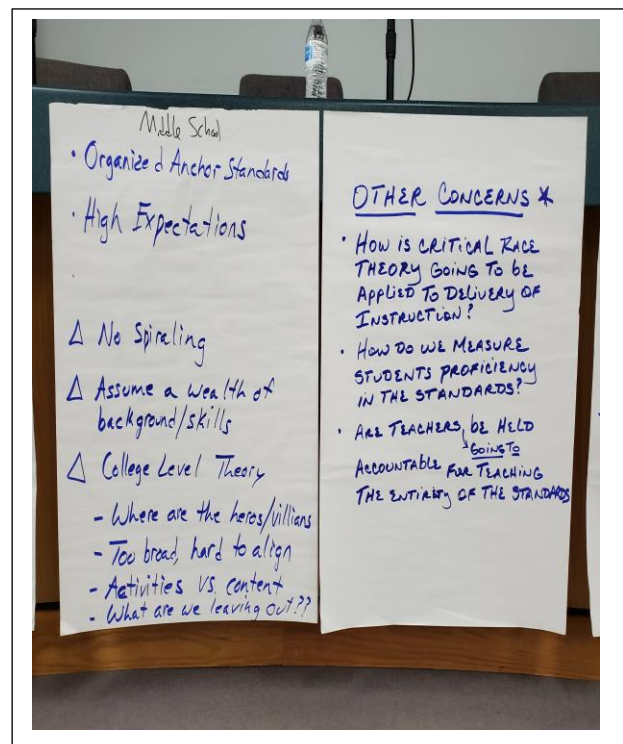

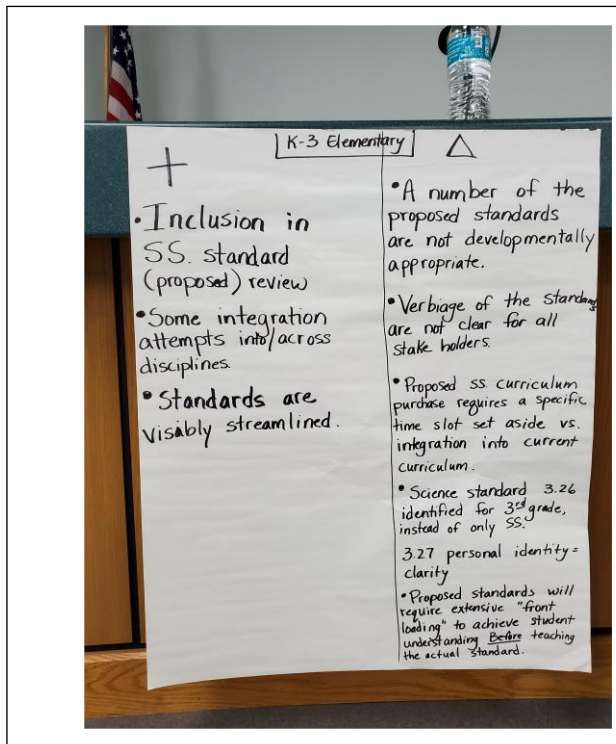

Grade level leaders and content teams were invited to the Board Room on Monday, October 18th to discuss within broader teams the feedback that was gathered within their PLC meetings. Teams were given the opportunity to have group discussions and then create posters to share their thoughts with the group. (Please note that parents/community members were invited and were not in attendance.)

Attached to this report you will find feedback from each grade level team and pictures of posters created in our AMSD feedback meeting.

INFORMATION SHARED OUT

The pictures below were shared out among the group in attendance on October 18, 2021. Additional comments can be found in pages 3 through 38 for specific grade levels.

Social Studies Standards Review Kindergarten

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED's criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	Kindergarten team at McCoy feel like most of the SS standards met all the criteria (Rigor, Focus, Specificity, Clarity/Accessibility, etc.). Inquiry is the only one we really questioned. Inquiry K1 K2 and K3. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● K.1. Recognize a compelling question. ● K.2. Identify the relationship between compelling and supporting questions. Inquiry 25. Communicate and Critique Conclusions ● K.3. Construct responses to compelling questions using examples. Not developmentally appropriate for this age group. Would need to be scaled back.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	Theme 5 would need to be more focused and training may need to take place for staff to dive into Social Identity.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision ("grain size") are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be

	held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students' overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.	Some of the standards past kindergarten don't have clear language for families to understand.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	The flow from each grade level has some gaps. A lot of frontloading would need to occur for 3rd grade.
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm literacy and fluency in a discipline	foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.

Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Teachers were able to brainstorm a lot of great idea to incorporate standards in the classroom
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Inquiry 22 & 25 Kindergarten spend an entire year on the difference between questions and comments. When they leave kindergarten many still have not grasped the concept.
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add?
Where would we find the time to teach a block of SS standards? Can materials be purchased that would allow SS to be cross curricular?

Social Studies Standards Review Grade 1

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED's criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • We feel that the rigor is too high for the level students are at especially after/ in the middle of a pandemic.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • We like the NM focus on some themes. • We feel that the focus for First Grade should be Reading, Writing, and Math. We feel that we could interface Social Studies within these core subjects.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Performing standards are very general. • Theme 3 is not appropriate for 1st Grade. Economics 6. Incentives and Choices Economics 8. Money and Markets • Inquiry: Vocabulary needs to be clarified for teachers.

	maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students’ overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Inquiry 23. Gather and Evaluate Sources <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 1.3. Determine if a source is primary or secondary and distinguish whether it is mostly fact or opinion.--> Teachers need help with verbiage. What contents are primary and secondary source? What does this mean? • We like: Inquiry 26. Take Informed Action <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 1.5. Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems. • 1.6. Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms. • We like: Civics 4. Roles and Responsibilities of a Civic Life <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 1.7. Explain and provide examples of how people play important roles in society • Students not mature enough to take in the meaning of or understanding of this standard: History 14. Historical Change, Continuity, Context, and Reconciliation <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 1.9. Compare life in New Mexico in the past to life in New Mexico today.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Standards are not clear and not appropriate for our grade level.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • They can not write yet. So they are not ready for this area.

	unique to specific discipline.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> We feel that these substandards are a way to advance for our grade level. We would love to really simplify what 1st Grade students are doing for special studies.
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Student learning is scaffolded to understand the standard.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> See above

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Some things can be integrated in our ELA and Math curriculum. We like the NM focus of some standards.
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Many of these standards are developed for higher level kids - 4th and up.
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add?
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> With students being so far behind due to COVID- Remote learning, hybrid, missed days due to quarantine... Wouldn't it be best for elementary to focus on ELA and Math and tie in Social Studies to our lessons. We have students who do not know their letters or numbers right now. So the thought of adding this is very overwhelming. Students in First Grade should be focusing on their own immediate world: maps, knowing where they live, where they live, what is a globe? Name of President, where does the President live, state capital, state flower, state fair, country we live in....

Social Studies Standards Review Grade 1

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED's criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	Yes, rigor can not be reached without the application of content knowledge and skills. These are often on-going. The standards are broad enough to allow on going instruction and teacher flexibility and creativity in lessons. Some maybe too broad and allow for the focus to be lost.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	There are sometimes prior knowledge that must be reached as necessary prerequisites, these need to be noted in the standard, and standards need to be understandable and not so broad that the goal gets lost.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision ("grain size") are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the	Agree, some of the standards are difficult to find a consistent measurement as written.

	likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students' overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.	Agree! It may be beneficial to come up with "I can statements" to help students and teachers focus on key concepts.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.	Agree, but Some of these maybe too broad and allow for the focus to be lost. It is unclear exactly what tools and measurement need to be used to show competency.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	Yes, but grade level standards need to address the multiple levels in a grade level classroom. We like the thematic breakdown of these standards.
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core	Yes, agree The standards have a nice followable scope and sequence.

essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.	Agree, with some simple modifications and narrowing of direction these standards would consistently structure the discipline of Social Studies.

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
We are excited to see standards for social studies to help meet student needs. We liked the thematic breakdown and the scope of the standards.
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Some are too broad, ambiguous and they do not have easily identified measurement features. Not in kid friendly language.
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add? Will there be a curriculum or will teachers design their own. Will the district accept a combination to allow flexibility for classroom creativity

Social Studies Standards Review Grade 2

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED's criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level/Parent Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision ("grain size") are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students' overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple

	expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?

Having the opportunity to review and discuss the standards as a team; There are some integration attempts across disciplines; The standards are visibly streamlined.

Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Rigor is not appropriate for this grade level; Verbiage of the standards are not clear for all stake holders; Requires a specific time slot set aside vs integration into current curriculum;
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add? What curriculum will be used to follow these standards; Will require extensive "front loading"

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED’s criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	Rigor is applied to lessons that encourage students to question their assumptions and think deeply. How much front loading of concepts should take place for this to happen? This requires instructing each student in a way that is relevant to him or her.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	This should also meet the developmental levels of the learners.
Specificity: A standard	Specificity is when a	Some standards are overly broad or are open to

should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students’ overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.	interpretation: 3.13 which specific World events? 3.16 “who receives the goods that are produced in the world?” so broad and we are not sure third grades can ascertain the relevance of this concept.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers,	3.27-”someone else feel bad” Who is this? Vague allows a clash of personal issues and objectivity. (3.6) parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.

Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	Theme 2 needs a lot of foundational/broken out strands to build an in depth Coherent structure
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.	3.11 break into 2 standards 8 years old need a foundation of geographic information City..county...state...country...continents and so forth
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded	Essential content- 3.26 is a science concept

logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	--

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Streamlined from before, good that we are looking at the SS Standards and having input
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Developmentally inappropriate, must be careful about home beliefs and values conflicting with what we teach because we need to be sensitive to core beliefs.3.27 3.29
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add? Language is clear for all stakeholders specifically parents and students. Time, writing a standard to reflect all of the core criteria is difficult and can cause us to use language not accessible to all stakeholders-primarily our students.

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED’s criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	Yes, we feel that the standards are VERY Rigorous.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	The 4th grade standards are very focused on NM past and present. At the current level of students the concern lies in their ability to read the grade level material with understanding.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly	The standard is specific enough to be able to teach however it is lacking in expected measure of performance to show mastery. There is a lot of previous knowledge needed/ required in regards to the standards.

	specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students' overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.	Lacking in specific criteria for what is considered a measure of success
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.	Does not articulate what is required of students specifically
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	Does not build upon previous grade level standards in an logical sequence
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced	It would be developmentally appropriate given that students have received prior SS instruction .

	concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.	Does not build upon previous grade level standards in an logical sequence

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
That there are standards that we have not been allowed time to actually teach at the Elementary level.
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
The “Themes” are not in a logical sequence from one grade level to the next. Very difficult to implement with the very large gaps in learning we are seeing in our current year. =
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you’d like to add?
Time in the instructional day and materials to address these standards in a fun and engaging way.

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED’s criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level/Parent Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students’ overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.

Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?

Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add?

I took a quick look at these for 5th grade and they are almost overwhelming since most of the 5th grade teachers don't even teach social studies. I really feel so many of them are higher level standards than what 5th graders can understand; especially if we have to give them a grade
Theme 1: most of those standards are easy enough for the students to understand and they need to know how our government is set up.

Theme 2: 5.14, 5.15, 5.16, 5.17 would be good for 5th graders 5.18 would be harder for them to do.

Theme 3: Human rights and Economic Development Not sure this is necessary for 5th grade

Theme 4: Human Impact on Environment: Would be good for 5th graders

Theme 5: Identity of Multiple Spaces: this is a hot topic today since it talks about culture and identity groups. Think this is harder for students to understand because most of their beliefs are based on what their families believe and goes against their thoughts.

Inquiry: A lot of these standards are covered in Language Arts standards: citing evidence, supporting questions, construct responses to compelling questions, and identify sources.

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED’s criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	The standards need to be in more student friendly language if they are to understand what they are to be learning. In some cases the teachers have a hard time understanding exactly what is being asked of them. The rigor is good for a college level classroom but our kids are not at that level yet. If it’s taught beginning in 1st grade with rigor, by the time they get to 7th grade, this rigor will be fine, but it will be 7 years until they are there. The standards depict an assumption that the kids come to us with a wealth of background knowledge which, in reality, they do not have. In order for many of the standards to be successful students would have to have that background knowledge to perform at the level they are being asked to demonstrate.
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	There is no mention of specific people or events. For kids to really get into history and engage as if they are part of history and really comprehend not only what happened, but why, how, and its effect on the future, they need to have examples of historical figures and events so they can put themselves in the shoes of the participants, not just a generic era that has nothing they can connect with.
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that

	students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students' overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that

fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.	These standards do not address many topics that are vital to showing how we got from one place in history to where we are now through the examination of historical facts.

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
Anchor standards are extremely organized. No spiraling back, “do you remember we talked about this...” to get to this... They set high expectations.
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
*Standards assume students come in with a wealth of background/skills. *College level theory *Where are the heroes / villains *Too broad, hard to align *Activities vs. content *What are we leaving out? - lots of important topics that show how we got from point A to point B in history. *Critical Race Theory included - Why is critical race theory being forced when it is so controversial and divisive? Idea: School board is elected to represent the people so a suggestion would be to put out a survey to the community or hold a sort of town hall meeting (not just in a letter or on facebook) asking the community how they feel about the implementation of CRT into the curriculum. This could be a good idea before requiring the district to implement it. We may lose a lot of students with CRT being taught. *We do not currently have the resources to teach all the information that is contained in the standards and have been told we will not get new resources that support these standards for several more years.
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you’d like to add?

Social Studies Standards Review High School

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED’s criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	Rigor looks appropriate for high school...
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	Mention of choice here (see “plus” comments)
Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students’ overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.
Clarity/Accessibility: Standards	Clarity requires more than just plain

should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and communicate within the specific discipline.	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.	Looks good
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	Looks good
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.	Noticed addition of specific topics not included previously.
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?

The inclusion of different cultures and perspectives of people in this country. Variety of different subject areas and possibilities for curriculum in the classroom. Range of opportunities for possible student choice in subject area (does this mean we can allow student choice in the classroom?)

Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
A LOT more standards. Is there an expectation to accomplish all these standards in the time period allotted for each individual student?
Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add?
What is competency based on? Is it based on the content area performance standards? Or the inquiry performance standards?

Social Studies Standards Review High School

We are seeking your feedback pertaining to the Social Studies Standards so we can provide adequate information to our Board of Education prior to approval of these Standards.

The criteria and descriptions below come from the NMPED's criteria for High Quality Standards. Please allow time within your PLC to review the attached Social Studies Standards within your grade level/content team and provide us feedback using the template below:

Criteria	Description	Grade Level Thoughts
Rigor: A standard should help students understand knowledge and concepts that are complex, ambiguous, or contentious, and acquire skills that can be applied in a variety of educational, career, and civic contexts throughout their lives	Rigor is the measure of how closely a set of standards represents the content and cognitive demand necessary for students to succeed in credit-bearing college courses without remediation and in entry-level, quality high growth jobs. If a standard is rigorous it includes high-level cognitive demands and asks students to demonstrate deep conceptual understanding through the application of content knowledge and skills to new situations. High-level cognitive demand includes reasoning, justification, synthesis, analysis, and problem-solving.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate

		HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)
Focus: A standard should address what is most important for students to learn.	Focus is the establishment of priorities about the concepts and skills that should be acquired by graduation from high school. Choices should be based on the knowledge and skills essential for students to succeed in postsecondary education and the world of work.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate

Specificity: A standard should be specific enough to convey the level of performance expected of students.	Specificity is when a standard is precise and provides sufficient detail to convey the level of performance expected without being overly prescriptive. Standards that maintain a relatively consistent level of precision (“grain size”) are easier to understand and use. Those that are overly broad or vague leave too much open to interpretation, increasing the likelihood that students will be held to different levels of performance, while highly specific standards encourage a checklist approach to teaching and learning that undermines students’ overall understanding of the discipline. Also, standards that contain multiple expectations may be hard to translate into specific performances.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)

Clarity/Accessibility: Standards should be clear, measurable, observable, or verifiable in some way and in language that students and parents can understand.	Clarity requires more than just plain and jargon-free prose, which is free of errors. First, the standard should focus on student attainment that is observable and verifiable. It can be used to develop broader assessment frameworks. Second, the standard also must be communicated in language that can gain widespread acceptance not only by postsecondary faculty but also by employers, teachers, parents, school boards, legislators and others who have a stake in schooling. A straightforward, functional format facilitates user access.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators) ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)
Disciplinary Literacy: Standards as a whole should clearly articulate what is required of students to read, write and	Disciplinary Literacy is defined as the convergence of content knowledge, experiences, and skills demonstrated through the ability to	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4

communicate within the specific discipline.	read, write, communicate, and think critically using processes unique to specific discipline.	Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)
Coherence: Standards as a whole should be organized in a unified structure/framework devoid of gaps in learning expectations.	The standards are categorized and broken out into supporting strands and should reflect a coherent structure of the discipline and/or reveal significant relationships among the strands and how the study of one complements the study of another.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas)

		HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)
Depth: Standards as a whole should illustrate robust, well-integrated understandings of fundamental concepts essential to the attainment of literacy and fluency in a discipline	Sufficient 'depth' includes developmentally appropriate levels of investigation that reinforce and revisit core concepts and that provide a firm foundation for students to learn and understand more advanced concepts and transfer their knowledge in other contexts while increasing in complexity, across the standards document.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26

		Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)
Breadth: Standards as a whole should illustrate a logical and consistent structure that addresses the key content, concepts and skills of the discipline.	Breadth refers to a logically scaffolded and sequenced set of standards in which essential content is explored through a wide array of interrelated ideas, facts, and perspectives.	HS Civics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Civics 1-4 Adequate Economics Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Economics 5-9 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS Geography Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards Geography 10-13 Adequate (Too many performance standards in some areas) HS New Mexico History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate Anchor Standards HS NM Adequate (Themes 1-8 May be difficult to cover in a semester long course) HS U.S. History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate

		HS World History Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate 1-37 Performance Standards are repetitive. Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies Anchor Standards Inquiry 22-26 Adequate ECI Standards 19-21 Adequate (Some performance standards may get pushback from some community members and some educators)
--	--	----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Additional Thoughts

Plus- What positives did you notice when reviewing the standards?
World History Anchor Standards are good. New Mexico History Anchor Standards are solid. Civics Anchor Standards are good Geography Anchor Standards are good ECI Inquiry Anchor Standards are good
Deltas- What deltas did you notice when reviewing the standards?
World History Performance Standards are repetitive and have some inequities in them. US history increased to 141 standards from 54. With only 180 days for the course, less interims, reviews and CFA's and less picture day, college career days this will leave 20 days for RTI or 2 day review of one standard. You only have time to talk about each standard for 1 day. Summarizing the forty years of the cold war in one lesson doesn't allow for an adequate education of the major events in the development of the United States. 9-12.US.135. Create an action plan as "a student I can objective." What does this look like? 9-12.US.136. Evaluate the effects of the representation of diverse people in the US government including race, gender, sexual orientation, and disability. Under the several Acts that these qualifiers are protected, should there be examination by students of the effects of their representation in the US Government. Suggested switching Analyze instead of Evaluate for this standard. New Mexico Performance Standards tend to cross over in various units of learning and instruction. With this being said; 9-12.NMH 49. Compare organizations engaged in Civil Rights work - What does this look like and what is the most professional and appropriate method to deliver this specific instruction? 9-12.NMH 50. Demonstrates interpretation of critical changes in New Mexico's segregation laws. What are those specific critical changes, and what does this look like? Economics: Way too many performance standards for a semester long course; combine or narrow them down. ECI Anchor Standards 19-21 may offer language in the performance standards that some community members may feel is agenda driven through the use of “trigger words” or “trigger phrases” based on their own beliefs and Identities. Maybe some specific examples of curriculum for each performance standard would be appropriate to add. While they are important topics to teach and discuss, they are very difficult topics to demand from educators as part of a policy.

Other Concerns- Do you have any other concerns you'd like to add?

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Carol Johnson <cortejo38@gmail.com>

Wed 10/27/2021 6:17 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Lou Levin <loulevin@yahoo.com>; Simesha McEachern <simesha2020@gmail.com>; Joseph Cotton <hobbsnaacp@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As the mother of a New Mexico Public Schools graduate, grandmother of current students and mother-in-law of a teacher and supporter and advocate for public education, I support the New Mexico Public Education Department's Proposed Social Studies Standards. I have reviewed the Standards. They are well overdue. They provide age/grade appropriate, comprehensive, up-to-date, fact-based, culturally inclusive, realistic coverage of social studies over time and disciplines. Critical thinking and respect are emphasize throughout. Historical truth is not always pretty but the ugliness cannot be ignored or it will be continued or repeated. Students are encouraged to look at the influences which were involved in getting the them, their families, community, state, country and world to where it is today without "making other people feel bad" and "demonstrate respect for the feeings of people who are similar and different". Our children are our future. They must be prepared for citizenship in a diverse global environment. The proposed Standards will prepare them to be active participants in their future and society. To support students, teachers, parents and the community also need to be provided education on the Standards so that they have an understanding of historical truth and inclusion which may not be a part of our education and life experience.

[EXTERNAL] New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Gary and Linda Jones <gljones@pvtnetworks.net>

Thu 10/28/2021 8:52 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (15 KB)

Social Studies Benchmarks & Standards.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To: Mr. John Sena

From: Gary Jones

Re: Social Studies input

October 26, 2021

To: John Sena

From: Gary and Linda Jones

As retired teachers with grandchildren in elementary and secondary schools here in New Mexico, we have some concerns regarding New Mexico Social Studies Standards which have been proposed. We do not support Critical Race Theory being taught in our schools since it does not teach accurate history and seems to create negative conflicts between groups. After reading the standards and benchmarks it seems Critical Race Theory and other issues are "hidden" in the standards and their wordings (LGBTQIA+, gender and sexuality norms/roles, Harlem Renaissance, reparations, and numerous cultural diversity standards are a few examples). Many of these issues create more division among people, then help bring people together. The standards and benchmarks are very eloquently written but difficult to understand for many people, including some teachers who have stated they are unsure as to their meaning.

The economic and industries standards in the New Mexico History curriculum never even mentions our state's mining, oil and gas industries of New Mexico which are the largest contributors to our state's budget. The geography standards for high school seemed to skim over lessons about maps, but mentions constitutional bilingualism, artists, and cultural politics.

As a former social studies teacher and department head, teaching all these "extras" (ethnic, cultural, and identity studies plus inquiry) take away from the teaching of actual social studies curriculum (civics, economics, geography and history). We need to get back to the fundamentals of teaching and focus on teaching respect for all people.

Sincerely,

Gary & Linda Jones

1809 W. Currier Ave.

Artesia, NM 88210

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment on Social Studies

Lisa Anderson <lisa.anderson.1@hotmail.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 11:42 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I am providing some feedback on the proposed curriculum:

Overall I believe there is too much emphasis on NM history. The curriculum makes assumptions that these students are from NM and will stay in NM. They need to learn important things than state history.

I believe there is too much focus on cultural and family culture and identity. This can be taught by parents and other member's of the family community. It is inappropriate for the school to bring this up. This could also make many children uncomfortable. What if they feel they don't have a culture or cultural identity. Or that certain cultures and identities, particularly those of NM, are more celebrated over others?

anchor Standard The student demonstrates an understanding of: Performance Standard: Therefore, the student is able to: Economics 6. Incentives and Choices ● 1.14. Examine choices that families make due to scarcity, and identify costs associated with these choices

1st Grade: Focus on scarcity: this is inappropriate for 1st grade. It will overwhelm them and make them worry too much

5th Grade: Inequality

Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today: Inappropriate. Makes assumptions that inequality continues today. Is too open to bias from teachers.

6.16. Identify their family and personal cultural identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions

This assumes there are negative perceptions. Children should just be taught to accept everyone regardless of the cultural identity

7.11. Examine the relationship between stereotypes, bias, and group identity. ● 7.12. Explore opportunities to be an ally and describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally.

This is inappropriate and should not be taught in school. It should be left to the family to discuss this and I firmly disagree with this being a part of the curriculum.

Thank you,
Lisa Anderson

[EXTERNAL] New social studies curriculum

Karisa Mullen <karicia55@hotmail.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 1:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The new social studies curriculum you are integrating is critical race theory. CRT teaches children that the most important aspect of themselves is their race. It also teaches them to judge others based on race and by the acts of people long ago dead.

Education in New Mexico will deteriorate even further as depression enters the hearts of students made to feel separated as victims or oppressors. It is child abuse and these actions will have heartbreaking effects. I have read it and though it starts out slowly, it builds as the years go on.

This curriculum is dishonest, biased, and harmful to children. Please walk back this curriculum and abandon it. It is possible to acknowledge the sad true facts of history while also acknowledging the greatness and uniqueness of our country and her people. We are one nation under God.

Sincerely,
Karisa Mullen

Get Outlook for Android

[EXTERNAL] Comments submitted to PED

Michael Potts <michaelspotts1951@gmail.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 4:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr. John Sena,

Mr. Sena, I hope you do not mind but I would like to inquire as to whether or not you received the comments I submitted on the PED's Social Studies Curriculum. If you have not received them I will forward them to you again so you might have the comments I took great pains to provide you.

Thank you,

Michael S. Potts
Las Cruces, New Mexico

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Dee Ann Adams <adamsdeeann@yahoo.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 7:35 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I don't think crt or anything like it should be taught in are schools. It's creates more divide among all races.

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Disagree

Vanessa Martinez <nessawa24@gmail.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 7:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The public school's would be wise not to change social studies to fit the leftists bs Narrative they want to force on our children. You may not like the history of our nation but it is there not to be repeated. This is America, the land of the free, one nation under God and you will not take our rights as parents or our childrens rights by trying to rewrite history or appose some fales bs that black children are victims and white children have white privilege. Parents will fight back and if we must will remove our children from public schools to be home schooled and it is our constitutional right to do so!!!

[EXTERNAL] Re: Proposed Social Studies Standards - Resending with Contact Information

Carol Johnson <cortejo38@gmail.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 10:53 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Lou Levin <loulevin@yahoo.com>; Simesha McEachern <simesha2020@gmail.com>; Joseph Cotton <hobbsnaacp@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

On Wed, Oct 27, 2021, 6:16 PM Carol Johnson <cortejo38@gmail.com> wrote:

As the mother of a New Mexico Public Schools graduate, grandmother of current students and mother-in-law of a teacher and supporter and advocate for public education, I support the New Mexico Public Education Department's Proposed Social Studies Standards. I have reviewed the Standards. They are well overdue. They provide age/grade appropriate, comprehensive, up-to-date, fact-based, culturally inclusive, realistic coverage of social studies over time and disciplines. Critical thinking and respect are emphasize throughout. Historical truth is not always pretty but the ugliness cannot be ignored or it will be continued or repeated. Students are encouraged to look at the influences which were involved in getting the them, their families, community, state, country and world to where it is today without "making other people feel bad" and "demonstrate respect for the feeings of people who are similar and different". Our children are our future. They must be prepared for citizenship in a diverse global environment. The proposed Standards will prepare them to be active participants in their future and society. To support students, teachers, parents and the community also need to be provided education on the Standards so that they have an understanding of historical truth and inclusion which may not be a part of our education and life experience.

Carol I Johnson
6 Arroyo Canyon Drive, Unit B
Santa Fe, NM 87508
(505) 470-7537

[EXTERNAL] No to the proposed social studies curriculum changes.

J. Atencio <jsa.atencio@gmail.com>

Thu 10/28/2021 10:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

New Mexico is among the last in ranking of quality of education in the nation! We should be focused on teaching our kids reading, writing, and arithmetic.

Social justice has little to no value when our children go on to building a career path! The school system has gotten way off track and we need to correct course!

I say no to the proposed Social studies changes. I say no to the radical Social justice stance to be forced upon the school children. I teach my children my family values at home. It is up to parents to instill the values of being a good human being at home.

Please focus on providing New Mexico's children with a better education. Not on becoming social justice warriors that are unable to aquire quality careers because of a subpar education.

Jeremie S. Atencio

[EXTERNAL] Cut curriculum david armijo <david.son13790187@gmail.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 9:27 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have a new mexico 1st grade student currently. I am a Hispanic and my student is white, as in not my blood relative. I do not wish for her to be taught the racist ideals of crt. I am not a victim, and she is not superior based on the color of our skin. America is still that shining beacon of freedom and possibility. I will teach her that racism is a part of our shared story. But is not the definition of america. As Americans we are free to pursue happiness and we have more in common with all races than we have differences. CRT must not be allowed in especially a diverse state like my beloved new mexico.

Thank you

David

[EXTERNAL] NMPED Social Studies Proposal

Veronica Gunter <ronniesueg316@gmail.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 10:17 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear NM PED,

I am a mom of 2 precious children and I have many concerns regarding the new social studies proposal. Most importantly, I believe this is an alternative to calling it what it is, Critical Race Theory. I find it shameful that we as a society would put these racist ideas and ideologies in the heads of our own children. I believe we should celebrate all ethnicities and cultures, but should never teach that ones skin color defines who a person is. This type of teaching will only divide our country even further. We as a society need to say enough is enough and the government needs to step aside. It is solely the responsibility of parents and guardians to teach our children to be kind and compassionate regardless of race, ethnicity or culture.

I want to know how these new ideas will be taught to our children. I, as a parent, want to know exactly what information will be taught. This proposal starts as early as kindergarten to identify what group our children belong to and this continues all the way through high school. What examples throughout our history will our children be learning? I do not want my children, nor anyone's else's children, being taught that their skin color comes with advantages or disadvantages.

These are a few of the topics that are of concern:

Page 61, 7.94...identity can be modified by personal choice or external forces. What is this? We are born the way God made us, and that is, wonderfully made.

Page 46, 6th grade, 6.22

Page 62, 7th grade, 7.103

Page 65, 8th grade, 8.19-8.23

Page 73, 8th grade, 8.80-8.82

Pages 119 and 122, high school history

I know our history has an ugly truth at times, but that's what it is...history. I believe we should still teach it and recognize it, but also teach our children to be good citizens and pillars of the community.

I want to know how these topics will be handled, will it be one sided as it is now portrayed by the media or will it indeed be factual? Has the PED given any instruction on how this is to be taught and will parents have a voice? Please give us an extension to July 2022, this will ensure that every parent will have ample time to look into this and be better informed.

Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it. Proverbs 22:6

Thank you for your time,

Veronica Gunter

[EXTERNAL] Changes to Social Studies curriculum

Andrea Camp <andreadcamp7@gmail.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 11:01 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Bloomfield schools

I couldn't help but notice several changes to the social studies curriculum reads more like the Democrat platform than teaching the skills students need to compete in the world after school. Our educators should focus on education not social engineering. Keep your hands off of our children. CRT and gender studies have no place in these age groups. A quick Google search shows NM is scrapping the bottom of the barrel in education, we are substandard in most areas around the country. Bloomfield School district is ranked within the bottom 50% of all 122 schools in New Mexico. 2/10 in testing scores. New Mexico is failing our children.

It would be wise to fix this first before you implement undermining parental authority. Stay in your lane as educators because quite frankly if you couldn't bring those standards up educationally I shudder at the thought of Bloomfield schools promoting CRT and identity politics. What could possibly go wrong and I'm not confident they can without personal bias. I'm Hispanic and I oppose these divisive indoctrination tactics. It is your job to teach history, teach children how to think critically not what to think. I was horrified during lockdowns and the whole of 2020 school year what some teachers were doing. Putting their political views in front of the children as the only truth. This should not ever happen or tolerated. Many learned around the country what was going on. How long has this been going on...? Far too long I'm sure.

Andrea Vargas Camp

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies curriculum

Lucas Tieme <lucastieme@gmail.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 11:11 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern.

I strongly disagree with a large part of the updates to our state social studies curriculum. While it may be necessary to update the curriculum this is NOT the sort of information I will allow for my 5 children currently enrolled in New Mexico schools. The topics of equity and reconciliation are divisive and subversive. I am all for uplifting and including all walks of life in our learning, however framing it this way is wrong. This not "a more accurate and inclusive view of our history". It is victimization of some groups while condemning others. It is self flagellation by some and aggrandization of others. It is divisive and destructive to our culture as AMERICANS! I whole heartedly deny accusations of systemic racism in America and injustice toward specific groups. Struggle and adversity have never been limited to one specific race or ethnicity. Neither has privilege. Teaching otherwise is a distortion of reality and will not be tolerated in my schools.

Instead of making curriculum highlighting our differences and dividing our children by skin color and social status we should be teaching our children that because of our differences we are all Americans and have to stand together. Teaching them to respect each other NO MATTER the differences. America simply cannot, by definition, be racist because America does not have a race. We are ALL Americans and teaching our children to view their fellow AMERICANS though a racially tinted lens is shameful. Acknowledge race amongst each other, respect each other's differences but DO NOT ALLOW THOSE DIFFERENCE TO DEFINE WHO WE ARE AS A COUNTRY.

Please do not update our curriculum to reflect this divisive view of one other. If this is accepted I will be taking my 5 students out of New Mexico public schools altogether. We will either homeschool or move to a different state. This will be more than simply a loss of students and thereby funding for NM schools, it will be a loss NM schools do not want. My children are well behaved and are all EXCELLENT students who, by simply showing up to class, improve the ranking data reflected by their respective schools.

I will take them, and my tax dollars elsewhere.

Sincerely and resolutely,
Lucas J. Tieme

[EXTERNAL] Proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum

CLIFFORD RENSCHLER <c_renschler@msn.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 12:00 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: stefani.lord@nmlegis.gov <stefani.lord@nmlegis.gov>; gregg.schmedes@nmlegis.gov <gregg.schmedes@nmlegis.gov>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Having just reviewed the proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum, I wish to express my strong opposition to these standards as written. The proposed curriculum is littered with references to differences between ethnic and racial groups and how those differences lead to "systemic inequity." Kids exposed to this curriculum would be taught that, depending on their family background, they are either oppressors or oppressed. This turns on its head Dr. King's admonition that we should judge each other by the content of our characters and not the color of our skin. In fact, given Webster's definition of racism as "a belief that race is the primary determinant of human traits and capacities and that racial differences produce an inherent superiority of a particular race", these standards seem to me to be themselves racist.

America has its faults, and those shortcomings should not be ignored. But by any objective measure, America has done more to promote equality of opportunity than any other nation in the history of the world. Curricula such as this one, even if somehow well-intentioned, are divisive and threaten to rip the fabric of society and reverse the progress enabled by Dr. King and so many others who have sacrificed to bring us ever closer to the goal, more closely realized in America than anywhere else, of "liberty and justice for all."

This curriculum is not worthy of the children of New Mexico.

Dr. Clifford Renschler
Tijeras

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Veronica Toledo <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 12:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Veronica Toledo
1475 Rodeo Rd, Unit 260
SANTA FE, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] NM standards

Jennifer Smith <jennifer.smith@aps.edu>

Fri 10/29/2021 12:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hi,

I had a chance to review the new MS standards for Social Studies. I am very much in support of these changes.

Kind regards,

Jennifer Smith

6th Grade Science

Kennedy MS

721 Tomasita Blvd NE

Albuquerque, NM 87123

(505) 298-6710 Ext - 23906

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Stanards

Ray Haltli <eatnski@gmail.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 5:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

Overall, I believe these new standards are fine. I say this as a former educator and as someone who is concerned about the politicization of public school curriculums. Upon further study and thought, I'd like to recommend some language changes. These changes would lead to a greater objectivity in the subjects of study below, as well as keeping teachers and students from being straightjacketed in their opinions of what are, in reality, very subjective topics. The proposed changes have been bolded for your convenience.

Current language: Pg. 31: performance standard 3.29: 3.29. Identify the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

Proposed change: Identify the actions of people and groups throughout history who have professed to work to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

Current language: Pg. 122: Performance standard 9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

Proposed change: Assess how social policies and economic forces may offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

Current language: Pg. 122: Performance standard 9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

Proposed change: Investigate how identity groups and society have professed to address possible systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

I believe that these specific topics can produce lively discussions and stimulate research. However, if they are couched in such absolute terms, this thinking may not happen. Additionally, students who may have been willing to grapple intellectually with these topics may be rendered defensive and unteachable through the absolutism currently found in these standards. The subjectivity of these topics must be taken into account in order for real thinking and learning to take place.

Respectfully,

Jennifer Haltli

[EXTERNAL] Do not pass PED Revised Social Studies Curriculum sgamble@bajabb.com <sgamble@bajabb.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 7:11 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>Cc: Griggs, Ron <ron.griggs@nmlegis.gov>; Representative Brown, Cathrynn <c.brown.nm55@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please do not allow the proposed Public Education Department's K-12 revised social study curriculum program to become what our children are exposed to and taught.

Sincerely,

Steve and Melody Gamble

Carlsbad, NM

After a careful examination of New Mexico's proposed social studies curriculum there are numerous components of that curriculum which disturbingly reflect Critical Race Theory (CRT). Large numbers of Americans of all political leanings oppose CRT and its divisive approach to history. Therefore this proposed curriculum needs to be significantly revised or completely abandoned.

CRT is not America's actual history. Rather, it is a worldview, unsupportable by the evidence, in which all of America's key institutions are inextricably rooted in white supremacy. It is an activist agenda demanding the destruction of those institutions.

CRT holds that racism is embedded deeply in American life, unconsciously into white American psyches, and that it is impossible for white Americans to understand their own racism or that of the system, let alone to remove it. The only solution: tearing away the only systems that have ever provided widespread liberty and prosperity. As CRT founder Derrick Bell wrote, "The whole liberal worldview of private rights and public sovereignty mediated by the rule of law needed to be exploded."

In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies there is a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces "offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity."

This is classic CRT theology. 6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)

Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continue focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This, too, is classic CRT as the purpose is to divide people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.

There are also numerous examples where a teacher can impose the notion of "justice and fairness," unequal power relations, "past and current injustices", although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also classic CRT as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)

Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students "evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S." This is again classic CRT as it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)

Within High School U.S. History, students are required to create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. This is another CRT theology component in that America is automatically unjust and inequitable to various minority groups. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)

Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. No positives regarding gun usage by women or minority groups are put forth. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)

In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. Another classic example of CRT as it stresses racial disparity in terms of inequality. 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)

Within High school U.S. History, students must examine the short-and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America. How about pairing this with a discussion of Communism and the negative impact it has had in Cuba and other Latin American nations. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)

In the 7thGrade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)

Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)

The novelist William Faulkner wrote, "The past is never dead. It's not even past." It is true that any social studies curriculum will have its flaws and oversights. History and social studies are inherently controversial subjects. But, selectively "studying" our collective history and requiring it to be taught in a highly politicized and divisive way is wrong and it has no place in our public schools.

All I ask is that New Mexico's schools do their best to objectively teach America's real history. Slavery and conquest are certainly part of that, but so is America as a beacon of freedom for people from around the world. The flaws of our Founding Fathers are worth discussing, but so are the miracles of the Constitution, Declaration, and the eventual fulfillment of the "promissory note" for ALL Americans inherent in those documents.

Millions of people around the world have and would still like to come to America because it is a unique nation founded on the idea of liberty, not slavery as the CRT theorists would insist. New Mexico's social studies curriculum should at least allocate as much time and study to those things that make America a beacon of hope and freedom as those warts which hold us back from building a more perfect union.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum Feedback gacha lover 1243 <aflynnmeier@gmail.com>

Fri 10/29/2021 8:04 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing regarding the new social studies curriculum that is being proposed. I want to express my disagreement. Reading over the curriculum it is focused on negativity. There is a focus on dividing the children into their identity groups. This separates children and puts an emphasis on their differences. As history has taught us, separating people into groups only leads to superior attitudes. As adults, we should be bringing them together and allow children their individuality.

The draft reports that the new curriculum develops critical thinking, however, this cannot be accomplished with this draft. The main focus throughout K-12 is America is oppressive, unjust, and inequitable. How are children supposed to think critically when they are only presented with one version of the United States? You cannot critically think when you are only presented with just the negative side of history. The social studies program should instill pride in one's country not shame. This defines America only by our mistakes and does not address all the times Americans strived to be better or the heroes, which are of all races and genders, created.

There is also an obvious political agenda/bias attached to this update. This is evident in having the children healing and mending relationships, creating allies, and basically the entire high school program. This thinking is the children have already offended and need to make amends, however, this is never accomplished. When addressing the conservative movement the focus is on impacts of diverse groups, police brutality, and hate crimes against LGBTQIA+. In addition, when addressing Christianity it brings gender roles into play. Yet, gender roles are not explored in any other religion the children are taught. I highly doubt gender roles will be accurately portrayed as it will be a perverse misunderstanding since this is the only religion with this discussion. Then, there is the teaching of gun violence which is clearly an attack on the 2nd amendment as statistics presented are usually skewed. There is no counter to such as the rise of gun ownership in minorities and women, countries who demanded citizens give up their guns and the adverse effects of relinquishing their weapons. There is also a clear push Capitalism is bad and America would be better with another economy type. However, it does not seem these other societies' negative aspects are taught such as the death of millions or that it does not create a more equitable society, but instead elites and poverty ridden. Capitalism has been shown to be equal. Immigrants can come here with $4 in their pocket and rise up. Other countries you are stuck in your station. Regarding COVID-19, are you going to teach that some of their friends are no longer here due to the bad policy of lockdowns? The school failed, continues to fail them, and did not follow the science to get kids back in schools? To get kids back to their normal because this is not a virus that kills kids. They have a better chance of being struck by lightning, however, they are susceptible, and increasing numbers in off season, to upper respiratories due to mask wearing. Our most elderly population was delivered to death on a silver platter due to policies of allowing COVID-19 positive into the elderly homes? I am not saying COVID-19 is not awful, but it was definitely made worse by following political science and New Mexico faired far worse than other states when looking at all data points due to our governor's failures.

I do not understand why facts of historical events cannot be taught in a neutral way, other than you want a clear bias pushed on our children. Of course, the bad needs to be taught. Children need to know it is not always sunshine and rainbows. However, out of people's bad choices/policies rise others throughout our history willing to stand up and give their lives in order to make America a more equal and free society. A society that millions want to come to each year. A society that is one of the most accepting in the world. A country where you can immigrate and be considered an American. There is pushback all over the country, from all races, on this type of teaching; why would you present this as a solution to upgrading the program? Also, our state is last in education and literacy, would it not be more productive in raising these rates? I will not have my children learn this skewed version of events that is only spurred by the spirit of the age that cares more about feelings than facts.

Thank you,
Amanda Meyer

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment: Rule 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies agarciacanty@aol.com <agarciacanty@aol.com>

Sat 10/30/2021 8:44 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I, strongly, disagree with the proposed changes in Rule 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. The proposed changes are devise, not uniting. History is history! Yes, it's important to teach our children NM history, and especially US history to UNITE us as a Country, not divide us as a people.

During the October 19, 2021 Las Cruces Public School Board meeting, Dr. Warniment stated,

"There is a lot that has happened and granted we teach differently not just based on facts and we were actually trying to shift away from merely fact based teaching because that's what we actually have Just In Time Knowledge for." Video Time: 1:53:08.

Here is a good example of how they want to shift away from Fact Based Teaching:

Current and Proposed Social Studies Curriculum as it relates to two areas of interest: the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights at the High School Level.

Current Curriculum: 9 - 12 Grade, Strand 3) Civics and Government 1e

"analyze the rights, protections, limits and freedoms included within the United States constitution and bill of rights, to include: constitutional mandates such as the right of habeas corpus, no bill of attainder and the prohibition of the ex post facto laws: 1st Amendment guarantees freedom of religion, speech, press, assembly, and petition; 4th, 5th and 6th Amendments address search and seizure, rights of the accused, right to a fair and speedy trial, and other legal protections; 14th Amendment protection of due process and equal protection under the law; conflicts which occur between rights, including tensions between the right to a fair trial and freedom of the press and between majority rule and individual rights; expansion of voting rights, limitation of presidential terms, etc;"

A parent can read this curriculum, and know their child is learning about their rights, freedoms and protections.

Proposed Curriculum:

Anchor Standards and Performance Standards for High School Civics

A. Civics 1(c) " evaluating efforts to adapt and redesign the United States constitution and political institutions over time;"

There is no reference to the Bill of Rights in the High School Curriculum.

Dr. Warniment addressed this concern stating, " Its critical that knowledge can be built in elementary. Specifically at fifth grade, students will evaluate how the Bill of Rights shapes the rights of U.S. citizens. In Eighth grade...to critically read the Bill of Rights and supporting text to determine the narratives that were excluded from the original document....

As our children are embarking on adulthood in high school they should be learning the detailed facts of their constitutional rights, freedoms and protections.

I, strongly, disagree with the proposed changes in Rule 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. The proposed changes are devise, not uniting.

Dr. Ann Garcia, Ph.D
 agarciacanty@aol.com
 575 805-5504
 Las Cruces, NM 88005

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Robert Young <youngnc@hotmail.com>

Sat 10/30/2021 9:46 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I oppose CRT and its divisive approach to history. Therefore this proposed curriculum needs to be significantly revised or completely abandoned.

CRT is not America's actual history. Rather, it is a worldview, unsupportable by the evidence, in which all of America's key institutions are inextricably rooted in white supremacy. It is an activist agenda demanding the destruction of those institutions.

CRT holds that racism is deeply embedded in American life, unconsciously into white American psyches. According to the theory, it is impossible for white Americans to understand their own racism or that of the system, let alone to remove it. The only solution: tearing away the only systems that have ever provided widespread liberty and prosperity. As CRT founder Derrick Bell wrote, "The whole liberal worldview of private rights and public sovereignty mediated by the rule of law needed to be exploded."

Robert Young
youngnc@hotmail.com

[EXTERNAL] CRT

chris schoppe <ccschoppe@yahoo.com>

Sat 10/30/2021 2:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Millions of people around the world have and would still like to come to America because it is a unique nation founded on the idea of liberty, not slavery as the CRT theorists would insist. New Mexico's social studies curriculum should at least allocate as much time and study to those things that make America a beacon of hope and freedom as those warts which hold us back from building a more perfect union. Anyone endorsing this type of curriculum is a racist .

Sent from Mail for WindowsVirus-free. www.avg.com

[EXTERNAL] Guidelines for Teaching History & Social Studies

Jean Gilbert <jgilbert@zianet.com>

Sat 10/30/2021 4:25 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Please be sure there is sufficient emphasis on the role racism has played in American history and social studies during the process of establishing guidelines while revamping and developing this K-12 curriculum. It is of utmost importance that the information presented is honest, fact-based, and respectful of multicultural diversity and reflects the true experiences of people and also of the contributions they've made. I am concerned about attempts to whitewash or minimize the bad and ugly parts under the guise of "alternative" curriculum as has happened in other parts of the country.

Thank you for your consideration,

Jean Gilbert- Las Cruces, NM

[EXTERNAL]

Blah blah Bingo <bengamble0928@gmail.com>

Sat 10/30/2021 10:44 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please, as a law abiding citizen, tax payer, and lover of our Great United States of America, do not enact this curriculum for our childrens education!

[EXTERNAL] New social study program

Orlene Oylear <orleneoylear39@icloud.com>

Sun 10/31/2021 12:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Do not change the current program . One size does not fit all! Thank you
Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Do not change the current social studies program one size does not fit all

Orlene Oylear <orleneoylear39@icloud.com>

Sun 10/31/2021 1:31 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jamie Gonzales <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sun 10/31/2021 7:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Dear NMPED Leadership,

I am writing to commend you on the proposed improvements to the NM social studies standards. Identity and a true understanding of our nation's history is vitally important for our country to move forward. Additionally, I urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

In today's complex world, we know that a basic understanding of economic and financial concepts play a key role in economic stability and one's opportunity to grow personal wealth. Both my parents were in banking so I was able to gain valuable knowledge at an early age, and we know that not every student has access to these concepts at home. And, yet, we know every student will face multiple situations early in life where they will make financial decisions that will impact their future.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Jamie Gonzales

Sincerely,

Jamie Gonzales
2823 Dorothy St NE

Albuquerque , NM 87112

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Nancy Traylor <nmgal47@gmail.com>

Sun 10/31/2021 11:11 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Ms. Nancy Traylor
PO Box 6555
Albuquerque, NM 87197

nmgal47@aol.com

October 31, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena,

I am writing in support of the proposed change to the state's Social Studies standards. As a retired public school counselor who has worked at all grade levels K-12, I appreciate the critical importance of this subject matter-and I am aware of its unfortunate de-emphasis in the current testing environment.

It is my understanding that the new standards have been developed by a team of educators from districts and charters throughout the state and include feedback from parent and student focus groups as well as tribal leaders. In drafting these standards, an array of resources including the standards of multiple states were reviewed. The result is a set of six content areas with grade-appropriate material to build on each successive year. The inclusion of a media literacy approach, which helps students learn to evaluate the credibility of information and develop their own critical faculties, is foundational. In our state, with its diverse peoples and a history formed by many cultures, the broad perspective and positive tone of these standards is transformational.

As a counselor, I constantly strove to help students learn respect for differences, to mediate conflicts, to develop self esteem grounded in capability. These standards are directions toward those aims. I hope they are adopted and implemented.

Sincerely,

Nancy Traylor

[EXTERNAL] John Sena --

Michael Campbell <camp.pecos@gmail.com>

Mon 11/1/2021 10:36 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Could you please confirm how I might be added to the list of commentors on the proposed new Social Studies Standards. Thanks.

Michael Campbell

505-819-1698

camp.pecos@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Re-development Comment

Social Studies <socialstudiescomment@bulldogs.org>

Mon 11/1/2021 10:43 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (111 KB)

Camille George-Florez.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see the attached feedback letter regarding the Social Studies Standards Re-Development

State of New Mexico
Department of Education
Santa Fe, NM

To Whom It May Concern:

As a parent, a retired classroom teacher, and Director of Curriculum, I am very concerned about the proposed revision of the Social Studies guideline and curriculum. Let me remind you that we are supposed to teach students how to think objectively, not what to think. We are not supposed to interject our political and cultural biases into our classrooms.

In Social Studies we teach about the world as it is, the geography and where it is, regions of the world and where they are and what they look like, history as it really happened (not how we wish it had happened), continents, countries and how they are alike and different, governments and the correct terms to describe how they operate and other factual information.

It is my opinion and what I was always careful to remember that political views and cultural customs and religion were the values taught by parents and the family. We expect educators to instruct our students as equal individuals no matter what they look like, or what culture they represent, or any other differences they may have. We are all American citizens and we should not be trying to be divisive, we should be trying to educate students to be knowledgeable, responsible, contributing future citizens of our country.

126 pages of guidelines is too detailed, too many, too long, and does not allow for schools and communities to have much say in the curriculum presented to their students. It is my hope that you will edit the proposed guidelines to be what they are supposed to be: guidelines. Be careful not to overstep your authority and forget the actual purpose for these guidelines.

Please consider all the parents, students, and teachers of New Mexico. Do the right thing.

Camille George - Flores

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Karen Stines <rockymountainhighinnm@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/1/2021 11:03 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I oppose CRT!

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Changes to nm social studies standards

Jenny Romero <jennyromero940@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/1/2021 12:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am against the teaching of critical race theory and promoting g the LGBT agenda to our children our nation was founded on Godly values and we deceive ourselves if we seek to move away from them. God bless you. Thank you jenny Romero

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Jennifer Vitter <jennifer.vitter@aps.edu>

Mon 11/1/2021 1:46 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am in favor of the changes for the New Mexico K-12 Social Studies standards. The revisions will ensure New Mexico students receive a 21st century, pluralistic education. The inquiry component guarantees students will develop the critical thinking and research skills necessary for making sense of an information-driven world. The identity standards grant students the opportunity to make meaning of history and social studies within the context and framework of their own lives.

I have read and listened to feedback on these standards that argue they are over reaching the extent and abilities of a social studies classroom. Social Studies, as a discipline, is about the study of people. Not a people, but all people. Students learn best when they can connect the similarities and differences of others to themselves. Focusing teaching of social studies and history solely on "what makes us alike" leaves out the most important conversation in the discussion of people – what makes us individuals. This is not to argue that social studies curriculum should teach individualism, but rather how society is made up of individuals living together. The new standards give our students the opportunity to explore this – an important concept in a state as historically diverse as ours.

Bren Vitter (they/them)

Kennedy Middle School

7th Grade Social Studies Teacher

NJHS Chapter Adviser

jennifer.vitter@aps.edu

505-750-2773

"The surest way to corrupt a youth is to instruct him to hold in higher esteem those who think alike than those who think differently."

Friedrich Nietzsche (1844 - 1900), The Dawn, Sec. 297

[EXTERNAL] proposed rule making per the Social Studies standards

SUSAN CLAY <susan.clay@clovis-schools.org>

Mon 11/1/2021 2:51 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

First of all, I propose that starting with the 2022-23 school year is too soon to expect teachers to be able to break down a new set of standards, the volume of which is ridiculously long. Currently we are almost halfway through the 21-22 school year and these standards are not even decided yet. That leaves teachers who are struggling to recover following the year of COVID teaching adjustments, to have to learn, train and rebuild with very little time. There should be at least another year before putting these in to play.

Secondly, I wonder why - according to these standards - history is starting with the "20th century." I looked at elementary standards, high school standards, and NM history standards. In all of them, there are vague references to something that happened prior, for example the "Treaty of Hidalgo in 1864." But none of the rest of the standards asks that anything be taught before 1900!! That is a lot of history left out.

If we continue to leave out the foundations in our teaching (all the years prior to the "20th century"), our students will never learn and learn to think for themselves.

Thanks,

Susan Clay

Special Ed Dept Head

Clovis High School, room A7

575-769-4350. ext 1107

susan.clay@clovis-schools.org

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

[EXTERNAL] Time of the hearing

Julia Rosa Lopez-Emslie <emsliej@juno.com>

Mon 11/1/2021 3:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Is the time of the zoom meeting on November 12 from 1pm to 5pm or earlier as reported in the New Mexican. Thank you

Julia Rosa Lopez-Emslie
Professor Emerita
Santa Fe , NM
(505) 988-2782

[EXTERNAL] Re: SS Standards

Lee White <whitel@lovingschools.org>

Mon 11/1/2021 3:58 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I remain concerned about the proposed "new" social studies standards being implemented without a statewide review that affords every district and social studies staff member the opportunity to properly vet these proposed changes. For example, under the economics portion of the new standards, the only time scarcity is defined is in kindergarten. After completing an MBS, I'm not sure that most adults, much less teachers have a clear understanding of the term. I believe that a full year review is necessary to accurately vet the standards before a full implementation is warranted. I believe that the rulemaking process on this was not started in time to accomplish this. I am well aware of the committee work performed and the fact that the final version remains a mere skeleton of what the committee as a whole truly developed. Please reconsider my concerns and allow for a proper vetting process to occur. Thank you,

Lee White
Superintendent
Loving Municipal Schools
(575) 745-2010
(575) 745-2002 (Fax)
whitel@lovingschools.org (email)
Providing students the skills to thrive!
I'm All In!

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

WHITTET, ROBERT <rswhittet@gisd.k12.nm.us>

Mon 11/1/2021 4:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

New Mexico History -

- Removal of the land grants and the Santa Fe Ring and the subsequent Tierra Amarilla Land Grant struggle via Reies Lopez Tijerina is disconcerting. This is afront to Latino Civil Rights and cultural preservation.
- Which Individuals are being referenced in the early 20th Century?

US History -

- Seriously! 16 units to cover in 18 weeks. The entire US history in 1 year? And the depth stated in the Inquiry as well as SS standards will be impossible to accomplish. Even college course break this into 2 courses.
- How many classroom instructors are involved in the process?
- Is there any consideration of ELs and language acquisition for the pacing and rigor of the curriculum?

World History -

- Will this follow the AP pacing and curriculum?
- Will Individual "Topic" courses be created?
- Seems that the World is more open than the other courses.

Robert Whittet
Instructor
AVECHS

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies Standards Update Nov. 2021

Irene Epp <irene.epp@gmail.com>

Mon 11/1/2021 7:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To the NM PED,

I have read through the proposed revised Social Studies Standards, K through 12. I write to express my support for implementing the revised standards. By emphasizing inquiry, the standards push students to be actively involved in their own learning at every level. I see the revised SS standards as opening a door for our NM learners. They walk through that open door into a wider, richer expanse of their state's history. Each student can see themselves in this expanded view. The revised curriculum prepares each of them to participate in our democracy in ways that work for the benefit and safety of all. No one excluded, no one left behind.

Don't be afraid: implement.

Irene Epp
Santa Fe

--

"just when the caterpillar thought the world was over, it became a butterfly"

[EXTERNAL] Social Study Standard

Lin loftis <linloftis@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/1/2021 7:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

No do not update Social Studies Standards.

Thank you,
Linda Loftis

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Mary Ray Cate <maryray@sunlit-art.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 8:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To John Sena, Policy Division, NM Public Education Department:

I have read the proposed new standards for social studies from kindergarten through 12th grade and am very favorably impressed. If I had learned all that when I was in school I would have been much better educated at an early age. I realize that standards are, in a way, goals. It may be impossible for teachers to include all the valuable lessons listed in the proposed standards. But competent, motivated teachers could be inspired by these standards to teach what citizens need to know about history and how to use its lessons to improve our society. We should not be afraid of the truth. How can we learn from our mistakes if we do not study history?

I particularly like the emphasis on understanding and respecting people from different cultures and backgrounds. I was also impressed by the respect shown to children in the lower grades. They have the ability to grasp difficult and important concepts, and it is better to introduce those as early as possible.

My one question is about personal finance. Teaching students about bank accounts, credit cards, loans, and saving is important. Whether it should be included in social studies or as a separate class in the upper grades is unclear to me.

Thanks to all who worked to develop these excellent standards for New Mexico.

Mary Ray Cate, M.D.

Santa Fe, NM

<https://gcc02.safelinks.protection.outlook.com/?url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.sunlit-art.com%2F&data=04%7C01%7Crule.feedback%40state.nm.us%7Ceb1e277792384806695c08d99e0e8055%7C04aa6bf4d436426bfa404b7a70e60ff%7C0%7C0%7C637714607956440964%7CUnknown%7CTWFpbGZsb3d8eyJWljiMC4wLjAwMDAiLCJQIjoiV2luMzliLCJBTil6Ikl1haWwiLCJXVCi6Mn0%3D%7C3000&sdata=JrTTITpBLAjaEGfc1B%2Ftu5iB%2FYT%2Fc8uVJbuMeHNm23Q%3D&reserved=0>

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Public Comment

Danny Parker <dparker@bulldogs.org>

Tue 11/2/2021 9:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us> 1 attachments (219 KB)

Social Studies Letter.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Danny Parker, Assistant Superintendent Secondary Education

Artesia Public Schools
301 Bulldog Blvd.
Artesia, NM 88210
575-746-3585

The information contained in this message may be confidential and/or constitute a privileged document. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient, or an employee or agent responsible for delivering this message to the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution or copying of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify Artesia Public Schools immediately by replying to the message and deleting it from your computer. Thank you.

Date: October 29, 2021

To: Dr. Kurt Steinhaus, Secretary Designate
Dr. Gwen Perea-Warniment, Deputy Secretary of Teaching, Learning and Assessment
Ms. Katarina Sandoval, Deputy Secretary, Academic Engagement and Student Success
Dr. Vickie C. Bannerman, Deputy Secretary of Identity, Equity, and Transformation
Mr. John Sena, Director of Policy, Innovation, and Measurement

FROM: Danny Parker, Ed.M.

Thank you for this opportunity to provide comment on the Re-Development of the Social Studies Standards. I have no problem with a fair evaluation of the current standards to include recent events that may have roots in historical events. I also believe that fair discussion or scholarly debate which includes opinions from all perspectives should be included in this re-development. It is certainly what makes a person truly educated.

These re-developed standards do not do this. Often one side of the debate is presented as factual material to which there should be no debate. While all of us can be rightfully accused of this in our daily discourse, we cannot be guilty of this in our pedagogy and certainly not in setting the standards by which this teaching should occur. Only in a society that does not limit debates to a single viewpoint or ideology can we truly grow and pursue the “more perfect union” that every American in his time has dreamt.

I’m afraid that many of the standards lend themselves to being accused of being written to a singular political dogma. I am not accusing the writers of poor work or an attempt at covert indoctrination, but I do see evidence of allowing this singular political stance in the re-development of these standards:

- 5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.
 - There are very few standards that point to the greatness of the United States and its goals of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.
- 8.5. Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.
 - Maps are biased? Again, negative.
- 8.23. Synthesize historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action towards mending, healing, and transforming the future.
 - The future is already broken? Again, negative.
- 9-12.US.56. Evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States.
 - Again, the insinuation is that the United States is inefficient, unequitable, and unjust.

- 9-12.US.106. Analyze the impact of Red Scare ideology on social movements and activists in the United States.
 - “Red Scare” is used in three US History standards. This is a derogatory term against those who saw the Soviet Union as an expansionist, atheistic society who sought the destruction of the ideals of the United States. In each of the three, it is used as a negative comparison.

I also see that some could interpret these standards as valuing the individual and his or her identity more than the collective identity of our nation:

- K.22. Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.
 - As a Kindergarten standard, students should be encouraged to see how we are all the same without putting ourselves into group silos.
- 3.28. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups.
 - Is our identity really based on our culture and our groups?
- 6.15. Describe the many facets of student identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups.
 - “Self-identified affinity groups” in a social studies setting does not mean that we all enjoy knitting. This is a very dangerous concept that we are expected to teach 6th grade students.
- 7.28. Evaluate how society’s responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.
 - No mention of the great opportunities our students as Americans enjoy. There is a focus on the negative side: “How are you limited by your identity?”
- 8.12. Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally.
 - Again, not a single mention of the positive efforts of American’s who have worked to help those in this great nation. No other nation gives more to charity than Americans.
- 9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.
 - Negative connotation

Groups and group identities are mentioned 26 times in the re-developed standards. Not once is it mentioned that the motto of our great country is E Pluribus Unum – Out of many one. Not once does it mention that each generation in our country has always striven to be a “more perfect union” in this great experiment called the United States of America. Division seems to be a popular concept.

Many of these standards seem to be assignments instead. The actual definition of standard is “a level of quality or attainment.” I see that the writers of the standards were trying to be clever in helping the teachers with assignments that might satisfy the standard. However, by including the mode by which these standards are achieved, the standards now dictate how something is to be taught (these seem to be particularly prominent in the 7th and 8th standards):

- 7.47. Create a model of Mogollon and/or Pueblo art/architecture.
 - What is this standard attempting to address? Modeling? The standard should specifically address what about Mogollon and Pueblo art or architecture that is measurable.
- 8.7. Categorize and sequence significant people, places, events, and ideas in history using both chronological and conceptual graphic organizers.
 - Again, prescribing a graphic organizer should not be in the social studies standards. The important measurable standard should include the specific people, specific places, specific events, and specific ideas that need to be learned.
 - Doing a quick perusal of the “old” standards’ first page, it mentions names of people—Martin Luther King, Jr., George Washington, Ben Franklin, Cesar Chavez, Rosa Parks—none of whom are mentioned in the re-developed standards.
- 8.16. Create historical fiction texts that accurately portray historical people, places, events, and ideologies of the time in order to examine history from the perspective of the participants.
 - It is not a bad idea to create a historical fiction text, it just should not be part of a standard.
- 8.43. Use population, topographical, and political maps (as well as supporting texts) to generate questions about why the Proclamation Line of 1763 was established.
 - Is generating questions what is to be measured?
- 8.70. Develop a claim to illustrate how an event of the Sectionalism and Reform Era helps modern students understand current issues and events.
 - Who is the arbiter if the claim is correct or not?
- 8.83. Use an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.
 - An artistic medium or multimedia project should not be part of the social studies standards. It would be excellent if this were an addendum to the standard, but it should never be part of the standard.

Some standards are poorly written. These should be carefully read and proofed if they are to become codified. Here are some examples:

- 7.21. Select a province of New Mexico and research its distinguishing characteristics.
 - New Mexico has never had provinces. They were a Kingdom of Spain and a Province of Mexico.

- 7.74. Identify and summarize the relationship between specialization and interdependence.
 - This is a social studies standard? Specialization of what and interdependence from what?
- 7.98. Explain examples of cultural diffusion into and out of New Mexico from the past and present.
 - Diffusion into and out of New Mexico from the past (last week or the day after the Big Bang?).
- 8.19. Describe the many facets of their identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups.
 - I know the writers are being politically correct, but “their” is a pronoun requiring an antecedent. Could very easily be Describe the many facets of the student’s identity (including family history and culture) and how the student is connected to the collective history and culture of other people in the student’s self-identified affinity groups.
- 9-12.NMH.47. Demonstrate historical causation by using
- 9-12.NMH.48. multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the Civil Rights era in New Mexico
 - A typo? Should these two be one standard?
- 9-12.US.87. Examine the ways in which gender and sexuality norms changed and stayed the same in 1920s America.
 - Sexuality in the past is now a US History concept that needs to be taught?
- 9-12.US.122. Analyze the important policies and events that took place during the presidencies of John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon.
 - Important policies from two democratic presidents and one republican, but (see next)
- 9-12.US.123. Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people.
 - Conservatism had short- and long-term impacts.
- 9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.
 - History of guns and consequences of gun violence? Why would this be a standard? Understanding the gun control debate is important but singling out the consequences of gun violence is elevated to standard level. Some would wonder if we are teaching the consequences of gun violence we should include that all presidents are protected by guns.

I am including an attachment that was my working papers for this letter. It is not exhaustive even though it is eight pages long. Even though I have read through the standards several times, I have not been able to really study the standards like I should. There are too many. There are too many problems. There is too great a departure from the previous sets of standards (which, after re-reading for this letter, are really pretty good). We need more time to give the standards the study time that is needed. The writers had seven or eight months to deliver a product that has many grammatical and substance issues. That is not enough time.

Incidentally, as I was reading the “old” standards, I was thinking of one of the reasons given for re-developing the standards. I was told that the Martinez-Yazzie decision insisted that the PED develop culturally and linguistically responsive standards. Those standards are chock-full of CLR standards. They are very good, as a culturally diverse state should expect.

Reading through the standards, two standards really stood out to me. The first is this:

- 5.10. Explain how the principles of the Declaration of Independence became unifying ideas of American Democracy.

The Declaration of Independence is a unifying document. Our country needs unifying more now than ever. We need to know that as Americans we are striving for that “more perfect union” that many of our forefathers gave their lives for, that soldiers gave that last full measure and slipped the surly bonds of earth for this country. There is more that unites us than divides us. But these standards are very divisive.

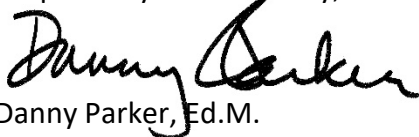

Second, this standard is convicting for me:

- 4.25. Demonstrate respectful inquiry about other people’s lives and experiences without judgment.

My question is this: Do these re-developed standards fulfil the spirit of this fourth-grade standard. By following these standards are we respectfully inquiring about our fellow Americans’ lives and experiences without judgment? Or in a measurement of mastery of this standard, would we fall short?

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Respectfully and Sincerely,

Danny Parker, Ed.M.
2202 W. Ray Avenue
Artesia, NM 88210

dannykparkergmail.com

Group identity – 26 standards

The concept of group identity is complex and potentially dangerous concept. Never do we want students to confine themselves to the boundaries of group. “I may be white, poor, dumb, bad at school, etc., but does that really define me. Am I only allowed to operate within the restrictions of this group.” In my time as a teacher and counselor, I have talked to kids who are called “coconuts”—brown on the outside but white on the inside. They are called this because they are perceived as acting inappropriately within their group. “Oreos” are black on the outside and white on the inside, today’s “Uncle Tom. “

When I see these standards for K-1-2-3, I see a danger for that these students with developmentally appropriate skills trying to determine their group, creating an opportunity for teachers or others to aid them in finding a group that may not be appropriate for them.

At any rate, these changes are divisive instead of uniting. We certainly want, as 5.27 states, children to be able to “express a positive view of [themselves] without making someone else feel badly.

K.22. Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.

K.23. Describe ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not.

K.25. Describe their family history, culture, and past to current contributions of people in their main identity groups.

2.28. Describe ways we are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.

3.27. Express a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly.

3.28. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups.

5.31. Explain how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.

5.30. Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups.

6.15. Describe the many facets of student identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups.

6.16. Identify their family and personal cultural identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

6.20. Identify how differences and similarities between diverse groups impact perspectives.

6.22. Explain how the treatment of people (past and present) shaped group identities and cultures.

7.11. Examine the relationship between stereotypes, bias, and group identity

7.28. Evaluate how society’s responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.

- 7.49. Describe the relationship between their (key figures in NM History) cultural heritage(s) and their personal identity/identities.
- 7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.
- 7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.
- 7.72. Discuss how individuals want to be perceived when their culture is on display and conclude how to address stereotypes.
- 7.93. Identify how stereotyping influences social perspectives about members of a group.
- 7.94. Develop a claim about the extent to which identity can be modified by personal choice or external forces.
- 7.103. Identify, explore, and describe the traditions, rites, and norms of the groups to which the student identifies as belonging; and explain how these traditions, rights, and norms may have changed over time.
- 8.12. Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally.
- 8.19. Describe the many facets of their identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups.
- 8.20. Identify facets of personal identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.
- 9-12.WH.35. Compare and contrast the various origins (including but not limited to: indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in World history.
- 9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.

Assignments -35

Many of these are stated as assignments and not standards. These are a one-time assignment. (This list is not exhaustive.)

- 7.47. Create a model of Mogollon and/or Pueblo art/architecture.
- 7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.
- 7.68. Compare and contrast the revolts and resistance movements under Spanish rule
- 7.72. Discuss how individuals want to be perceived when their culture is on display, and conclude how to address stereotypes.
- 7.92. Compare and contrast primary and secondary sources in conjunction with modern-era events to explore the impact of land ownership throughout New Mexico History.
- 7.94. Develop a claim about the extent to which identity can be modified by personal choice or external forces.
- 8.7. Categorize and sequence significant people, places, events, and ideas in history using both chronological and conceptual graphic organizers.

- 8.16. Create historical fiction texts that accurately portray historical people, places, events, and ideologies of the time in order to examine history from the perspective of the participants.
- 8.18. Conduct a research project to answer a self-generated question of historical significance, and apply problem-solving skills for historical research, to include: use of primary and secondary sources; sequencing, collecting, interpreting and applying information; gathering and validating materials that present a variety of perspectives; documenting sources in a structured, systematic way; communicating findings in a medium of the student's choice.
- 8.29. Draw a diagram or make a model to illustrate a non-text method an Indigenous person or group of Indigenous people have employed to record and preserve their history/ histories.
- 8.30. Support a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of Indigenous peoples of North America, and Indigenous Peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems.
- 8.34. Synthesize information from two or more different types of maps to support a claim about the global context of colonization.
- 8.35. Use a topographic or climate map to create a geographic argument about how economic specialization developed in the 13 colonies based on natural resource availability.
- 8.36. Identify immigration and emigration factors that motivated groups to move to and within North America through the lens of the 13 colonies and the movement of people there.
- 8.37. Engage in academic discussion around how the ideas and belief systems related to land and resource use impacted the experiences of Indigenous Peoples and colonizers.
- 8.43. Use population, topographical, and political maps (as well as supporting texts) to generate questions about why the Proclamation Line of 1763 was established.
- 8.46. Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate an instructor-generated claim about the significance of the 7 Years' War (French and Indian War).
- 8.49. Develop research questions about the role of religion in the 13 colonies and its impact on nascent American identity (identidad Estadounidense); and hypothesize how gender roles were impacted by the role of religion in the 13 colonies.
- 8.55. Cite specific examples of precedents established in the Early Republic that impact American lives today.
- 8.58. Analyze a variety of art media to create an argument about the development of American national identity.
- 8.68. Use text evidence to support a claim about how conflicts over slavery led the North and South to war.
- 8.69. Use primary and secondary sources to examine how enslaved people adapted within and resisted their captivity.
- 8.70. Develop a claim to illustrate how an event of the Sectionalism and Reform Era helps modern students understand current issues and events.
- 8.72. Summarize a significant economic warfare initiative of the Civil War through creative expression

- 8.74. Generate research questions, brainstorm sources, and gather evidence to evaluate a claim about the significance of the Battle of Glorieta Pass in the Western Campaign of the American Civil War (Guerra Civil Estadounidense).
- 8.76. Identify and correct misconceptions about the Emancipation Proclamation.
- 8.80. Describe why different people may have different perspectives of the same historical event; multiple interpretations should be considered in order to avoid historical linearity and inevitability.
- 8.83. Use an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.
- 8.90. Examine history from the perspective of the participants by presenting an original historical fiction piece to profile an immigrant's experience, including the impact of anti-immigrant policies
- 9-12.WH.35. Compare and contrast the various origins (including but not limited to: indigenous, forced, voluntary) of identity groups in World history.
- 9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.
- 9-12.WH.37. Examine the role colonization, assimilation, and/or syncretism plays in the evolution of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.
- 9-12.NMH.18. Demonstrate knowledge of their family history and cultural background and can describe how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.
- 9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.
- 9-12.US.134. Examine anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States over time and the experiences of diverse immigrant groups past and present. (Many would argue this to be an anti-immigrant policy. They would say that we need to study those who want open borders.)
- 9-12.US.135. Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. (Seems to purposely written to bash America.)

Poorly written – 23

These standards have some conceptual, grammatical, or typographical errors and should be rewritten.

- 7.21. Select a province of New Mexico and research its distinguishing characteristics.
- 7.74. Identify and summarize the relationship between specialization and interdependence.
- 7.76. Investigate the use of trade routes and systems to analyze the economic impact they had on New Mexico as well as those who traded with New Mexicans. Who is they?
- 7.78. Analyze primary and secondary (perhaps sources) to explain what impact Mexican Independence had on (the area) that would become) New Mexico.
- 7.98. Explain examples of cultural diffusion into and out of New Mexico from the past and present.

- 8.5. Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.
- 8.19. Describe the many facets of their identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups. Who is they?
- 8.23. Synthesize historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action towards mending, healing, and transforming the future. Is the future broken?
- 8.49. Develop research questions about the role of religion in the 13 colonies and its impact on nascent American identity (identidad Estadounidense); and hypothesize how gender roles were impacted by the role of religion in the 13 colonies.
- 8.66. Describe immigrant and emigrant groups according to gender composition and develop a claim regarding the impact that gender (dis)proportionality had on immigrant/emigrant community's culture.
- 9-12.Civ.38. Evaluate how fundamental American principles have been interpreted overtime and how they currently shape policy debates.
- 9-12.Econ.27. Evaluate the impact of environmental externalities on New Mexican communities. Was previously "environmental racism". Still not sure what externalities is.
- 9-12.NMH.27. Contextualize the struggles toward statehood by including the resistance of the Hispanic population to newcomers and the participation of all ethnic populations in the Spanish American war, prior to becoming a state of the USA. (no comma needed)
- 9-12.NMH.47. Demonstrate historical causation by using
- 9-12.NMH.48. multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the Civil Rights era in New Mexico (47 and 48 should be together????)
- 9-12.US.25. Determine the characteristics of a revolution and evaluate the American Revolution as compared to the French and Haitian Revolutions. (Why just French and Haitian Revolutions— why would they alone be in the standard?)
- 9-12.US.56. Evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States. (so it's not efficient, equitable, and just?)
- 9-12.US.69. Examine the ethics of the suppression of civil liberties during times of conflict and war, past and present. (provide examples)
- 9-12.US.83. Compare and contrast the conflict between traditionalism and modernity during this period with examples around the world such as Weimar Germany. (Poorly written – what is the concept here? Authoritarianism? Isolationism? Extraction?)
- 9-12.US.87. Examine the ways in which gender and sexuality norms changed and stayed the same in 1920s America. (not sure sexuality is appropriate)
- 9-12.US.95. Analyze the similarities, differences, and connections between the racial social order in both the United States and Germany during this period. (why the specific comparison to Germany?)
- 9-12.US.106. Analyze the impact of Red Scare ideology on social movements and activists in the United States. (Red Scare is a derogatory term for those who believed the Soviets when they said their goal was to spread communism.) I believe that 9-12.US.108 is sufficient.

- 9-12.US.113. Compare and contrast the Communist Red Scare with the Lavender Scare. (Complete indoctrination)
- 9-12.US.116. Examine the evolution of McCarthyism from the Red Scare to COINTELPRO.
- 9-12.US.123. Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people. (connotes only negative impacts) Compare to 9-12.US.122. Analyze the important policies and events that took place during the presidencies of John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon.

CRT – 41

Many of these standards lend themselves to criticism by having a connection to tenets of Critical Race Theory. This list is not exhaustive.

- 5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.
- 5.31. Explain how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.
- 6.22. Explain how the treatment of people (past and present) shaped group identities and cultures.
- 7.28. Evaluate how society's responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.
- 7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.
- 7.82. Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impacts of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups.
- 8.12. Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally.
- 8.21. Describe ways in which stereotyping can be a barrier to acting as an ally and engaging in positive civic behaviors in classrooms, schools, and the broader community.
- 8.23. Synthesize historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action towards mending, healing, and transforming the future.
- 8.78. Discuss the impact of significant legislation and judicial precedents in formally perpetuating systemic oppression during the Reconstruction Era.
- 8.79. Evaluate the impact of individuals and reform movements on the struggle for greater civil rights and liberties throughout early U.S. history.
- 8.80. Describe why different people may have different perspectives of the same historical event; multiple interpretations should be considered in order to avoid historical linearity and inevitability.
- 8.81. Describe how the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacist organizations in the United States arose with the intention of maintaining the oppression of specific groups through informal institutions.

9-12.Civ.17. Evaluate multiple sources and cite evidence investigating the relationships between equality, equity, justice, freedom, and order in American constitutional democracy.

9-12.Civ.40. Analyze historic inequalities and evaluate proposed solutions to correct them.

9-12.Econ.24. Critique inequalities that exist in economic systems.

9-12.Econ.48 – 175 are missing...

9-12.NMH.18. Demonstrate knowledge of their family history and cultural background and can describe how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.

9-12.NMH.26. Determine the role of race and racism in the acts of land redistribution during the territorial period.

9-12.US.14. Describe the evolution and short and long-term consequences of racialized labor and caste systems such as encomienda and slavery in Spanish and Portuguese America.

9-12.US.27. Evaluate the social, political, and economic causes and effects of the system of racialized slavery and caste in the United States.

9-12.US.28. Examine diverse stories of adaptation and resistance to systems of oppression including colonialism and slavery.

9-12.US.42. Analyze the persistence of the “Lost Cause of the Confederacy” narrative and its long term effects.

9-12.US.53. Identify the ways in which gender and sexuality were changing and unchanged during the 19th century.

9-12.US.69. Examine the ethics of the suppression of civil liberties during times of conflict and war, past and present.

9-12.US.95. Analyze the similarities, differences, and connections between the racial social order in both the United States and Germany during this period.

9-12.US.104. Analyze state-sponsored persecution and “othering” including anti-Semitism and homophobia

9-12.US.118. Research and analyze resistance to integration in white communities, protests to end segregation, and Supreme Court decisions on civil rights.

9-12.US.129. Explore the movement against police brutality.

9-12.US.130. Examine the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes.

9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.

9-12.US.135. Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans.

9-12.US.136. Evaluate the effects of the representation of diverse people in the US government including race, gender, sexual orientation, and disability.

9-12.WH.34. Analyze the complex relationship between dominant cultures and minority groups throughout world history, including but not limited to: constructions of race, ethnicity, gender, nationality, class and/or religion, reactions, and long-term effects of oppression.

9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.

9-12.ECI.13. Recognize and value my group identities without perceiving or treating others as inferior.

9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.

9-12.ECI.19. Examine the role assimilation plays in the loss of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

9-12.ECI.22. Evaluate the role of racial social constructs in the structures and functions of a 21st Century American society.

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Curriculum Feedback

Janalee Martinez <janaleebliss@me.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 9:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hell NM PED,

I have a 13-year daughter in 8th grade attending Farmington Municipal Schools. Her entire school experience has been plagued with negativity. Beginning with common core, being told and made to feel stupid for years and now masks and mandates. I have been advocating for her all along the way and I do not intend to stop now. Now more than ever I feel I must stand up. Stand against critical race theory, gender studies and the sexualization of our kids.

It is hard enough being a teenager, but when you add lockdowns, isolation and a year of chaos and mandates, next comes suicidal thoughts, self-harm, and the explosion of underage drug and alcohol abuse. I know you are thinking that is nothing new, teens have been doing that for years. You're right, and that only emphasizes my point even more. Everything that has happened has made that problem worse. We have a mental health crisis in our children right now and no-one is addressing that issue. But rather making it worse!

If the schools are to implement any form of CTR it will be like putting a ticking time bomb into the schools. It will create such division and hate between the kids. It will teach them to hate themselves (no matter their skin color) and hate their country. It will teach them their parents don't know anything and cannot be trusted. In North Carolina it even teaches them how to change their gender without their parent's knowledge. In Virginia, allowing transgenders students to enter the bathroom of their choice has led to the rape of two female students in school bathrooms. I for one am not willing to wait until that comes to New Mexico. I feel fortunate that we are a little slow here and it has not been fully embedded yet. But it is here, and we know it. The CLR scorecard that was implemented this year is the beginning. Next is the social studies curriculum. Once you know the language it is easy to see.

I know there are teachers and board members that agree with the philosophy. And I want to believe it comes from a good place and they aren't actually trying to do harm. But it is doing harm across this country. All you have to do is turn on the news to see that. If you are one of those people, please take a deeper look and try to see what it is we are opposed to. Try to see the other side.

Below I have laid out exactly how CRT has been imbedded into the new social studies curriculum. If this is passed, I will remove my student from New Mexico schools.

Regards,
Janalee Martinez

What is CRT?

Critical race theory is an academic concept that is more than 40 years old. The core idea is that race is a social construct, and that racism is not merely the product of individual bias or prejudice, but also something embedded in legal systems and policies.

Educational text that supports CRT is used by:

- Crafting narratives about history that are not grounded in facts
 - o 1619 project - American revolution was fought to primarily to preserve slavery
- Bring ideology and political activism to the forefront of education
- Indoctrination
- Separating people into groups
- Comprehensive sex-ed
- Teaching Equity vs equality

How to identify CRT in the classroom (key words in the curriculum)

- Culturally responsive teaching
- Equity, diversity, and inclusion
- Cultural / multi-cultural competence
- Implicit / unconscious / internalized bias
- Social justice
- Systemic / structural / institutional racism or oppression
- Micro - aggression's
- Anti-racism
- White privilege / fragility / supremacy / culture / prejudice
- Power Structures or racial hierarchies
- Disparate outcomes or inequity
- Identity
- Social constructs
- Reparation / liberation
- Ethnocentricity

NMPEd guiding principles - page 9 of NMPEd Social Studies proposed plan - Key word directly linked to CRT

- Incorporating major historical themes such as power, class conflict, struggle, geopolitical impact, social justice, equity, and diversity
- Ensuring divergence from a singular Eurocentric cultural script ensuring equitable inclusion of accurate historical stories reflecting Indigenous, Hispano /Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizaro, African American and other cultural perspectives
- Identifying tools to share authentic stories including the study of relationship between power and oppression
- Supporting the development of a strong critical historical consciousness representative of many perspectives while allowing students to maintain his/her/their own cultural integrity while learning about others
- Empowering students to develop pride in his/her/their identity, history, culture, region by incorporating a community-based approach while preparing students to be a part of a global environment
- Utilizing historical events from a future focused orientation
- Developing a future focused orientation that allows students to be critical thinkers in considering historical context in mending, healing, and transforming future interactions.

Examples from NM PED Standards (exact text)

- Kindergarten
 - o Identify how individuals are similar and different
- First Grade
 - o Investigate significant events, people, and observances in history, and discuss their effects on local and national communities
- Second Grade
 - o Demonstrate respect for the feelings of people who are similar and different from me
- Third Grade
 - o Express a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups
- Fourth Grade
 - o Demonstrate respectful inquiry about other people's lives and experiences without judgment.
- Fifth Grade
 - o Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups.
- Sixth Grade

- Explain how the treatment of people (past and present) shaped group identities and cultures.
- Seventh Grade
 - Evaluate how society's responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.
- Eighth Grade
 - Develop research questions about the role of religion in the 13 colonies and its impact on nascent American identity (identidad Estadounidense); and hypothesize how gender roles were impacted by the role of religion in the 13 colonies.
- HS Civics
 - Evaluate multiple sources and cite evidence investigating the relationships between equality, equity, justice, freedom, and order in American constitutional democracy.
- HS NM History
 - Demonstrate knowledge of their family history and cultural background and can describe how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.
- HS World History
 - Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people.
 - Examine the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes.
 - Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans.
 - Evaluate the effects of the representation of diverse people in the US government including race, gender, sexual orientation, and disability.

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Elaine Beecher <esheartstrings@msn.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 9:36 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr. Steinhaus and PED,

It has been brought to my attention that you are reviewing materials that would introduce the CRT to our children in New Mexico.

It would be a gross error on your part to allow this in our school system. For years, the battle of racism has been fought for the Hispanic and Black American folks and it would be such a double standard to now tell our children that it is okay to apply reverse discrimination to whites. Let me remind you that the Constitution of the United States says that we are all created equal. Last I checked we are still a free nation, and we still abide under the constitution.

CRT is wrong for New Mexico's children and wrong that you would expect teachers to indoctrinate children in the classroom with such discrimination. We tell our kids that it's wrong to bully and call names but yet you want to tell them it's okay to discriminate. What message are you sending them? CRT presents an opposite message then what our constitution states and is confusing on many fronts.

It's time you get some guts and quit bowing to politics and money, our kids deserve better.

Sincerely,

Elaine Beecher

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Social Studies Standards--Rule Making

Clough, Curtis <cclough@bobcat.net>

Tue 11/2/2021 9:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>Cc: Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see attached the feedback provided by Hagerman Municipal Schools on the proposed Social Studies Standards. Feel free to reach out if you have any questions or comments.

Thanks.

--

Curtis M. Clough

Superintendent

Hagerman Municipal Schools

Phone: (575) 752-3254Physical Address:

406 North Cambridge Avenue

Hagerman, NM 88232

Mailing Address:

PO Drawer B

Hagerman, NM 88232

Confidentiality Notice: This e-mail, including all attachments is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message.

Memo

To: John Sena, NMPED

From: Curtis M. Clough, Superintendent
Hagerman Municipal Schools

cc: Gwen Wanniment, NMPED

Date: November 1, 2021

Re: Social Studies Standards Adoption/Rules Hearing

Dear Esteemed Colleagues,

Hagerman Municipal Schools (HMS) is asking consideration to be given to delaying the adoption and implementation of the proposed K-12 Social Studies standards that are before the hearing today so proper time can be invested by districts, especially small, rural districts such as Hagerman, so they can be fully vetted and analyzed of the impact on the instruction that will occur as well as gaining community stakeholder involvement to educate and review how the new standards will impact our community and teaching practices. HMS is not against the teaching of standards, but the full fidelity of the implementation and how we, as a district, can best serve our students in preparing them for today's role in society as upstanding, caring individuals that have the necessary knowledge, skills and abilities to be a productive citizen in our community and ever-changing world.

As the Superintendent, I convened a cadre of teachers to assist in the review and have gathered input from my Board and staff. Further, I desire to engage my community in these discussions as a new Superintendent, but with the rapidness of the rules hearing and pace for implementation, this cannot be done in a reasonable manner to educate and work with our parents and community on the importance of citizenship and responsibilities of being a student and community member for their children.

Further, HMS would like to offer some feedback and input on the standards for consideration in the process. By no means is this a comprehensive review of all standards, but a survey of some key standards that were reviewed by my teaching staff in a time where, with COVID, we are all stressed and doing our best to meet the needs of our students and community. This has been an added stressor in this important time in education because of the political hot topics that seem to be stemming from this process. HMS again stresses that we are not against the standards but would like to have local flexibility that meets the needs of our schools and community in alignment with the standards. Several concerns were noted that the standards, in some areas, especially in the Inquiry strand, are immeasurable and gathering of meaningful data to ensure student understanding is vague and almost impossible based on the interpretation of a standard by a given teacher. The concern is that a more, experienced teacher or a new teacher may have very different ideas on how to assess and creates ambiguity in analyzing the data for understanding and comprehension. Are we analyzing the material and knowledge gained or the skills? Skills are a very important part of Social Studies Education, such as analysis and critical thinking, so is skill development more important or the knowledge or understanding of the content provided? A balance needs to be created based on age-appropriateness of the knowledge gains and skills to perform so a natural progression of understanding and individual thought can be harvested in this generation of students so growth and understanding of key concepts can occur.

Additionally, my staff would like to make the following recommendations for consideration based on their analysis so that our students are prepared in all areas of K-12 Social Studies:

K-2 Social Studies Standards

1. Consideration needs to be given to one specific New Mexico-related standard to start the process of understanding the importance of New Mexico heritage and culture.
2. The Inquiry Standards seem repetitive and should be done naturally in a classroom with proper training and observation.
3. The inclusion of buzz words for identity become problematic as the standard is very broad and can be interpreted in a negative way by teachers that can directly impact the understanding of our young students—teaching inclusivity and understanding at this age may be more appropriate.

3-5 Social Studies Standards

1. First and foremost, Inquiry 22-26 is what 5th grade students need. Inquiries include being able to identify concepts and the use of supporting questions for a better understanding. Students would be able to draw information from several points and sources to come up with a definite answer. In 5.5, this concept needs to be perpetuated throughout all age-appropriate levels that states that students are able to construct responses that are supported by reasoning and are able to back up their answer with evidence. This is a core skill all students need, whether in Social Studies or life.
2. In 5.29, civic issues can include all economical, religious and political problems. This can include the gap between the rich and the poor, environmental issues, politically encouraged riots, discrimination towards “different types of people.” I feel that this needs to be narrowed down to specific topics. Are specific events under consideration for inclusion in this or do we have local authority determine what is appropriate? Some topics come with a very heavy opinion of all involved in the conversation and opinions and beliefs should not be forced on another, or to make anyone feel uncomfortable weather teaching or learning. Parents have a responsibility in this and how does a school stay politically neutral with all the beliefs that are currently in our society? This places teachers in difficult situations to teach perspectives that may be unpopular, even if no political overtone is used in the process.

3. In 5.31, the use of “groups of people” is too broad and can specific examples be given so that teachers have a direction to go.
4. In Theme 2: 4.11 and 4.12, those two standards work well together with the identification of key factors and groups to help create the culture of New Mexico. Can specific examples of historical events or people be added to frame this as those two standards could be large content areas that need a narrower focus?
5. In Theme 5; 3.27, the point needs to be stressed that expressing a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly.
6. In Theme 5: 3.28, compare and contrast the cultural identity with other people and groups needs to be more specific as to the people and groups—give examples.

SECONDARY STANDARDS

In the analysis of the standards, some general trends and comments became apparent to consider as part of the process that we would like to make you aware:

1. More is not better, Unmeasurable = Unnecessary.
2. Instead of broadening the standards to accommodate current political, social, and economic players and separate the learners into factions, narrow the focus in order to incorporate the application of the facts and provable historical data, so that students can see the current reality and determine their own response to this question, "Are we learning from our history to do better in and for the future?"
3. A more thorough review of the standards needs to incur because of the massive increase in numbers—how do we incorporate these new standards in a course/courses that is already struggling to meet the demand during the school year.
4. Is consideration being given to how these transition to the Higher Education realm for those students going onto college?
5. Consideration needs to be given of the collapse of the standards into the following areas:
 - a. cognitive and communicative functioning at a reasonable expectation of student potential.
 - b. evidence of student competence and self-confidence with the discipline of the social sciences
 - c. student respect for self, others, and the environment.
 - d. student respect for reasonable authority, responsibility, and community.
 - e. student acquisition of a working knowledge of the US Constitution and other significant democratic documents.
 - f. student demonstration of effective interpersonal skills at a functional level.
 - g. student demonstration of personal responsibility for success.
 - h. student demonstration of ability to set and manage reasonable and productive adult personal success in life.
 - i. student demonstration of reasonable decision-making.
 - j. student demonstration of respect for the environment and the economy.
6. In "Ethnic Cultural Identity Studies" (Diversity and Identity), consideration needs to be given diversity instructional practices. In all the college courses and professional development opportunities that we have been a part of, regarding cultural diversity techniques, these types of concepts were never incorporated.

7. So many of the standards are so broad in their wording that opportunities could be left open for some educators to expose the students to unsuitable information, whether intentionally or unintentionally.
8. Part of any effective History/Social Science class should include inquiry into what happened, why it happened, and are there parallels to what has happened in the past or what is currently happening. Can specific events or ideas be placed in the standards to place a focus on inquiry, an essential skill all students need?
9. Why is New Mexico's role in the Manhattan Project and involvement in the nuclear age not incorporated in the standards? This is important to the economic growth and historical significance of our state in the energy industry, not only locally but worldwide, so this needs to be explored and taught to our students.
10. The standards include many buzz words and jargon that have different interpretations by different groups and people. How is this to be addressed in our classrooms without politics interfering in conversations or trying to create an inclusive environment in our classrooms? Please be specific on the language and expectations so politics does not interfere with the education of our children.
11. Place an emphasis on identifying solutions that work, instead of creating an environment of exclusivity and division. Our children may be the solution to our current problems when inclusivity and expectations are set.
12. Why are Oilfield and Wind Energy ignored to an extreme extent?

Again, I am going to extoll that HMS is committed to teaching standards with full fidelity and consideration needs to be given to the impact on our schools, especially small, rural communities, that lack resources and time to do a thorough examination in this short period of time. Going through this process has been a time drain on a small teaching staff that is already stressed with the all the COVID activities and reporting, but I commend them for their commitment because they see the importance of the process and voicing our recommendations and concerns alike. This is an important decision that not only impacts our current students but generations to come. Time needs to be expanded for consideration of these standards. Also, if we are going to assess these in the future, what would that assessment look like with so much of inquiry based on personal views and understanding. Are we assessing the skills or the content knowledge?

Thank you in advance for your time and thoughtful consideration of our feedback from HMS. As a district, we want to be part of the solution and not the problem. This is why our team is wanting the extension so we can gather the necessary input and feedback that can be a positive difference in student lives, not destructive that seems to be occurring in today's political climate and environment. Politics should not interfere with a student's education and we all should be committed to providing the best learning opportunities to all our students.

Respectfully submitted,

Curtis M. Clough
Superintendent
Hagerman Municipal Schools

[EXTERNAL] Reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11

Mary Wilhoit <mlwilhoit72@yahoo.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 10:01 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: m.colgan@laschools.net <m.colgan@laschools.net>; e.ben-naim@laschools.net <e.ben-naim@laschools.net>; c.bernstein@laschools.net <c.bernstein@laschools.net>; s.boerigter@laschools.net <s.boerigter@laschools.net>; e.green@laschools.net <e.green@laschools.net>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

(Actual letter is attached)

Dear Mr. Sena,

My name is Mary Wilhoit, and I'm a constituent from Los Alamos, NM.

I am writing to urge you to reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 as they promote and may instill assumptions about race and inequality as the basis for America in our students. This progressive/liberal bias is not new. It stems from an ideology of Critical Race Theory (CRT). Critical race theory is destructive and rejects the fundamental ideas on which our constitutional republic is based. Call it by whatever name you may – SEL, Critical Theory, Culturally Responsive Teaching, etc. -- applying the philosophy would violate a multitude of American civil rights laws by treating people differently according to race. It is dishonest to use the original / evolving definitions and intent to hide the use of racism in teaching a modified version of CRT to school children. It should not be elevated in American classrooms or in our military.

Specifically, I urge Michelle Lujan-Grisham's NMPED to promote knowledge of civics, not social action, and diversity training. Many schools around the country are spending significant amounts of money on so-called anti-bias training. Educators should focus on teaching how our government functions, the importance of constitutional rights and the equal treatment under the law, as well as historical facts and content that prepare students for life after school.

Here are a few of the most egregious new standards:

1. In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies, a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces “offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity.” This standard assumes that there are only 2 choices. 6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)

2. Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continued focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This has the purpose of dividing people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.
3. There are also numerous examples where a teacher can impose the notion of “justice and fairness,” unequal power relations, “past and current injustices,” although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also pejorative as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)
4. Within High School U.S. History, numerous references, or preoccupation with slavery during the formation of America which echoes both CRT and the 1619 Project that slavery/racism is the foundation of American society. 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(b) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(d) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(e) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(k) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(g) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(h)
5. Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” This standard assumes that there is such a system in the US, and it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)
6. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. Embedded in this standard is the assumption that America and its founding principles are unjust and inequitable to various minority groups. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)
7. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to understand how gender and sexuality norms were changing during Reconstruction and 1920s, as well as are required to examine the activities the LBGTQIA+ community during a recent 40-year period. Why is this a standard rather than an option? This standard imposes a liberal bias on students. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(m) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(z) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(ll)
8. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)
9. In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. This standard pits race against race and stresses racial disparity and inequality. Again, see the socialist class v. class assumption herein. 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)
10. Within High school U.S. History, students must examine the short-and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America. Why? 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)

11. In the 7th Grade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction, and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. How about the benefits of the occupation such as western civilization? 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)

12. Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. This implies an ignorance of true police statistics. How about at least contrasting it to the movement back the blue? 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)

Government funded bias has no place in our classrooms, our military, or in our country. We emphatically reject the overall progressive – even socialist- bias that these standards are intended to impose on our children and grandchildren.

I support the protest on these proposed standards in Santa Fe, Friday, November 12th from 1- 3 pm in Mabry Hall of the Jerry Apodaca Building, 300 Don Gaspar, in downtown Santa Fe.

Thank you for your time and have a great day.

Sincerely,

--

Mary

Mary Wilhoit
2138A 41st St
Los Alamos, NM 87544
858-922-9070 c

CC: Los Alamos School Board

November 2, 2021

John Sena,
Policy Division,
New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED),
300 Don Gaspar Avenue,
Room 121,
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena,

RE: Reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11

My name is Mary Wilhoit, and I'm a constituent from Los Alamos, NM.

I am writing to urge you to reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 as they promote and may instill assumptions about race and inequality as the basis for America in our students. This progressive/liberal bias is not new. It stems from an ideology of Critical Race Theory (CRT). Critical race theory is destructive and rejects the fundamental ideas on which our constitutional republic is based. Call it by whatever name you may – SEL, Critical Theory, Culturally Responsive Teaching, etc. -- applying the philosophy would violate a multitude of American civil rights laws by treating people differently according to race. It is dishonest to use the original / evolving definitions and intent to hide the use of racism in teaching a modified version of CRT to school children. It should not be elevated in American classrooms or in our military.

Specifically, I urge Michelle Lujan-Grisham's NMPED to promote knowledge of civics, not social action, and diversity training. Many schools around the country are spending significant amounts of money on so-called anti-bias training. Educators should focus on teaching how our government functions, the importance of constitutional rights and the equal treatment under the law, as well as historical facts and content that prepare students for life after school.

Here are a few of the most egregious new standards:

1. In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies, a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces “offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity.” This standard assumes that there are only 2 choices. 6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)

2. Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continued focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This has the purpose of dividing people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.

3. There are also numerous examples where a teacher can impose the notion of “justice and fairness,” unequal power relations, “past and current injustices,” although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also pejorative as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)

4. Within High School U.S. History, numerous references, or preoccupation with slavery during the formation of America which echoes both CRT and the 1619 Project that slavery/racism is the foundation of American society. 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(b) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(d) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(e) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(k) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(g) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(h)

5. Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” This standard assumes that there is such a system in the US, and it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)

6. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. Embedded in this standard is the assumption that America and its founding principles are unjust and inequitable to various minority groups. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)

7. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to understand how gender and sexuality norms were changing during Reconstruction and 1920s, as well as are required to examine the activities the LBGTQIA+ community during a recent 40-year period. Why is this a standard rather than an option? This standard imposes a liberal bias on students. 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(m) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(z) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(ll)

8. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)

9. In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. This standard pits race against race and stresses racial disparity and inequality. Again, see the socialist class v. class assumption herein. 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)

10. Within High school U.S. History, students must examine the short-and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America. Why? 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)

11. In the 7th Grade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction, and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. How about the benefits of the occupation such as western civilization? 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)

12. Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. This implies an ignorance of true police statistics. How about at least contrasting it to the movement back the blue? 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)

Government funded bias has no place in our classrooms, our military, or in our country. We emphatically reject the overall progressive – even socialist- bias that these standards are intended to impose on our children and grandchildren.

I support the protest on these proposed standards in Santa Fe, Friday, November 12th from 1- 3 pm in Mabry Hall of the Jerry Apodaca Building, 300 Don Gaspar, in downtown Santa Fe.

Thank you for your time and have a great day.

Sincerely,
Mary Wilhoit
2138A 41st Street, Los Alamos, NM 87544
mlwilhoit72@yahoo.com
858-922-9070

CC: Los Alamos School Board

[EXTERNAL] World History

Leslie Diane Clark <l.clark@laschools.net>

Tue 11/2/2021 11:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Leslie Diane Clark <l.clark@laschools.net>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I find it frustrating that there are only skills standards for World History, but no content standards. It is the only history curriculum which lacks them.

Transitioning to new, updated, culturally relevant standards, although necessary, is hard enough without having to write our own content standards in addition.

--

Warm regards,

Leslie Clark

World History 9

 Topper Freshman Academy

This email has been sent from a verified laschools.net user.

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on proposed Standards for NMPED

Suzanne Rasic <suzannerasic@gmail.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 12:05 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am 100% in SUPPORT of the draft. All these loonies screaming about CRT are just trying to live in an alternate reality. Thank you so much for teaching our children about what really happened in this great state of ours. I am a proud New Mexican of Spanish heritage and think that it is of the utmost importance to teach our children about the right and wrong things our ancestors did. The only way not to repeat history is to learn it, and that the only way to learn it is to critically examine ALL of it.

Thank you for all you are doing for our state!

Suzanne Montoya Stevens Rasic
517 Armijo St, Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL]

Kendra Montanari <kendra4square@gmail.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 1:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please accept this public comment for the repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. I am in full support of this proposed change to incorporate the concepts of Tribal Sovereignty and Social Justice into Social Studies curriculum. These concepts are integral both to an understanding of our history, and how it shapes our future. This is true across all disciplines and professions. As a small example, in my profession as a transportation planner, these topics are at the forefront of good planning. Our governing bodies are frequently discussing the importance of allocating much needed transportation dollars to marginalized and tribal areas, and how targeted investments can positively influence traditionally underserved communities. These types of conversations span across many fields including energy, housing, the environment and so forth. For our children to emerge from 12 years of education without a basic understanding of historic racial and social injustices is to hinder their ability as adult citizens to take a part in making the world a more inclusive and just place.

Thank you,
Kendra Montanari

[EXTERNAL] SOCIAL STUDIES STANDARDS

Susan Haase <haasesusan@gmail.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 2:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I support the new standards and applaud the work of those who drafted them. The standards are age appropriate and will foster an appreciation of the diverse and rich history of our great country and the many cultures which have contributed to it. Well done.

Susan Haase

Sent from Mail for Windows 10

Susan Haase

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Tiffany Lee <tslee@unm.edu>

Tue 11/2/2021 3:04 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I am writing to share my support of the changes to the Social Studies standards. The inclusion of (5) ethnic, cultural, and identity standards, and (6) inquiry standards support students' learning of our diverse heritage and multiple identities of our people in NM and beyond. Not only are students learning about this diversity, the standards are humanizing this difference in people's lived experiences. They also teach our students to be critical thinkers, readers, and writers. In this way, our students will be motivated to become change agents and positively transform their communities. The challenges to the inclusion of this form of teaching and often to what is misunderstood as Critical Race theory do not have merit nor are they grounded in research that shows the positive results of teaching for social transformation and justice. Additionally, the state of New Mexico is obligated to address the conditions under which the Yazzie and Martinez lawsuit was enacted. These standards make progress as a remedy for addressing the rulings in that case.

Thank you

Tiffany Lee

Tiffany S. Lee, Ph.D. (Diné & Lakota)
Dibé Łizhini - Naałání
Chair & Professor
Native American Studies
College of Arts & Sciences
University of New Mexico

NAS.UNM.EDUFB, IG, & Twitter: @NATVUNM

Founded in 1889, the University of New Mexico sits on the traditional homelands of the Pueblo of Sandia. The original peoples of New Mexico – Pueblo, Navajo, and Apache – since time immemorial, have deep connections to the land and have made significant contributions to the broader community statewide. We honor the land itself and those who remain stewards of this land throughout the generations and also acknowledge our committed relationship to Indigenous peoples. We gratefully recognize our history.

[EXTERNAL] crt in public schools

glenn mattern <axerhand1976@live.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 4:06 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

why in the world would you thing having crt in the public school system is a good idea??? you really think teaching little kids oral and anal sex is a good idea??? we have all heard about the book called " Lawn Boy" where 2 4th graders have oral sex and more!!! how perverted you people must be to think that is right! To tell young white kids they are the problem is disgusting.. i bet you don't tell the little Japanese kids they are responsible for pearl harbor ??? also did you know that Sidwell Friends School in D.C does not teach their students CRT, that's right the school where all the rich people including president obama's kids go to, nope they teach usefull stuff to their students!!!

[EXTERNAL] The New Social Studies Standards

Erin Stevens <erinstevens308@gmail.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 6:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The new incoming social studies grade 1st-3rd repeats identifying how individuals, self identities, families, groups, cultures are different; and to examine and identify cultural differences. I understand there are some niceties in there like how they are similar and without making someone feel bad but it is undeniable that the purpose is to set the starting blocks of every student to view social studies through a racial lens. This sounds innocent at first however it is the basis of CRT and there are better ways to view social studies than segregation and what follows in grades 4th through 8th defines it as CRT and is destructive to children.

In grades 2nd and 3rd the new social studies requires children to be social activists in parts of the informed action. I have never been asked if I want my child to be a social activist and in no way should this be a requirement for school.

Right after segregating and self-identifying children into their "groups", 4th grade then goes right into interactions between Indigenous people and European settlers. This should be included as it is an important part of history to learn about Roanoke and how the first Virginia settlers were massacred and starved out. It is "race against race". After 3 years of having children internalize their culture I don't believe it is "culturally" accurate or appropriate to only focus on race against race and yet leave out just as important "cultural" facts of the warring tribes like the Cheyenne conquering land of the Kiowas and the Lakota Sioux conquering land of the Cheyene. In 6th grade children are to get into their self-identified affinity groups a.k.a "race" and discuss how their culture and history is connected to the culture and history of another "race". This is bringing back Jim Crow segregation and race baiting and asking children to internalize racial history and berate other children. This lacks educational value, is unproductive, and extremely unhealthy.

After having children identify, separate and internalize into their cultural groups and a little race-baiting, by 5th, 6th and 7th grade the new social studies curriculum then tells students they are oppressed and their value and worth is determined by the melanin in their skin i.e.

- Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that CONTINUES TODAY.
- Explain how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.
- Explain how the treatment of people shaped group identities and cultures.
- Evaluate the lasting impacts of UNEQUAL POWER relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups.

These statements are inaccurate and a topic of debate amongst adults, they do not belong in a classroom.

In 6th grade the proposed social studies ask children to analyze why communist China is good while leaving out the human rights atrocities only to follow up with the only time they can evaluate the human rights atrocities is during Medieval times and very noted for that time of white Europeans enslaving blacks and the bad actions of religion. To limit the education to these specifics is very telling of biases. If the topic is of the Middle east and Asia then that needs to be looked into as a whole including Uyghurs. If social studies aims to teach human rights violations it would be more culturally appropriate to discuss the Utes selling the Navajo to the Spaniards. If the social studies aims to discuss religion the it is more appropriate to get multiple perspectives including how religions was the reason for ending slavery in the United States and how religion is why we have education today. To frame these topics as they are in 6th grade is more propaganda than it is education.

By high school the lessons are purely biased propaganda the way they are presented and limits healthy debate. Like "Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the CONSEQUENCES of gun VIOLENCE on American society." This statement is false on its face, any kind of violence is violence regardless of inanimate objects. It is educational to discuss the purpose behind the 2nd Amendment not to try to force bias on children that the Bill of Rights needs revamped. This is inappropriate for public school education and goes against many families beliefs.

I noticed democracy listed over a dozen times but that we are a Republic is not discussed. The Mayflower Compact, Founding Fathers, Heroes of the Revolution, framing of a Constitution Republic, anything of self-governance and self-determination is missing from the new proposed social studies. A more appropriate way to view social studies is economically, legally, socialism vs. capitalism, self determination, self choice. By viewing everything through what is called cultural identity which ultimately boils down to race instead of culture and having the students personally internalize history you will end up with students that are self sabotaging, envious, hateful, negative, confused, and wicked. This is in no way productive education.

11/3/21, 4:13 PM

Mail - FeedBack, Rule, PED - Outlook

Sincerely,
Erin Stevens

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Revised Social Studies Curriculum

Michael L Hays <hayswhiteknyght@gmail.com>

Tue 11/2/2021 7:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Soules, William P. <bill.soules@nmlegis.gov>; Paul Gessing <pgessing@riograndefoundation.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

1. Teachers cannot readily, perhaps cannot even possibly, assess whether students meet stated performance standards.

2. Performance standards, especially in the earlier grades are unreasonable. For example, in First Grade:

Inquiry 22. Construct Compelling and Supporting Questions

- 1.1. Explain why a compelling question is important.
- 1.2. Generate supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines is an absurd, grade-inappropriate standard. Because of the vagueness of the meaning and application of the relevant terms, no one--teachers or students--can possibly know which questions are compelling and which supporting. Experts in these fields often debate which questions are more or less important than others. Moreover, first grade students have little or no knowledge in or about "the social studies disciplines," including what they are.

3, The performance standards do not stipulate what students are supposed to know and what teachers presumably must teach. Performance standards fail because they assume that students have learned without requiring that teachers have taught the information necessary to the performance. Relatively minor issue: there are no standards stating that students know the names of and can identify the continents; major bodies of water or major river systems; major mountain ranges or deserts; major countries; the fifty states, their capitals, their major cities, and their postal abbreviations. Relatively major issue: teachers do not know enough to teach students about diverse cultures and societies throughout the world without presenting partial, superficial, and biased accounts of them. (White teachers can give an informed, unbiased account of Blacks in Africa or urban America or Latinx in Brazil or rural New Mexico? Christian teachers are going to give such an account of Judaism in America? In Israel? Surely, you jest.)

The result of these deficiencies is that this curriculum is irresponsible in not defining what teachers actually teach to students so that they can satisfy these standards. If students cannot meet these standards, the blame for their failure can be shifted to what they could not do and away from what the teacher failed to teach. In addition, the statement of the curriculum is jargon impenetrable to non-professionals, not to mention parents and probably school board members.

In short, this curriculum is a revelation of professional ignorance and an exercise in educational obfuscation and pomposity.

In these and other ways, PED repeats all of the deficiencies of the Common Core State Standards. It gets teachers off the hook and puts the students on it.

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Study Standards

Judy McGuire <JudyMcGuire2@gmail.com>

Wed 11/3/2021 7:44 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Meredith: this is a well-written document that builds on ideas and structure from Kindergarten through High School, provided it is presented in a positive manner, as written. I have only a few comments

1. The discussion on the arms race belongs in HS History, not HM History
2. Include white slavery by studying the impact of Irish slaves imported to the US, in US History
3. Include evolution of Political Parties from 1776 forward in US History
4. Include the impact of early Chinese immigration in US History
5. Include study of the Holocaust in World History

Judith McGuire

[EXTERNAL] Parent Feedback on Social Studies 6.29.11 NMAC

Brodnax, Lia Frieda <lbrodnax@lanl.gov>

Wed 11/3/2021 8:34 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Sirs,

Please do NOT replace the current Social Studies Standards with the proposed standards. These new standards are derived from an anti-American perspective and promote identity politics. We need to encourage our children to love our country, recognize and learn from history, and learn and celebrate differences. These standards do not do that!

Constantly degrading our country, instead of learning from the past is creating a generation of people who don't love America! Constantly emphasizing kids' differences – identities – teaches them to be divisive. America needs people who are different, but united.

Again, please DO NOT replace the Social Studies Standards with these new ones – they do not reflect the parent's beliefs in our great country.

Sincerely,
Lia F. Brodnax, Ph.D.
Los Alamos, NM

Fw: [EXTERNAL] Rule notification.

Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Wed 11/3/2021 8:59 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

From: Kelli Cook <kellicooknew@icloud.com>

Sent: Tuesday, November 2, 2021 1:56 PM

To: Notification, Rule, PED <Rule.Notification@state.nm.us>

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Rule notification.

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

No CRT

Kelli Cook

[EXTERNAL] Proposed NM US History Standards feedback

Madeline Sedillo <msedillo@lcps.net>

Wed 11/3/2021 9:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Language in the below standards suggest a specific activity be used while teaching the content. The choice of activity should be decided by the teacher.

9.12US 18
9.12US 19
9.12US 25
9.12US 115
9.12US 113
9.12US 118
9.12US 114
9.12US 133
9.12US 135
9.12US 141

The eras covered by standards are very expansive and there is a concern that not all topics will be covered in the span of the academic school year. With 141 standards that start with The Columbian Exchange and end with the COVID-19 pandemic, the topics proposed may not have enough time dedicated to them to develop a complete understanding and resembles the Advanced Placement curriculum. Origin Stories (Theme 1) could be included into New Mexico History, and The American Revolution and Constitution (Theme 2) could be included into a Principles of Democracy class.

[EXTERNAL] Re-Development of the Social Studies Standards

Ruby Parker <rparkcpa@pvt.net>

Wed 11/3/2021 9:14 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>Cc: socialstudiescomment@bulldogs.org <socialstudiescomment@bulldogs.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Gentlemen/Ladies:

Thank you so much for your consideration of public comments on this very important issue.

The education of our children is one of the most important aspects of our activities.

I believe this Re-Development of the Social Studies Standards is so important that it should be undertaken in great detail, with much thought and research.

It is far too easy to insert one's own beliefs and opinions into such an endeavor even though that is not the intention.

With those thoughts in mind, I respectfully request that the time frame for public comments and consideration be extended.

We must examine the purpose for this project and what is expected to be the outcome.

What is the intention and who will benefit from the rewriting of these standards?

Do we want to rush through the project in an effort to further divide our citizens?

Respectfully,

Ruby Parker
PO Box 1345
405 W Hermosa Drive
Artesia NM 88211-1345

575-365-6574 Cell
rparkcpa@pvt.net

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Mr. Botello <kmboteja@aztecschools.com>

Wed 11/3/2021 11:32 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a History teacher who has served the public for 30 years in the NM Public school system, I am not in favor of this Proposal because Critical Race Theory (CRT) would only advance controversial agendas and impose their nontraditional values on unsuspecting children in the classroom. This college-level, Marxist and agenda driven theory is not age appropriate for students in public education. Many say it teaches students to be ashamed of this country and to judge each other based on their race. CRT divides our citizens into either victim or villain with no other option. It is, at its heart, racist!

I will not be a part of CRT and if it is adopted in NM, I will never teach this abusive curriculum that has already been clearly debunked and marked as divisive! The author's work has been found to be fraudulent and Historically inaccurate by authorities in higher academia and action was taken against her for her errors!

We (NM) are 50th in our nation as far as education is concerned, and the biggest reason is because we foolishly continue to adopt curricula and programs that have been tried, found lacking, and tossed aside by other states. We need to stop taking other states' rubbish! CRT is another example of this rubbish!

--

Mr. Botello

U.S. History

C.V. Koogler Middle School

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds." -- Abraham Lincoln

[EXTERNAL] CRT should not be taught in LCPS

Rocky Ray <rockyanpacnm@gmail.com>

Wed 11/3/2021 11:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

We had a presentation at the last school board meeting by someone from Santa Fe. She explained how CRT will be implemented in K-12 when it is inappropriate-as cited in their own presentation. The entire presentation was very deceptive. She was very calm and talked slowly while she presented lies about CRT not being taught when it clearly is part of the new social studies curriculum. Disgusting that the state is backing this. We're 50th in education-51st if you count Puerto Rico-and the focus should be on reading, writing and math proficiency, but very bad people want to inject race and division in our already failing schools, and it needs to stop yesterday (never should have been allowed to even be discussed).

The presentation then said that kindergartners would be taught about identity.

That has ties to Marxism.

They need to learn reading, writing and math. Academics is all that should be taught in schools.

The home is where they can learn about morals, race, gender and identity etc.

Dividing by race and by oppressor and oppressed is disgusting and is only thought of as a good thing by godless people.

The governor's race in VA yesterday shows us that parents roundly reject the teachings of any part of CRT.

We do not want it, as it is a college level topic that needs to be removed from K-12.

Screen shots from the Las Cruces meeting show where the trojan horse of the new social studies curriculum was presented so that CRT can be implemented. (see attached)

Note: I have commented at the last 3 school board meetings and do not intend to stop until the school board hears us parents and our concerns.

Thanks,

Rocky Ray

Parent of 3 in LCPS

Virus-free. www.avg.com

Elementary Themes

Kindergarten

- Theme 1: Roles and Responsibilities
- Theme 2: Myself and My Community
- Theme 3: Needs and Wants
- Theme 4: Spaces and Places
- Theme 5: Social Identity

First Grade

- Theme 1: Living, Learning and Working Together
- Theme 2: Cultures Within Our Communities
- Theme 3: Making Choices
- Theme 4: Interactions with Our Physical Environment
- Theme 5: Multiple Identities

Second Grade

- Theme 1: We the People
- Theme 2: Looking in Our Past
- Theme 3: What We Make and Use
- Theme 4: Cultures and Environment
- Theme 5: Multi-Identity Interactions

Third Grade

- Theme 1: Citizenship
- Theme 2: Global Immigration and Migration
- Theme 3: Global Issues and Events
- Theme 4: Our Changing World
- Theme 5: Global Diversity and Identity

Fourth Grade

- Theme 1: NM Government Past and Present
- Theme 2: Migration and Settlement in NM
- Theme 3: NM Trade and Industry
- Theme 4: Resources and Land Use in NM
- Theme 5: New Mexico Identity and Diversity

Fifth Grade

- Theme 1: Development and Establishment of US Government
- Theme 2: Inequality and Justice in the US
- Theme 3: Human Rights and Economic Development
- Theme 4: Human Impact on Environment
- Theme 5: Identity in Multiple Spaces

Critical Race Theory

- CRT is an academic theory used to analyze major systems in society.
 - At its core, it contends that race is a social construct and racism has impacted policies, systems, and structures much as it has individuals.

Examples

- Criminal Justice System
 - Banking System
 - Housing System
- CRT is NOT the same as historically accurate social studies standards.
 - Recognition of the impact of events and people in the past in a more robust way that is about learning and representation. Hence the importance of Inquiry.
 - NOT Culturally & Linguistically Relevant Instruction

[EXTERNAL] proposed social studies standards 2021

Wendy Petersen <petersen_w@aps.edu>

Wed 11/3/2021 1:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have been a high school social studies teacher in Albuquerque since 2000. These standards represent a dramatic change from the previous ones and, as such, deserve careful consideration. My comments are exclusively regarding the high school standards.

1. They are not aligned to the current curriculum. High school U.S. History, for example, begins after the Civil War. This was put into place years ago to avoid duplication of content from middle school U.S. History which is currently pre-European contact through Civil War. This is important as many U.S. history teachers were not able to teach all the standards in the given time frame and many students were missing out on the 20th Century, Cold War etc in both middle AND high school.

2. Most schools have purchased textbooks based on the previous scope and sequence so the additional content isn't covered in teacher/district materials. Will the state allocate new resources to cover those gaps?

2. There are duplications across content/subject areas. For example, both U.S. and World History are expected to cover the Columbian Exchange. Duplication of content results in frustration for the students (Miss, we did this last year) and for teachers, too.

3. The government standards are so vague as to be completely useless in guiding instruction. There is no way a new teacher would be able to look at those standards and know what to teach. For example, I know that the influence of non-elected actors is code for media, interest groups, lobbyists etc. but someone new to the course would not. Checks and balances is not mentioned and the Constitution barely makes an appearance. I do not object to the removal of many of the historical influences - I believe it is more important to students to learn about government in action today.

- The standards aren't even called government. They are titled "Civics" only. Although some schools teach civics, typically to 9th graders, most schools include government as a senior level course. This isn't a course option under the current standards. They will need to change their course handbooks, descriptions etc. since the names/courses do not match. This may seem trivial but the emphasis of civics versus government courses is very different.
- The vagueness makes our job easy in a sense. I can teach just about anything and it will fit one of those standards. But, eventually the political pendulum will swing the other way and End of Course exams will come back. No way can these standards be used by teachers to predict what might show up on an exam. It provides zero guidance or direction.
- Most schools have government as a one semester option - it would be difficult to teach all of these standards well and thoroughly in a single semester.

Please note: I have no problems with the cultural aspects or inquiry aspects, except for concerns about availability of resources and teaching time. These are concerns regarding pedagogy, resources, and curricular alignment. As such, I absolutely cannot support these standards in their current form.

Sincerely,

Wendy Petersen

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Tammy Davis <tdavis@bulldogs.org>

Wed 11/3/2021 1:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Sent from Mail for Windows

Date: November 2, 2021

To: Dr. Kurt Steinhaus, Secretary Designate

Dr. Gwen Perea-Warniment, Deputy Secretary of Teaching, Learning and Assessment

Ms. Katarina Sandoval, Deputy Secretary, Academic Engagement and Student Success

Dr. Vickie C. Bannerman, Deputy Secretary of Identity, Equity, and Transformation

Mr. John Sena, Director of Policy, Innovation, and Measurement

From: Tammy Davis Ed.M

As an educator in the state of New Mexico for almost 40 years, I have been a part of many cycles of standards development and implementation. As a NBPTS teacher, I have developed standards and as an elementary principal I have supported the implementation of standards. While many of these processes have been difficult and required changes in mindset and practice, none have been as concerning and potentially detrimental to the education of our students as the revision of the social studies standards.

While there are many areas of concern about the philosophical underpinnings of the new standards, the developmental appropriateness of some of the new standards, the sheer number of standards, and the standards that are not well-written also raise many red flags. In kindergarten there are 25 standards. First grade has 24 standards while second and third grade has 29 standards. Fourth grade has 26 standards, and fifth grade is expected to address 29 standards. Not only are there more standards to address, but some standards have also dropped to the grade below. For example, creating maps has moved from first to kindergarten. Maps and globes are difficult abstractions for first graders. Why has this moved to kindergarten? This is just one example of the arbitrary changes to the standards.

The kindergarten and first grade inquiry standards appear to have been constructed with no consideration of the developmental level of young learners. An understanding of the difference between a question and a statement is just beginning to emerge at this age, and yet the draft standards ask 5-year-old learners to recognize a “compelling” question and the relationship between a compelling question and a supporting question. The inquiry standards are especially problematic considering the cognitive and social development of our youngest students.

Myriad reasons support putting on the brakes and reconsidering very carefully these new standards. The ideas of power versus oppression are problematic and encourage a victim mentality that is not good for students from any background. The subtle bashing of the United States as a nation of inequity that supports conflict, for example in fifth grade standard (5.12), is not congruent with the beliefs of many of our communities. The standards are not developmentally appropriate in some instances and they are not well-written. These standards should not be codified in their current form. On behalf of the teachers, students, and parents in our school, I ask that you stop and reconsider these standards.

Thank you for your time and consideration,

Tammy Davis
1708 Runyan
Artesia, NM 88210

[EXTERNAL] proposed social study standards jean hinlicky <jean.hinlicky@gmail.com>

Wed 11/3/2021 8:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Jean A. Hinlicky, M.D
631 Camino de la Luz
Santa Fe, NM 87505
jean.hinlicky@gmail.com

11/3/21

Mr. John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

Please consider this letter to be my formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. I am a retired behavioral pediatrician/child psychiatrist, reading tutor and parent who is extremely concerned about the suppression of facts and truth in our country. I raised two children on the principle of truth and fact, even when I didn't like it or agree with it. And I believe that one can only make informed decisions and choices if one is in possession of full factual information. To suppress the teaching of ANY philosophy, piece of history or opinion contributes to brainwashing and poor decision making based on opinions and beliefs. This works against the acquisition of critical thinking skills, which are increasingly lacking in our society. Schools have a unique opportunity to help our children learn to THINK; but to fulfill that mission, we must teach ALL of our history, the good and the bad.

I am writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. I want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and I was impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. I believe the K-8 standards and the framework of the 6 strands works beautifully, and also support the high school curriculum. These standards respect the intelligence of children, concentrate on teaching critical thinking, include evaluation of the credibility of data sources, and embrace values that respect different cultures and perspectives. These are admirable standards to which we should all aspire.

They are also quite rigorous and will require a huge amount of energy and work to implement.

My own children had the opportunity to attend a school that did embrace these kind of standards-- they have grown to be amazing critical thinkers; and, just as important, to be inclusive in their approach to other human beings. Had my generation been taught to these standards, I am convinced we would have a healthier democracy.

In closing, I urge the department to adopt the bulk of these standards, with refinements as decided upon by competent reviewers. I hope the department will stand up to those who seek to preserve the old approach to teaching social studies and history and run away from change. The old approach fails to enable children to face the challenges that are ever-present in their daily lives. It also supports a narrow view of a world that is becoming ever more broad and interconnected. Our children would be well-served by mastering the standards outlined in this curriculum as they prepare to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

655 092909

6.29.11 Exhibit_0391

Respectfully,

Jean A. Hinlicky, M.D.

--

EMAIL TRANSMISSIONS ARE NOT ALWAYS SECURE. PLEASE TAKE MEASURES TO SAFEGUARD YOUR PRIVACY.

JAH

[EXTERNAL] Comment on PED's proposed new state standards for social studies

Vince Gutschick <vince.gutschick@gmail.com>

Wed 11/3/2021 9:04 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 2 attachments (85 KB)

Dear PED Staff.docx; Dear PED Staff.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Rule Feedback Staff,

I was just apprised of PED's proposed new state standards for social studies. While I support better standards, these proposals are NOT better - rather, they are far worse. I attach my comments in both .docx and .pdf formats.

Thanks for your attention,
Vincent P. Gutschick

--

Chair of the Board, Las Cruces Academy lascrucesacademy.org

Prof., Emeritus, Biology, NMSU

vince.gutschick@gmail.com (575) 571-2269

If Shakespeare had been able to Google.... oh, never mind - Roy Blount, Jr.

You got to be careful if you don't know where you're going because you might not get there - Yogi Berra

Dear PED Staff,

I was just apprised of the proposed new state standards for social studies. In a word, I'm stunned. My friend who sent me the link to the documentation pointed me to the first-grade standards. Let me offer a few perspectives on them:

The level of concepts that first-graders are presumed to grasp is absurdly high. Students don't learn the sophisticated (sophist?) principles of argument at that age. Learning is incremental. Piaget detailed a lot of it for us. To shoehorn advanced concepts into the standards at the level of first grade is not only self-defeating, it's another bit of destruction of students' critical facilities when they're asked to play a foolish game. (One detail: compelling questions are not always worthy. "Have you stopped beating your wife?") I note that I have the perspective of a lifelong career in both teaching and research*, including 22.5 years teaching biology at NMSU, and I would claim that only a relative handful of college students who rose through the grades in New Mexico schools have demonstrated meeting previous standards to more than single-digit percentage levels. You have a broken system with structural problems (about which you have been told, no doubt); you can't fix it with efforts like these proposed new standards.

The "high-falutin'" language in which the new standards are couched would seem to offer many opportunities for self-congratulation among the standard-setters. The standards, and their language, are ludicrously advanced for young minds as also for the average teacher, or even most of the better teachers. The concepts bandied about remind me of one of my pet peeves in math teaching. Math teachers and standards-setters love to bring in complex numbers as a cutesy exercise. Isn't it great that we can define the square root of a negative number? There's no follow-up, no imparting the information that complex numbers (1) represent rotations in a plane with special arithmetic properties and (2) are of no damned use until you get to the analysis of, primarily, complicated periodic phenomena using calculus.

I offer that PED must face the facts that the current and proposed standards are largely illusory. How else do we explain that students who get "processed" through our school system perform now at the zeroth percentile in a national system that is itself low-ranked among modern nations? I offer a counterproposal to the proposed standards: First, start from scratch and jettison the current effort. Then, get people of high accomplishment in serious studies of how young people learn to watch over the shoulders of any persons attempting to write standards. I do wish you the best of luck doing this important work, but the cart is still before the horse currently.

*OK, my main academic accomplishments from age 18 through age 62 were in hard-core chemistry, physics, biology, and applied fields, earning me a rating among the top 2% of scientists in the world. I mixed teaching and research. I do this now at age 76 with young students in our private school, where I teach middle-school science, computer programming at four levels, world culture at two levels (based in good part on travel in 41 nations), and tennis. I may not always get the lessons pitched at the best level for students to absorb ideas and then develop them on their own, but I do have a good appreciation of student capabilities over a range of ages.

Dear PED Staff,

I was just apprised of the proposed new state standards for social studies. In a word, I'm stunned. My friend who sent me the link to the documentation pointed me to the first-grade standards. Let me offer a few perspectives on them:

The level of concepts that first-graders are presumed to grasp is absurdly high. Students don't learn the sophisticated (sophist?) principles of argument at that age. Learning is incremental. Piaget detailed a lot of it for us. To shoehorn advanced concepts into the standards at the level of first grade is not only self-defeating, it's another bit of destruction of students' critical facilities when they're asked to play a foolish game. (One detail: compelling questions are not always worthy. "Have you stopped beating your wife?") I note that I have the perspective of a lifelong career in both teaching and research*, including 22.5 years teaching biology at NMSU, and I would claim that only a relative handful of college students who rose through the grades in New Mexico schools have demonstrated meeting previous standards to more than single-digit percentage levels. You have a broken system with structural problems (about which you have been told, no doubt); you can't fix it with efforts like these proposed new standards.

The "high-falutin'" language in which the new standards are couched would seem to offer many opportunities for self-congratulation among the standard-setters. The standards, and their language, are ludicrously advanced for young minds as also for the average teacher, or even most of the better teachers. The concepts bandied about remind me of one of my pet peeves in math teaching. Math teachers and standards-setters love to bring in complex numbers as a cutesy exercise. Isn't it great that we can define the square root of a negative number? There's no follow-up, no imparting the information that complex numbers (1) represent rotations in a plane with special arithmetic properties and (2) are of no damned use until you get to the analysis of, primarily, complicated periodic phenomena using calculus.

I offer that PED must face the facts that the current and proposed standards are largely illusory. How else do we explain that students who get "processed" through our school system perform now at the zeroth percentile in a national system that is itself low-ranked among modern nations? I offer a counterproposal to the proposed standards: First, start from scratch and jettison the current effort. Then, get people of high accomplishment in serious studies of how young people learn to watch over the shoulders of any persons attempting to write standards. I do wish you the best of luck doing this important work, but the cart is still before the horse currently.

*OK, my main academic accomplishments from age 18 through age 62 were in hard-core chemistry, physics, biology, and applied fields, earning me a rating among the top 2% of scientists in the world. I mixed teaching and research. I do this now at age 76 with young students in our private school, where I teach middle-school science, computer programming at four levels, world culture at two levels (based in good part on travel in 41 nations), and tennis. I may not always get the lessons pitched at the best level for students to absorb ideas and then develop them on their own, but I do have a good appreciation of student capabilities over a range of ages.

[EXTERNAL] Personal Finance as part of Social Studies

Will Rainey <will@bluetreesavings.com>

Wed 11/3/2021 10:08 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Sir / Madame,

I understand that New Mexico is one of only 5 states not to include personal finance as part of the education standards.

I have drafted this email to encourage that this is changed and personal finance is included in the education standards.

Importance of Personal Finance

Without any guidance, children are most likely to only see money as a form of spending. With children only seeing money for spending, this will determine their money actions and behaviors, i.e. they will spend their money.

We know that in order to be financially healthy, everyone needs to balance spending and saving their money. For this to happen, there needs to be a place where kids can learn about saving (as they are unlikely to pick this up without some proactively speaking with them). This is why we need personal finance to be included on the education standards.

At present, children will pick up most of their money habits and mindset from observing their parents. As their parents were also not educated on personal finance, we will continue to see a cycle of generations who overspend and suffer the financial stress associated with overspending (e.g. debt).

With the knowledge of saving and understanding the importance of balancing saving and spending, we can ensure the next generation grow up financially healthy.

We have to remember that it is the money habits that kids form that will determine their future financial wellbeing.

Resources for teaching Personal Finance

Over recent years, there has been a substantial increase in the number of resources of schools and teachers focused on personal finance. This includes videos, text books and story books.

These resources allow teachers who may never have been trained in personal finance themselves, to teach the next generation about personal finance with confidence and support.

I would be happy to support in any way possible.

Best regards,

Will

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards Revision 6.29.1.9 NMAC, General Provisions

Barbara Regan <barbararegan40@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 6:51 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Sir:

These proposed Social Studies standards do not mention Critical Race Theory(CRT); however, the vocabulary that is used throughout the document ("oppression", "inequality", "unequal power relations", "racism", "injustice") is a clear indication that this proposed revision is a misguided attempt to foist CRT onto our students.

I disapprove of this attempt to perpetuate division and racism in New Mexico. We need standards that celebrate our diversity and shared commitment to work together to solve New Mexico's current problems.

Barbara Regan
9180 Coors Blvd NW #306
Albuquerque, NM 87120

[EXTERNAL] K-12 Social Studies Standards proposal: comment

Elizabeth & Tim <e.eaton.doyle@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 7:53 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To All Concerned:

We need more rigorous standards for K-12 Social Studies curriculum. We DO NOT need subversive indoctrination in the form of Critical Race Theory. CRT distorts history in order to show that Americans are racist and always have been. A rigorous curriculum in social studies should focus on events and facts and people, without twisting the information. The "woke" or progressive mindset regarding education is just another temporary fad that will fade when its divisiveness and unfairness become obvious to all. NM education needs to step away from jumping on the fads that derail education. We must keep social studies curriculum apolitical. Indoctrinating our children in CRT is a political action, not education.

e(x)+duc(a)+tion = the act of leading or guiding one out

The newly proposed standards for reworking the K-12 social studies standards do not help "guide or lead students out" to intellectual development nor do they encourage learning of new concepts and skills. They do the opposite: by painting the past with a brush saturated with the current fad of critical race theory, we will be teaching children exactly how they are "supposed to" think about a subject.

The purpose of education is not to give children a certain slant of how to think about a subject.
The purpose of education is to teach children to think on their own.

Add rigor to the standards. Do not add political indoctrination to the standards.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Eaton Doyle

(retired high school English teacher, Roswell, NM, and Rice Lake, WI)

18 Moccasin Trail

Sandia Park, NM 87047

(505) 980-5870

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Changes

Michael Gentry <mkarm1967@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 7:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Count my vote as against the proposed changes to NM Social Studies Standards. The inclusion of Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies, Diversity and Identity is clearly an attempt to distort racial and gender identity bias to our children. Our country was founded on diversity, attempting to build division with these teachings go against what our founders stood for. Pushing an agenda of inequality, oppression and racism won't change history and will only increase hostility.

Michael Gentry

Mkarm1967@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] CRT=New Social Studies Agenda

Scotty Savage <scottysavage51@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 8:03 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As I read through this I'm so angry. First zero history is taught until the 5th grade!! Most importantly: Who does the PED think they are to indoctrinate OUR children to their values. Schools are to teach children HOW to think not WHAT to think.

Children are exposed to sex soon enough without you deciding its your job! Who do you think you are to dream up this shameful indoctrination?

Lastly, like all CRT you are doing your best to create more division between races by your attempt to shame white kids for their "whiteness" and put down children of color by teaching them they are being mistreated and have no chance! Most children don't see color, they see the heart. It is teachings like this that create strife! Put people in boxes and they are suspicious of what that other box is doing. Think about how well: "separate but equal" worked. I see what the left is doing and I believe your main goal is the destruction of America.

If you want a good non partisan FREE K-12 Social Studies program take a look at what Hillsdale College offers!

Tell your governor that if she continues down this leftist road she will go by the way of NJ!

I write this, not because I believe for a second you will change, but because I have to make my voice heard!

Sincerely,

Scotty Savage

Portales, NM

PS NM continues to be last in education. Do you think for one minute China teaches this stuff...NO they're teaching science, math, physics so they can continue to own ALL of America! If you really care WAKE up and teach our kids what you're paid to do. Put NM first instead of last by putting control BACK in the hands of locally elected officials!

[EXTERNAL] WSJ.com: History Is on the Ballot In Virginia

Elizabeth Doyle <no-reply@share.wsj.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 8:14 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Trouble viewing this email? View in web browser >

Please read WSJ article as it applies to the current proposal to add CRT to NM K-12 social studies curriculum. Do NOT add CRT thinking to education in NM.

History Is on the Ballot In Virginia

By F.H. Buckley

Critical Race Theory presents a story of the U.S. much like the one I learned growing up in Canada.

Read the Article >

Related Articles

Opinion | Critical Race Theory From the Right Is Wrong

Opinion | The Biden Democrats Lose It

Access WSJ.com and our mobile apps. Subscribe

 Powered by Dow Jones

Dow Jones & Company, Inc. 4300 U.S. Route 1 North Monmouth Junction, NJ 08852
Copyright 2021 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. | All Rights Reserved.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

JULIA BOWDICH <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

JULIA BOWDICH
6304 GAMBEL OAK CT NE
ALBUQUERQUE, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies

LARRY ALLEN <larryallen350@cableone.net>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:41 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The proposed social studies changes are completely unacceptable. They promote racial hatred, a distorted view of American history, and punish patriotism. We need to get back to basics in our schools and quit wasting the student's time on this nonsense.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Linda Zingle <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:44 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Linda Zingle
726 Allendale St.
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Linda Zingle <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Linda Zingle
726 Allendale St.
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Sarah Potter <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:47 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Sarah Potter
529 Camino del Monte Sol
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Chris Graeser <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:49 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Please add my voice to those urging you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Chris Graeser
222 Gonzales Road
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Larry Schuster <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:52 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Larry Schuster
6904 Rosewood, N.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

William Davidson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:53 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

William Davidson
19 Calle Arbolitos
Placitas, NM 87043-9223

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

Billie Waters <billiefwaters@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Subject: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequality," "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system. This is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites our country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. This is a biased agenda which does NOT ever belong in our public schools.

Billie Waters

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Faith Hutson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or under-banked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of inter-generational poverty. More over, people with little or no knowledge of personal finance fall prey to predatory lenders.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefiting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Faith Hutson
706 S Mesquite St Apt B
Las Cruces, NM 88001-3656

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Nancy Clark <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Nancy Clark
4205 Coyote Lane
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Eric Rowland <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 10:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Eric Rowland
914 Canyon Rd.
Santa Fe, NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Rachel Winston <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Rachel Winston
2716 Calle de Oriente
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Carol Schrader <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:05 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

As a parent of a 19 year old, I worked several years ago to try to find appropriate financial education information for my daughter. I contact her school and our bank for resources, and wasn't given any help. Parents need support with this important part of education.

As a teacher of middle school students, I also see how little real-world knowledge students have in this area. We need to empower our young generation with these important life skills.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Carol Schrader
2300 W ALAMEDA ST, APT A6, APT A6
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Kenna O'Connell <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Kenna O'Connell
529 Burma Dr NE
Albuquerque, NM 87123

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Sherry Malone <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Sherry Malone
po box 670
Abiquiu, NM 87510-0670

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Don Moseley <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:09 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

If you add personal finance studies to nm high school curriculum, teenagers will realize the consequences of starting a family before they can afford it. It would cause them to value the higher wages of a college education or technical training. I taught a personal finance class for teenagers once and was amazed at the positive response and appreciation from the students, and parents. Call me if I can share my experiences. 949 632 3736. Sincere regards, don Moseley

Sincerely,

Don Moseley
2229 Calle alverado
Santa fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Belinda Herrera <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:10 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Belinda Herrera
12200 Academy Road NE, APT 522
Albuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

John Booker <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:13 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. Let's not make our young people learn this information the hard way!

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

John Booker
1327 4TH ST
Las Vegas, NM 87701-4401

[EXTERNAL] K-12 Social Studies Standards

Jennings, Rick <rjennings@iaee.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:18 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern,

I'm writing to express my concern about the New Mexico Department of Education's proposal to rework our K-12 Social Studies Standards. I think there should be a through public debate regarding what these new standards should contain and what students are required to learn. My understanding is these "new standards" make continual references to inequity, oppression, racism and injustice – words often used to bolster division and racism. As a result, I am against the New Mexico Department of Education's proposal to rework our K-12 Social Studies Standards.

Rick Jennings

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Eugene Farnum <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:22 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Many New Mexicans get themselves over a barrel because they don't know how to analyze the consequences of high interest rates charged by payday loans. They often also don't appreciate the power of compound interest that Albert Einstein called "God's greatest miracle". The proposed High School classes could help all New Mexico families.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Eugene Farnum
971 B Chicoma Vista
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Claude Morelli <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:30 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Claude Morelli
2236 Dietz Pl. NW
Albuquerque, NM 87107

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Meghan Lacounte <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:31 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Meghan Lacounte
509 Rio Vista Dr NE
Rio Rancho, NM 87144

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Karen Milstein <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:34 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Karen Milstein
13 blue Jay drive
Santa fe, NM 87506

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Signe Stuart <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Signe Stuart
18 Gavilan Rd
Santa Fe, NM 87508-8840

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Thomas Hester <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:42 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I strongly urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and to add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fail to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools do not teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or directly entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students whose families may have minimal or no bank accounts. Moreover, many students learning personal finance concepts in school take their knowledge home to parents, grandparents, and other family members.

Think New Mexico's proposed standards would assure that every student has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance knowledge before high school graduation, benefitting them for the rest of their lives.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Thomas Hester
201 W 19 St
Silver City, NM 88061

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

mailagent@thesoftedge.com <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

on behalf of

duffworx@earthlink.net <duffworx@earthlink.net>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:43 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Our citizens, especially those on the low end of the socioeconomic scale, need this training to have a fair shake in an economy which will exploit them if they aren't trained.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Will Duff
286 Skyland Blvd
Tijeras, NM 87059

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Bill Bright <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Bill Bright
402 W Morgan Ave
Gallup, NM 87301-6453

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Elizabeth Beers <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Beers
84 Pueblito
Socorro, NM 87801

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies hazel Morgan <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:46 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

When students would ask me why we need to study math, the most practical answer was to learn how to budget, make change, balance a bank book, figure out interest rates, learn the consequences of borrowing money, and so forth. Teachers need to have this in their practical application of math lessons, in social studies as a separate class, or an everyday problem solving class. I can guarantee that most children to older teens do not get this information at home!

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

hazel Morgan
9543 Giddings Ave NE
Albuquerque, NM 87109

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: MDS Board Resolution

Robert Jenkins <rjenkins@montedelsol.org>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:47 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern:

The Monte del Sol Governing Board passed this resolution unanimously on October 19, 2021.

Respectfully, Robert D. Jenkins

Jr Ph.D.

RESOLUTION

Governing Board of Monte del Sol Charter School

Whereas, after intensive training from the New Mexico Public Education Department, professional educators from all parts of the state have created comprehensive social studies curricular standards for every New Mexico public and charter K-12 school;

Whereas, these standards will improve social studies education for all New Mexico students and families while encouraging critical thinking and exploration for important societal processes in New Mexico, the United States, and the world;

Whereas, the proposed New Mexico social studies standards incorporate concepts centering on social justice and sustainable futures thus reflecting key pillars of Monte del Sol Charter School;

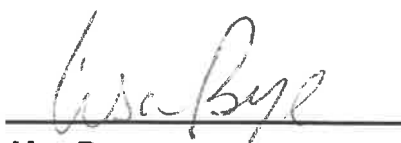

Whereas, the state of New Mexico has demonstrated courage in developing standards in a controversial academic arena that will ultimately encourage civil engagement in a polarized society;

Therefore, be it resolved that the Governing Board of Monte del Sol Charter School fully supports the proposed New Mexico learning standards in Social Studies and encourages the State of New Mexico to adopt them within a reasonable time frame.

Adopted this 19th day of October, in the year 2021.

Robert D. Jenkins, Jr. Ph.D.
President
Monte del Sol Governing Board

Lisa Bye
Secretary
Monte del Sol Governing Board

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Elizabeth Beers <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:55 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Beers
84 Pueblito
Socorro, NM 87801

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Elmer Veeder <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 11:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Elmer Veeder
1405 E Florida St
Deming, NM 88030

[EXTERNAL] comments

Thomas McConnell <tmcccon@unm.edu>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:17 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Thomas McConnell <tmcccon@unm.edu>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Critical Race Theory is a device being used by socialists (the term progressive is simply a way to confuse the ignorant) to propagandize the young and the ignorant. Notice I did not use the word dumb.

Discussion of "inequity" instead of "inequality" is another example. Racism exists on both sides of the social argument. "Oppression" is another example of confusing the ignorant. In particular, we believe that parents have a great deal to say about how and what is taught in any of our schools. We believe that the teaching of gender and equity are examples of subjects best left to parents at home, and not in schools where 80% of the teachers are socialists (liberals, progressives, democrats - different words describing the same ideologies).

"Climate disruption" (page112) is a distortion of the term climate change, which is real, and has been ongoing since the beginning of time. Man-made climate change, however, is a political idea and not a fact. It masquerades as something human beings can do something about. It is a great political scare tactic, like the Covid pandemic.

Scaring and intimidating people is not the humane way to convert people's thinking. The use of rational arguments is the way to explain.

Although much of the 122 pages appear to be legitimate subjects for open and non-judgmental methods of educating our children by non-ideologue teachers, we must let the parents decide how to educate their offspring.

Thomas McConnell MD, UNM Professor Emeritus

Mary McConnell, housewife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Changes

James Salazar <salazarjames@comcast.net>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:18 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern:

I am vehemently apposed to the teaching of "Critical Race Theory". CRT is duplicitous. To add CRT to a Social Studies curriculum would be propagandizing our students and not educating them.

We should be teaching our children HOW TO THINK, NOT WHAT TO THINK.

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Proposed changes to NMPED Social Studies Standards, 6.29.11 NMAC

J R Brown <hwmirar@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:21 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing to express my absolute support for the proposed changes to the Social Studies Standards. I am a retired NM district judge living in Albuquerque. I find the open-ended, problem solving approach of the proposed standards to be a valuable change for our students.

In contrast with portions of the existing standards (as with many such standards that exist around the country and the world) the existing standards could be seen as primarily teaching discreet facts. This is in sharp contrast with the proposed standards which seek to give students the necessary tools to encourage them to ask questions, develop sources, evaluate those sources, and arrive at their own conclusions. Furthermore, the proposed standards require historical, social, and political honesty. Finally, the proposed standards lead ultimately to students endeavoring to address civic problems on their own terms.

I have scanned several of the public comments in the record and find the objections related to Critical Race Theory and other similar politically based complaints miss the mark. First, these objections demonstrate a complete lack of understanding of CRT. But more importantly these commenters seem to be suggesting that our Social Studies Standards should avoid messy, embarrassing historical facts. This would be a serious gap in the education our students receive and prevent any chance of learning from our past mistakes or achieving better results in the future.

I do find several requests to extend the public commentary period to have some merit. While I feel comfortable with the proposed standards, I can understand why some might feel more time as well as more discussion could be useful. Educational standards have gained interest in the last few months, especially more recently. More time, discussion, and explanation may not change all the critic's minds but any argument that the decision was rushed could tarnish an otherwise worthy change.

Thank you for considering my comments.

J R Brown

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Albert maze <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Albert maze
308 spruce lane
Taos, NM 87571-6561

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Rhonda Berger <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:33 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Rhonda Berger
1331 Tesuque Dr
Española, NM 87532-3295

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Elaine Del Valle <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:34 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Please consider PLAY voting booths in kindergarten and reinforcing smart use of money earlier.

Sincerely,

Elaine Del Valle
147 Calle ojo feliz
Santa fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Melissa Beery <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Melissa Beery
842 CAMINO CONSUELO
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

John McDermott <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:38 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

John McDermott
1601 Wilderness Gate Road
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Bobby A Little Bear <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:51 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

As an educated business owner and NMSU instructor, I see first hand the critical need for Personal Finance curriculum in High Schools in New Mexico. This has been evident in my personal interactions and during discussions with New Mexico banking professionals. I implore you to take these appropriate actions today to help our graduating youth. This critical group desperately needs the skills to protect, invest and grow their finances to protect their future.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Bobby A Little Bear
117 Silver Ave
Grants, New Mexico 87020, NM 87020

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Joan Murphy <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:55 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Joan Murphy
3260 Calle de Molin
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Mary Walgenbach <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 12:58 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

I didn't receive financial education much beyond bookkeeping (graduated in 1963) but it at least gave me the tools to track my spending and budget for tomorrow.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Mary Walgenbach
112 W Cloud Song
Santa Teresa, NM 88008

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Cathy Kumar <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:08 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Cathy Kumar
520 Los Ranchos
Los Ranchos de Albuquerque , NM 87107

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Luz Sweet <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Luz Sweet
PO Box 3271
Taos , NM 87571

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Colton Miller <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:16 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Colton Miller
3431 Anderson Ave SE Apt K
Albuquerque, NM 87106

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Cheryl LaCounte <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Cheryl LaCounte
703 Wingfield Street
RUIDOSO, NM 88345

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

CHRISTOPHER LACOUNTE <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:24 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

CHRISTOPHER LACOUNTE
703 WINGFIELD STREET
RUIDOSO, NM 88345

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Pat D <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:25 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Your covid mandates are a violation of human rights. Your days are numbered because i will not vote for you or your tyranny. You know that any shitty policy you enact will not cover up what you are a NAZI! Remove your mandates or you will lose your job next nov. I guarantee it.

Sincerely,

Pat D

Po box 72945

Alb, NM 87195

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Cheryl L Williams <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:41 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty. It will help our citizens to be aware when they are being taken advantage of financially such as with high interest quick loans.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Cheryl L Williams
637 W Meadowlark Ln
Corrales, NM 87048

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Steve Dulfer <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Steve Dulfer
2064 Paseo Primero
Santa Fe , NM 87501

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Mary McGuire <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

We need to do better for our children. Don't water this down, follow Think New Mexico's proposal. Our kids deserve nothing less.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Mary McGuire
35 Via Tessera
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Larry Gioannini <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Larry Gioannini
205 hoagland rd
las cruces, NM 88005

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Michael Gregory MD <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 1:59 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Michael Gregory MD
107 Paseo Del Pinon
Santa Fe, NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Suzanne Rodriguez <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 2:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Suzanne Rodriguez
305 DON FERNANDO RD
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] No to changing Social Studies Standards

Tom Meadows <tomeadows@hotmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 2:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Marxist/Socialist ideology does not have a place in NM Public Schools.

Teach are kids to think, not indoctrinate them into political & social hate of one another.

Thomas E Meadows

2502 N Crow Circle

Carlsbad, NM

Get Outlook for iOS

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Barbara Schroder <barbs1@bway.net>

Thu 11/4/2021 2:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to comment on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced by 6.20.11, Social Studies.

I am a retired Anthropologist and teacher educator, currently volunteering in Santa Fe public schools. I write in support of the proposed new Social Studies Standards. If enacted, they will put New Mexico at the forefront of social studies education in this country. They will help us to to prepare a citizenry that is capable of facing the serious societal challenges we currently confront, including racial, ethnic and class conflict and environmental destruction. The proposed standards encourage students to develop their own inquiry and critical thinking skills, teach respect for ethnic and cultural differences, provide a truly global perspective on history, and delve deeply into the multi-faceted causes of important historical events. All New Mexican students, regardless of their socio-economic status, or of their ethnic, racial or national origin group, or of their gender, will find themselves and their cultures and histories treated with respect and understanding here. This respect for multiple perspectives is the first step in building a healthier democracy.

I urge the PED to adopt these standards, to give our children the intellectual tools they will need to build a brighter future for all of us.

Sincerely yours,
Dr. Barbara Schroder
Santa Fe

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Lawrence Fricke <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 2:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Lawrence Fricke
8905 Hilton Avenue NE
Allbuquerque, NM 87111

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Bo Bergstrom <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 2:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Bo Bergstrom
30 Village Rd.
Silver City, NM 88061

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards "rework"

Kenneth Ross <kne89@comcast.net>

Thu 11/4/2021 3:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

New Mexico PED,

After reviewing the proposed standards for Social Studies for the upcoming year, it appears to be a well thought out plan and encourages awareness of complex accurate history, cultures, citizenship and overall forming ideas over time of what it means to be American and how we got where we are. I was pleased to see plans for students developing the ability to compare, analyze and develop individual ideas and thoughts. Nowhere did I see any concepts "forced" upon students nor imposing ideology onto students.

Additionally I think it would be a good idea to initiate Civics courses prior to High School in order to begin student knowledge of how our governments work before the students encounter new social environment adjustments required for high school.

Thank you,
Eileen Ross
Albuquerque, NM

[EXTERNAL] Proposed new NM state standards for social studies - my feedback

Nancy Oakes <neoakes08@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 3:45 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I fully support the proposed new social studies standards K-12 for New Mexico. They have been thoroughly and thoughtfully prepared and deserve the support of New Mexicans. Thank you to those involved.

Nancy E. Oakes
4509 Topaz Ave NW
Albuquerque NM 87114
505-331-1371

[EXTERNAL] Proposed New Social Studies Standards

Esther Kovari <ekovari@montedelsol.org>

Thu 11/4/2021 3:58 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have taught Social Studies in New Mexico since 2005, after a lengthy career in small business development and agricultural marketing. I am happy to see that the state of New Mexico has invested in creating new standards that respond to our changing world, and that incorporate our developing understanding of the past.

I am pleased to see many of the changes, and particularly the following:

1. The standards for teaching High School World History, which in the past were very Euro-centric (focused on the history and influence of Europe in the world), have now been expanded to more fully reflect the history and influence of the other regions of the world.
2. The US History standards have been expanded to include the significant impact of US Cold War policies on the countries of Latin America, and in general to more critically evaluate US Cold War policies worldwide, and consider their consequences. Understanding these policies is essential to understanding the context of the world we live in today.
3. I appreciate the increased emphasis in the proposed US and NM History standards on the experience of groups, such as women, people of color, LGBTQ people and others, whose voices have been neglected in traditional history classrooms. Bringing these voices to more prominence is not only important to understanding the past more fully, but is also essential to the project of fostering the values of a democratic and engaged citizenry amongst the diverse students of our state.

However, the proposed High School Economics standards do not appear to be much of an improvement over the ones currently in place. The proposal is a list of 175 separate standards; this is not realistic, given that Economics is generally a one semester high school class. The standards are not organized by theme or topic, making them hard to use. They are largely based on neoclassical economic theory, which is certainly not the only way to understand how economies work, based as it is, on inaccurate assumptions about human behavior, and neglecting, as it does, the key importance in economic systems of unequal power relations between economic actors.

The proposed Economics standards also largely leave out the elements of personal finance that are included in our current standards. In my view, the teaching of personal finance to high school students is essentially important, equipping them with the practical knowledge and skills needed by ALL adults to navigate their world. Many students have noted that my personal finance class was the most useful class they had in their high school career.

I support the project of developing new Social Studies Standards, and appreciate the opportunity to give my input.

Esther Kovari, Social Studies Teacher
Monte del Sol Charter School
Santa Fe

--

Esther Kovari, Monte del Sol Charter School

[EXTERNAL] Support for Social Studies Standards Changes

Rhonda Crespo <rkwcrespo@gmail.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 4:10 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Rules Committee,

I am writing in support of the proposed changes to the state of New Mexico social studies curriculum standards. I am the parent of five children who have attended public schools in New Mexico. Two of my youngest children will benefit from the proposed educational changes. I urge the Rules Committee to please adopt the newly drafted social studies standards that teach tribal sovereignty, social justice, and sustainable futures.

Thank you,

Rhonda Crespo

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Michael Sauber <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 4:11 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I'd like you to support personal finance in our state educational system. It's hurting our economy and is morally wrong to send kids out into a world with credit sharks and the like. If students became knowledgeable about financial issues, they will make good decisions and become more productive citizens.

Sincerely,

Michael Sauber
4531 Eddie Ward Way
Silver City, NM 88061

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Addition of Financial Literacy to NM Social Studies Standards

Keith Julian <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 5:04 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I urge you to adopt the revisions to the proposed NM Primary and Secondary Standards for Excellence in Social Studies as submitted by Think New Mexico and add these Personal Finance and Financial Literacy standards to the revised Economics standards being proposed for 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are inexperienced with the complexity and nuances of financial management. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Sincerely,

Keith Julian
1036 Red Oaks Loop NE
Albuquerque, NM 87122-1340

[EXTERNAL] Deming Public Schools Resolution, Proposed Social Studies Standards

Vicki Chavez <vicki.chavez@demingps.org>

Thu 11/4/2021 5:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (332 KB)

2021 SS Resolution (002).pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good evening,

Please see the attached resolution from the Deming Public Schools Board of Education for entry into public comment regarding the proposed Social Studies Standards, NMAC 6.29.11.

Respectfully,
Vicki Chavez

Vicki K. Chávez
Superintendent
Deming Public Schools

Growing Champions...Every Student...Every Day!

Disclaimer: This message and any attachments are intended for the use of the addressee(s) only and may be confidential and/or legally privileged. If the reader is not the intended recipient, DO NOT READ, notify sender and delete this message. In addition, be aware that any disclosure, copying, distribution or use of the contents of this message is strictly prohibited. The contents of this message, while possibly falling under the exceptions of the Inspection of Public Records ACT [NMSA Chapter 14, Article2] may be subject to inspection by the public.

Resolution of the Deming Public School District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous COVID 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the COVID 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Deming Public School District Board of Education (the “Board”) deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now Therefore, be it Resolved, the Board by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Signed this 28th day of September, 2021.

Respectively submitted,

Deming Public School District Board of Education

Amy Delaney-Hernandez, President

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies george thomas <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 6:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

george thomas
4221 High Mesa Rd SE
rio rancho, NM 87124

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Stan Bies <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 7:25 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I have studied this issue closely and after serious consideration I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. This is a must have skill. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Stan Bies
2849 La Luz Circle NE
Rio Rancho , NM 87144

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

David Shavor <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 8:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

David Shavor
po box 670, 170 Buffalo Trail
Abiquiu, NM 87510

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Frank Leech <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Thu 11/4/2021 9:28 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

New Mexico young people are graduating high school with 'near the bottom' skills in Math and Reading. Having basic Personal Finance Skills would be at least help them better survive in the real world.

So, I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Frank Leech
8600 Tierra Bonita PL, NE
Albuquerque, NM 87122

[EXTERNAL] PED social studies

Michael Gustin <mikegustinre@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 7:37 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I strictly oppose the PED trying to rework the social studies curriculum. We all know what the real reason is and it's wrong.

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Proposed changes in social studies

Dani-su B <dsbason2016@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 8:03 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have two children that attend school in Grant county. If this is implemented in their schools. I will pull them and homeschool, if not completely move to another state that doesn't teach division, and where parents have a say in their children's education. That will be two less children the schools will get funding for. You do not have a right to teach my children division when they have been raised to love all, and that includes loving themselves. The school system is already horrendous in this state, your proposals are going to make it worse. My kids will be better off homeschooling instead of hating themselves and their history.

Sincerely,
Concerned parent
Grant county NM

[EXTERNAL] New PED curriculum

Jamie Pack <jepackman@outlook.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 8:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

It is vital to give families and lawmakers ample time to review the planned new curriculum that is "quickly" going to be imposed on our students. Something this important should never be pushed through the system. Things that will be addressed in this curriculum are anti-American! True history and true facts should be taught, not some leftist theories!!

Proud to be true American citizens!

Jamie & Lori Pack

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Martha Novak <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 9:02 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Martha Novak
329 Sierra Place NE
Albuquerque, NM 87108

[EXTERNAL] New Ped curriculum

Dawn Stradford <dstrad625@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 9:12 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Orion Stradford <osocc2012@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please note I oppose the false and decisive proposed PED curriculum. As a fifth generation New Mexican and Historian I object to the falsehoods presented in the materials. This is not History or Social Studies. This is Marxist's indoctrination. This is against the teachings of Martin Luther King. Our state and country's histories aren't perfect but it is beyond arrogant to judge historical figures by today's standards. My family fought and died for the constitution of the United States of America and I will not let their sacrifices be in vain. This proposed curriculum seeks to destroy our nation and poison our children. This is abuse plain and simple. This is not education. These proposed changes are disgraceful and you should be ashamed.

Your constituent and tax payer.

[EXTERNAL] Changes to Social Studies Standards mayberry@plateautel.net <mayberry@plateautel.net>

Fri 11/5/2021 9:24 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I would like to voice my concerns on the proposed changes to the social studies standards and to the manner in which these changes are being rushed through the system.

Although there are certainly modifications that would be beneficial to our social studies curriculum, the current proposal goes far beyond any changes that are prudent. The greatest strength of any country is to be able to unite behind beliefs that promote freedom of each individual, dignity of human life, and a cooperative spirit for society. The current proposal foregoes these strengths in an effort to Balkanize our culture, to divide people and force them in groups, to place blame and find fault. I am fully opposed to implementing the new standards as proposed.

My second comment is directed at the process by which these standards are being implemented. Good ideas will stand the test of time, and if these standards are able to stand up to strict scrutiny and a full understanding of their implications, they will endure. Time should be allowed for school districts to properly study the proposal, provide comments, propose changes, and garner informed feedback from parents before any change is made. To limit public input only promotes the idea that our state government has abandoned the people in pursuit of its own agenda. The process of making such a large change to the social studies standards should be well evaluated with an eye to how it will affect the future of our united culture.

Sincerely,

Bob Mayberry
Artesia, NM

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Scott Havemann <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 9:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

I don't see the downside in requiring students to be provided simple real life lessons that could save them thousands of dollars over their lifetime and keep them from making short term mistakes with long term consequences.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Scott Havemann
1615 Sereno
Los Alamos, NM 87544

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Suzie Havemann <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 10:13 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

I graduated from Los Alamos High School in 1980 and was fortunate to then graduate from UC Davis with the equivalent of a business degree. I eagerly took an elective course in Personal Finance and couldn't believe all I did not know. As I moved into adulthood, so to speak, and had to navigate rental agreements, tax time, my first home mortgage, and 401K opportunities, I was amazed again about how much I had to learn. More so, I was saddened by how little my friends and roommates knew; a few of them are carrying debts to this day.

Then, my sons graduated Los Alamos High School in the 1990's and the cycle repeated itself. While we did a relatively decent job teaching them about job applications, budgeting, managing a bank account, and savings, we did not teach them about the equally important skills of understanding compound interest rates, credit, investing, insurance, mortgages, etc.

We need to level the playing field so that ALL our students graduate with the knowledge they will need to proceed to the next stage of being independent young adults in our communities. They need to feel confident in reviewing a lease agreement, a car purchase document or loan agreement, a 401K option from their employer, tax returns, etc.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for your service and your consideration.

Sincerely,

Suzie Havemann
1615 Sereno
LOS ALAMOS, NM 87544

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies shirley anderson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 10:27 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

shirley anderson
2180 W. Alameda#11, ,
Santa Fe, NM 87507-9034

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Mary Mumford <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 10:32 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Mary Mumford
2709 Calle Cedro
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] SFPS Comments Regarding Proposed Social Studies Standards

Ruth Williams <rwilliams@sfps.k12.nm.us>

Fri 11/5/2021 10:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear NM Public Education Department,

Please accept the following comments from the Santa Fe Public Schools regarding the proposed social studies standards, 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

The Santa Fe Public Schools urges the New Mexico Public Education Department to adopt the proposed New Mexico Social Studies Standards. Students in our district and the state are counting on us to help them be able to understand the current realities of their world. The proposed standards provide an essential framework for a comprehensive, factually accurate social studies curriculum and support student learning by incorporating the skills that are necessary for accessing and thinking critically about the content.

Through the standards, which expand the scope of facts and stories about the people who underlie them, students will examine the historic, political, social, anthropologic and economic forces that shape people's lives.

The proposed standards include Ethnic, Cultural & Identity Studies standards, which encourage students to explore the differences and similarities between themselves and others.

Given New Mexico's cultural richness, the new standards seek to ensure that one culture is not prioritized over any of the others. Likewise, the new standards expand the historic narrative of the United States of America so that it is not limited to one group or another.

Additionally, the proposed standards are built around vital questions, including: How can students learn about themselves, their families, their classmates, neighbors and the greater world if they do not see themselves and their various cultures and identities represented in the discussion? The commonalities between people are greater than the differences, but how can students discover this if they don't have access to information that is factually accurate and comprehensive?

Importantly, the proposed standards provide for truth-telling in the space of social studies. They are not critical race theory, which is not historically accurate social studies and is employed in higher education by researchers who analyze major systems in society, and they are not curriculum and instructional materials, which are the purview of local districts and charter schools.

What the proposed standards present is the people's history, as defined by Howard Zinn, which "flips the script," looking "at history from the standpoint of the workers and not just the owners, the soldiers and not just the generals, the invaded and not just the invaders" so we can see society more fully.

How they work

Students will be able to consider, "Why is that?" when encountering facts. Homeownership, for example, is a pressing issue in New Mexico. According to a 2020 report by the Federal Reserve, homeownership varies by race. Within the group of homeowners aged 35-54, 73% of Whites own a home, 52% of Hispanics own a home and 50% of Blacks own a home.

Students using the standards can learn how these facts are related to the data about wealth and homeownership. They might consider, for example, that according to History.com, "By the early 50s, only 2 percent of homes built with government-backed mortgages since World War II were occupied by African Americans or other minorities." Again, they might ask, "Why is that?"

The proposed standards align with the mission of the Santa Fe Public Schools: to ensure every student a safe, high-quality and engaging education which values diversity, equity and social justice and fully maximizes District and community resources.

The social studies standards, which were last updated in 2009, date to the 1990s. Consider all that has happened in our state and country since then: the Great Recession, momentous presidential elections, deep reckoning in race relations and a pandemic. The proposed standards meet our current needs for student learning and hold the promise of furthering understanding and respect in our state, region and nation.

The Santa Fe Public Schools endorses these standards because our students must be grounded in a study of "social relationships and the functioning of society" that helps them make meaning of the past and present and the future that awaits them.

These comments are being sent on behalf of Superintendent Hilario "Larry" Chavez. For additional information, please feel free to contact me or Superintendent Chavez, who can be reached at hilchavez@sfps.k12.nm.us or (505) 467-2003,

Sincerely,

Ruth Williams

--

Ruth Williams
Chief of Staff

Santa Fe Public Schools
610 Alta Vista Street, Santa Fe, NM 87505

505-469-9986

rwilliams@sfps.k12.nm.us

Disclaimer: This message and any attachments are intended for the use of the addresses(s) only and may be confidential and/or legally privileged. If the reader is not the intended recipient, DO NOT READ, notify sender and delete this message. In addition, be aware that any disclosure, copying, distribution or use of the contents of this message is strictly prohibited. The contents of this message, while possibly falling under the exceptions of the Inspection of Public Records ACT [NMSA Chapter 14, Article2] may be subject to inspection by the public.

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Curriculum

handsdeb <handsdeb@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 11:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing in my full support of the proposed, inclusive, social studies curriculum for grades K-12. Please do not be intimidated by people protesting it because of fears ginned up by those opposed to including all people.

Thank you,

Debbie Hands
Las Cruces

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on proposed social studies curriculum

Sandra Forquer Dransfield <sandra.forquer@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 11:44 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Sandra Dransfield, PhD

President: Indivisible SOS Santa Fe

96 Avenida Aldea

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87507

Email: sandrea.forquer@gmail.com

November 5, 2021

John Sena

Policy Division

New Mexico Public Education Department

300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena;

Please consider this letter to represent the comments of Indivisible SOS Santa Fe on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. Indivisible SOS Santa Fe is an organization of more than 80 women active at national, state, and local levels to protect democracy, and advocate for policies that decrease inequality as well as protect civil rights and our planet. We are education, business, healthcare, behavioral health, public service, science and legal professionals and artists. We are mothers and grandmothers concerned about the future for our children and future generations. These proposed social studies standards are critically important and we support them.

We commend the PED for undertaking these revisions. We are favorably impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them and appreciate that these standards (i) respect the intelligence of children, (ii) provide a historically accurate presentation of New Mexico, United States, and global events, and (iii) emphasize teaching critical thinking, evaluation of the credibility of data sources, and values that respect differing cultures and perspectives. We believe that children will be better prepared to make decisions, participate in civil society, contribute to their communities, and negotiate in their best interests as a result of having been taught to these standards.

In the rest of this letter, we respectfully suggest the following refinements to the proposed 6.29.11.6 standards:

1. In addition to the focus on similarities and differences among individuals and groups in the Ethnic, cultural, and identity strand, we hope you will introduce universal qualities that make us all human (e.g., life cycle, emotions) and revisit similarities, differences and universalities at least every other grade to create a strong foundation for building identity, empathy and respect.

2. It is necessary to explicitly introduce conflict and conflict resolution under the Civics strand, including conflict resolution skills, providing opportunities for practicing those skills. Such a unit should begin with simple conflicts on the playground and in the family, and then advance to more difficult and complicated levels. The references to “reconciliation” in the standards require these skills, and we would like to see them become integrated into the culture as well as the curriculum of schools.
3. In the Civics “strand”, introduce the concept of a “social contract” by the third grade and reinforce with historical themes in US and World History in middle and high school grades. The “social contract” sets forth the need to balance individual wants and needs against those of the community and national welfare. It is critical that children be able to think about how complicated this balancing is as they explore economic incentives and the functions of government. This should be integrated into the performance standards that address the role played by rules and laws.

Middle and High School Standards

The standards for these years cover an enormous range of subject matter. Providing additional structure would help to clarify how they are to be implemented. For example:

- Distinguish between the content and subject matters that must be covered, and the exploration of themes and skills that may allow teachers and individual students to make choices to study selected areas in greater depth.
- We are concerned that there will not be sufficient time and resources to cover the entire scope of these standards without some assignment of priorities. To preserve the integrity of the standards, we would prefer to see omissions from the standards because of time constraints rather than leaving the decision of what to omit to individual teachers and/or schools.

6.29.11.21 US History

We would like to see more attention given to key US Supreme Court decisions, particularly related to civil rights (including race, national origin, religion, women, indigenous people, disability, LGBTQ) after the civil war. The role of the US Supreme Court in resolving different results reached by state courts or by different federal appellate courts is critical to understanding many current conflicts as well as what it means to be a democratic nation.

6.29.11.22 World History

We would like to see more direct attention to the history of colonization across the globe, both in the Geography and History strands. As written, colonization is addressed under the Ethnic, cultural and identity strand only. Consistent with the guideline provided by PED to have historically accurate standards that are not Eurocentric, it is important to give greater attention to Africa and a broader representation of Asian countries and religions. Understanding the history and consequences of colonization (not just European colonization) is critical to a historically accurate understanding of wars and global economics and conflicts.

In closing, we urge the PED to adopt these standards, with the refinements set forth in this letter. Furthermore, we note that objections to these standards that reference “critical race theory” are not grounded in an accurate understanding of either “critical race theory “ as taught in law schools or the proposed standards. These standards are not derived from, nor based on, any “critical race theory” courses or units within courses, which are generally found only at the graduate school level. Similarly, objections to these standards that assert they are biased or partisan in nature, or somehow negatively affect a child's love of country, are not grounded in fact. Learning how to think critically does not mean rejection of points of view or values but rather enables each person to think for his or herself and come to his or her own conclusions.

The Eurocentric approach adopted in current and earlier social studies and history standards represents a biased approach to education that effectively excludes the contributions of many of our children and omits important parts of our history. These standards are inclusive of all people who have contributed to New Mexico and United States history, and these contributions are honored by the standards in a manner that should allow our children to appreciate different viewpoints, even when they disagree. These standards provide an excellent foundation for citizenship in a democracy that has been, and will continue to be, challenged, as global climate change and economics bring the world closer together and increase the threats of potential conflict and competition for resources.

We again thank the teachers and advisers to PED for their excellent work

Respectfully,

Sandra Dransfield, President, Indivisible SOS Santa Fe

[EXTERNAL] Proposed SS Standards

Thomas Francl <thoma.francl@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 12:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am impressed by your effort in developing a quality education plan for our community. It appears to be quite complete, although there is too much focus on social behavior. I suggest that students learn the hard aspects of living in addition to interpersonal relationships. I have comments in three areas.

Economics

There needs to be a module on personal finance. Children today have no clue what a checkbook is and that it's still widely used. They use Venmo, Apple Pay, and so on and it seems that their only concern is how much they have left to spend. They tend to go for short-term satisfaction, such as Starbucks, Imported kale from Andorra, or a new pair of sneakers. If the Grateful Dead suddenly come to town, their only option is to beg the "Bank of Daddy" for admission money, because they don't have enough left in their account. This cycle of cash flow follows them into adulthood and why our neighbors rely on credit cards to pay for basic needs. They can't afford a house, let alone a used car because they're living "in the moment" unaware that they may need an emergency auto repair.

Geography

Teach the basics first. Where and what makes up our planet. Many adults can't even locate Canada on a map, let alone, know the difference between longitude and latitude.

Inquiry

Emphasize how and why they must seek different viewpoints. Too often, they believe what their Twitter friends are saying and go down a path that they believe in. If their parents watch MSNBC, for example, the children need to seek opposing views from FOX and talk radio. They become ill-informed as a result and don't understand what they believe may not be true. Feelings become facts in their mind. I am now hated by a young adult after I stated that Black Lives Matter co-founders were Marxists knowing that Karl Marx was the father of communism. It's a fact that Patrisse Cullors stated in a 2015 video that they were "trained Marxists" but she thinks I'm a racist. Maybe she believes that communism is a great solution for the ills of our country.

--

Thomas Francl, MBA, CMA, GSD
760.751.1111

[EXTERNAL] input

Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>

Fri 11/5/2021 12:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Rule feedback:

Attempting to establish socially just teaching is an absurdity in and of itself. In these United States, Justice is deemed to be without preference or prejudice. Social Justice is some messed up thinking that justice is possible "with" preference and prejudice.

My suggestions:

All cultures are based on religious practices of a multitude of past beliefs and unless those beliefs/practices, from a historical perspective, are solidly included no culture can be understood leaving any study confusing and divisive at best.

I often use the Spain, Catholic Church, Aztec and then the resulting Mexico and the Christo Paganism adopted as a local example of culture defined through conquest but you can imagine the confusion if one has to include all the Afghans we now have coming into our educational system. They also must be included amongst a multitude of other nationalities recently arrived. The age old racial conflicts in the U.S. that a few loud voices want to perpetuate to give themselves significance is way past relevance.

The history predating America being settled of the warring, slaughtering, enslaving and forced impregnation of our indigenous people in and amongst the variety of tribes themselves is a fine example of the future cultural confusion of students especially in our state with its variety of Native American Tribes who did such things. Then consider the East Coast tribes stretching on up into Canada. They were all nomadic people that carried and forced their cultures and religious practices on other tribes just as modern man has.

The prime culture that holds any relevance must be explored through the teaching of American Culture. A good start would be Wilfred McClay's 2019 American History book, "Land of Hope" as a format for preparing all educators for any culturally inclusive studies because America is the most included multi cultural nation in the world.

If anything at all is adopted it must be an accurate historical perspective on all cultures that comprise the America of today and not just teaching of apparently down trodden cultures that are gasping for air as more cultures fold into the making of American Culture.

Sincerely,
Rob Wood
Las Cruces
575-635-0803

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

Billie Waters <billiefwaters@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 1:07 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Subject: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequality," "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system. This is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites our country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. This is a biased agenda which does NOT ever belong in our public schools.

Billie Waters

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Elizabeth Fulreader <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 1:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Fulreader
9805 Salem Rd NE
Albuquerque, NM 87112

[EXTERNAL] Proposed PED social studies standards nancy jordan <jordannancywk@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 1:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: martin.hickey@nmlegis.gov <martin.hickey@nmlegis.gov>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

If you wish to continue New Mexico's race to the bottom of national educational quality, and the pronounced failure of NM public education to produce literate graduates, capable of being responsible, productive, self-governing members of our society, these proposed standards will greatly assist in the maintenance of our downward trajectory.

Must we focus on the racial and ethnic differences amongst us, with the obvious goal of fomenting discontent, a sense of victimization and loss of personal agency? Must we define people by skin colors arranged into hierarchies of value? Must we stereotype our children into categories from which they are assigned at birth and from which there is no escape? Must we foist upon our children generalizations regarding the "sins" of their (or someone else's) ethnic group from which there is no redemption?

How much more elevating would be an emphasis on E pluribus unum-- out of many, one. How much better would be the teaching of the greatness of our country, in spite of its many faults, a country of both Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass. A country of incredible opportunities for all, regardless of skin color or ethnicity, which is easily illustrated by looking at members of our government, leaders of business and industry and our homes and workplaces.

Our children deserve to be treated as individuals. Our children deserve to be encouraged to make the most of the opportunities they are given, to take responsibility for their accomplishments, to strive to achieve success, and to live lives of virtue.

The proposed standards will not assist in achieving these objectives, but instead will perpetuate and exacerbate suboptimal educational achievement, which will damage our children. Our children deserve better.

Sincerely,
Nancy Jordan

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

Ali Scotten <scottena@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 2:29 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear PED,

I am writing in whole-hearted support for the proposed new social studies standards. They will help prepare our youths to be critical thinkers with empathy.

Sincerely,
Ali Scotten
1194 Warm Springs Ln
Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies

ADRIAN SANDOVAL <adrisand@aol.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 2:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I stand firmly in support of the proposed repeal and replacement of 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies.

Thank you.

Adrian I. Sandoval

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies Standards

Natalie Montemayor <natjmontemayor@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 2:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

Thank you for sharing the redeveloped NMPED Social Studies Standards. There should definitely be more inclusion of the diverse cultures in the standards so that was great to see on there.

With Gratitude,

Natalie Gonzalez (Montemayor) [she/her/hers]

(818) 823-9680

LinkedIn

 Please consider the environment before printing

[EXTERNAL] "Critical Race Theory"

Aaron Atencio <aaron.atencio1@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 3:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a New Mexico Parent. A registered voting Democrat. I do not want Critical race nonsense taught to my children. This is the most racist absurdity our country has seen since segregation. Be wise and don't follow the Stupid Woke crowd into very bad decisions and ideas. It is embarrassing to see what this administration is implementing into our country and our schools. I hope you are smarter than the federal fools who are pushing this absurd "theory" on us. If you do not believe most parents are against this, Just look at what happened in Virginia's election. We Don't want it!

Concerned Parent,

Aaron Atencio

[EXTERNAL] Support draft NM social studies standards

John Maddaus <john.maddaus@maine.edu>

Fri 11/5/2021 3:38 PM

To: Feedback, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena;

I am writing in support of the proposed NM social studies standards, 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, for New Mexico public education schools (K-12).

I am a resident of Albuquerque, having chosen to move to New Mexico in 2019 after my retirement from the faculty of the College of Education and Human Development at the University of Maine. As a faculty member in teacher education, I specialized in multicultural education, and was actively involved in supporting implementation of Chapter 403 of the Maine Public Laws of 2001, which requires the teaching of Maine Native American history and culture in all Maine schools. I bring that interest in teaching indigenous history and culture to New Mexico and to my comments on the draft NM social studies standards.

As a non-Indigenous person and a relative newcomer to New Mexico, I do not consider myself qualified to comment in detail on the specifics of the representation of Indigenous people of New Mexico in the social studies standards. I'm sure there are many Indigenous people of New Mexico who can do that far better than I. However, as someone with broad experience in the field of teaching Indigenous history and culture in K-12 schools, I am pleased to see numerous references to Indigenous peoples and sovereign tribal nations throughout these standards.

I believe that it is essential that all Indigenous children see themselves reflected in the curricula of the schools that they attend, whether in pueblo and tribal communities or in other communities across our state in which Indigenous peoples also reside. I think this is particularly appropriate in social studies, but that it's also important in other disciplines, such as literature, life sciences, and the arts. I believe it's appropriate to include Indigenous people's experiences and perspectives at all grade levels, preferably infused throughout the curriculum, rather than as stand-alone lessons or units of instruction.

I also believe that it's essential for all children, not just Indigenous children, to study Indigenous history and culture, past and present. We live among people of many diverse backgrounds, and we need to have some understanding of experiences and perspectives different from our own in order to treat each other with the kindness and respect that all people deserve as members of our communities. The experiences and perspectives of Indigenous peoples are unique in many ways, not least because they are members of sovereign nations as well as of our state and nation. In order for non-Indigenous people to understand our relationships with Indigenous peoples, we also need to understand the unique government-to-government relationships that Indigenous sovereign nations have with local, state and federal governments.

As I read the draft social studies standards as a teacher educator, I believe that Indigenous educators can not only see themselves and their students where Indigenous peoples and tribes as explicitly referred to, but they can also see many other places where indigenous perspectives can be infused in their teaching. I'm most concerned about the vast majority of teachers in the state who are non-Indigenous. They need to be encouraged to include Indigenous history, culture, and perspectives in their teaching, for the benefit of all their students. I believe these standards are a good step in that direction.

I encourage the Public Education Department to adopt these standards, and then to take the next step of providing all teachers with opportunities to learn how to implement these standards, and specifically the parts regarding Indigenous peoples, in ways that accurate and sensitive to Indigenous knowledge, cultures, experiences, and perspectives.

Thank you for your consideration of these thoughts.

John Maddaus

3136 Indiana St. NE

Albuquerque, NM 87110

john.maddaus@maine.edu

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

Mary Ann Amos <mamos4444@gmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 3:47 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please know that I firmly support the proposed new social studies standards. The United States and the state of New Mexico, in particular, has a rich and diverse history which includes many peoples and many points of view. We must expand how we approach teaching social studies to be inclusive and truthful.

Do not be misled by those attempting to use Critical Race Theory as a reason to not go forward with the new standards. This is a bogeyman being used as a wedge to further divide our country.

Sincerely,

Mary Ann Amos

Santa Fe, NM

--

Mary Ann Amos

505.983.1010 - home

913.206.4444 - mobile

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies felicia morrow <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 3:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Dear Mr. Sena and Governor Lujan,

I am writing to urge you to adopt personal finance training in NM's school curriculum.

Over the last 17 years, I have been involved with a local NM business and many families with school age children. In my experience, financial planning and management skills can be vastly improved and would lead to a better quality of life for NM Citizens. The essential concepts are straightforward and be easily integrated into the math and social sciences curriculums. By doing so, we can make learning more tangible and exciting to children and their families, who deal with financial issues daily.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is important for all students, including those who come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Felicia Morrow

Sincerely,

felicia morrow
17 Old Coach Rd
Santa Fe, NM 87506

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Changes

MaryEllen Shettlesworth <mesworth@msn.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 4:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The wording in the 122 page document of social studies does not reflect what is needed in New Mexico. We need reading, writing, math...the basics, not an opening for progressives to fill our children with their interpretation of our world. For example, using media resources would reflect the progressive view of everything because that is what media promotes. A one-sided debate is not a debate at all.

These standards are broad and anything can be taught within these standards, The suggestions lead to the progressive point of view, i.e., that socialism is all that will save us now.

Most standards, themes, etc sound like an opening to teach Critical Race Theory. When approached with the teacher's union backed philosophy these CRT assignments are not what is needed in New Mexico. We need the basics, not progressive indoctrination of students.

Page 31: ...to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

Page 52: Analyze various forms of media to identify polarizing language, logical fallacy and reasonable judgment.

Page 60: Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impacts of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups.

Page 64: Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally.

Page 75: Examine history from the perspective of the participants by presenting an original historical fiction piece to profile an immigrant's experience including the impact of anti-immigrant policies.

Page 111: Explore the movement against police brutality.

Page 111: Examine the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance and hate crimes.

Page 111: Analyze...the rise of the conservative movement in American politics.

Page 111: Analyze the history of guns in America...and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present and future.

Page 111: Analyze the current state and health of American democracy and create an action plan to protect American democracy.

Page 111: Examine anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States...

Page 111: Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people...

[EXTERNAL] CRT

darrick howlett <darrickhowlett@hotmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 6:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello my son is in 8th grade at koogler middle school and I'm strongly against this change to the history classes it sounds like you're forcing opinions on to the youth and racism and racial tension can never change if you don't let it history is plainly history the good and the bad trying to alter the past solves nothing if this program is put in to place at my child's school I will fight it put the point of removing my kids from your school permanently I feel that lately parents voices and opinions haven't been heard but the schools or our state officials which is incredibly disappointing

Get Outlook for Android

[EXTERNAL] PED's curriculum

Venyce Van Buskirk <venyce@hotmail.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 8:24 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern:

While it is accurate that many people have been oppressed during the development of this great nation, including my ancestors who were driven out of Missouri on the bases of religious differences and their tenants of equality for all during the years leading up to the civil war. My own great, great, great grandfather was abused and unjustly imprisoned at the hands of racist bigoted mobsters. I do not hold the belief that children need to be taught, encouraged or guided in a way that they are somehow oppressed, treated unfairly or unjustly due to the inequalities of the past. We all have stories of injustice in our family histories. We need to focus on the positive changes we have made to overcome many of these scars of the past. We need to promote equality for all and equality of opportunity. It is paramount that we teach our children to thrive in the many challenges that they may encounter throughout their lives; not teach our children to use their circumstances of birth as a reason that they can not achieve. All children can achieve greatness when given the opportunity to do so.

Please review your negative agenda towards failure and excuses not to achieve.

Sincerely,
Venyce VanBuskirk

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

Joan Zucker <cellobelly@icloud.com>

Fri 11/5/2021 10:06 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I'm very excited by the proposed changes to the Social Studies Standards for NM public schools. Bravo!

They encourage a diversity of views, that will engender tolerance which is so needed today. And they will help students to study, value and preserve their own cultures. So important!

Please register my opinion.

Thank you,
Joan Zucker
Albuquerque, NM 87104

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies and CRT

Barbara Witt <bwitt12@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 6:45 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I completely disagree that Critical Race Theory should be taught in schools. There is enough divisiveness already without this being taught. Condoleezza Rice, former secretary of state, denounced critical race theory and declared that, 'black children could be completely empowered without making white children feel bad for their race'.

I've attached an article written by Representative Rebecca Dow. Please take a moment to read it. I feel the language in the new curriculum, making continual references to 'inequality', 'racism' and 'injustice' perpetuates the division you are trying to correct. Teach true history, the good and the bad, without the divisive wording. Children are color-blind. Let's try to perpetuate that concept into adulthood.

Thank you,
Barbara Witt

LOCAL VOICES

Social studies changes are simply CRT divisiveness

BY REP. REBECCA DOW
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES REPUBLICAN

It is always amazing to watch progressives resort to their usual tactic of blaming their opponents for doing what they are doing. For example, the newly released proposal by the New Mexico Public Education Department to “rework” the K-12 Social Studies Standards is just another example of a nationwide movement to instill Critical Race Theory and other progressive ideologies into the minds of school children.

Predictably, the usual progressive activists and publications claim conservatives are engaging in a disinformation campaign about these standards. Unsurprisingly, it is the progressives who are hiding the facts and distorting public perception of the new standards.

It is clear New Mexico’s education standards are subpar and need updating, most certainly in light of Yazzie v. Martinez. However, there must be thorough public debate regarding what these new standards should contain and what students are required to learn. Many New Mexicans

Weigh in

More information, including the draft standards, is at <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/literacy-humanities/social-studies/>. Submit written comments at feedback@state.nm.us through Nov. 12 or attend the public hearing from 1-3 p.m. Nov. 12 at Mabry Hall in the Jerry Apodaca Education Building, 300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Santa Fe. Speakers will have up to three minutes each to comment.

believe the current version of PED’s new standards is deeply flawed and needs numerous revisions and eliminations.

For example, these proposed standards require students in Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies to assess how social policies and economic forces “offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity.” This language is classic CRT as it perpetuates division and racism, rather than a shared commitment to the ideals of equality and opportunity.

Buried within the 122-page proposal is a requirement that U.S. history students “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” This proposed standard is CRT ideology in stressing “equity” and a “just economic system,” and it follows the progressive mantra that our capitalistic system is inherently unfair and must be replaced with the paternalistic system of socialism.

Numerous other examples within these standards embrace the progressive mindset, including requiring students to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today; compare the patterns of exploration, destruction and occupation of the Americas; and explore the movement against police brutality.

Progressive activists want you to believe these proposed standards are nothing more than updating students on historical events or improving their critical thinking skills. They also claim since CRT is never specifically mentioned anywhere in the standards, there is no effort to force these concepts onto students. The reality is these standards make continual references to “inequity,” “oppression,” “unequal power relations,” “racism” and “injustice,” and these words reveal the true intentions of the progressive-bloc to impose CRT’s flawed ideology onto students.

The history of our state and nation is not perfect in terms of economic and human rights, but that does not require altering social studies curriculums to embrace a distorted view that Americans are racist and all things can be described in terms of oppressor and oppressed. Rather than encouraging division and victimhood among our diverse populations, students should be encouraged to understand we are all Americans and everyone has opportunities for economic advancement based on the principles of family, education and work.

New Mexicans must voice their disapproval of these new social studies standards and do so quickly as the public comment period ends Nov. 12. If people do not express their concerns, our students will never receive a balanced understanding of why America and New Mexico should be admired for their many positive attributes.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Beth Enson <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 7:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

Let's catch up with the rest of the country and add personal finance education to our state's curriculum! As residents of one of the three poorest states in the nation, NM students need this information to protect themselves and their future families! I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Beth Enson
PO Box 503
Arroyo Seco, NM 87514

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Carolyn Beaty <carolynbeaty@comcast.net>

Sat 11/6/2021 8:02 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Carolyn Beaty
1455 Valle Lane NW
Albuquerque, NM 87107
carolynbeaty@comcast.net

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena;

Please consider this letter to be my formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. As a concerned citizen, I am very concerned that our youth are given the knowledge and skills needed to negotiate through—and thrive—in today's America.

I am writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. I want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and I was impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. If these standards had been taught during the past few decades, I am convinced we would have a healthier democracy.

These standards respect the intelligence of children, teach critical thinking, and value that respect differing cultures and perspectives.

In closing, I urge the department to adopt the bulk of these standards, with refinements. I hope the department will stand up to those who seek to preserve the old approach to teaching social studies and history, that is Eurocentric and fails to enable children to face the challenges that are ever-present in their daily lives. Children need to master the standards outlined in this regulation to prepare to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectfully,

Carolyn Beaty

[EXTERNAL] In support of new SS standards

Katie Bruell <ktbruell@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 8:20 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I write to you as a former licensed K-12 teacher in the state of New Mexico with endorsements in social studies, math, language arts, science, and library/media. I am strongly in favor of the proposed new standards, as I believe they will educate our future adult New Mexicans in a complete and factual way, and prepare them for the world they will be entering as adults.

Thank you for all of the thought and work that has been put into this process.

Katherine Bruell
Los Alamos
505-310-4095

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Dorothy Rowe <dorothyrowe1206@yahoo.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 8:57 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

We are 100% AGAINST teaching the CRT to our children. Reverse racism is no more right than racism itself. It is the school's job to teach math, reading, etc NOT racism.

Mark and Dorothy Rowe
8 Road 3306
Aztec, NM 87410

Sent from Yahoo Mail on Android

[EXTERNAL] feedback

Patricia Goff <tishgoff@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 9:18 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing to express DISAGREEMENT with the proposal to rework the K-12 Social Studies Standards. I DO NOT APPROVE of these proposed revisions, which will serve to foster division rather than build community.

Thank you,
Patricia

[EXTERNAL] feedback on standards revisions goff goff <goffbros2@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 9:22 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom it May Concern:

I do not approve of NMPED's potential changes to the K-12 Social Studies Standards. I do not agree with the revisions being offered and do not wish for tax monies to support the proposed changes.

Silas Goff

[EXTERNAL] Feed back on Opinion being taught in NM Schools

Melissa Grossetete <Melissa@enviroworksforyou.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 9:27 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I strongly disagree with Opinion being taught in NM Schools.

The proposed rules are fraught with opinion that will only cause discourse, and take focus away from facts and the skills that matter to succeed in higher education or in the workplace.

Our State should be concentrating on improving Math, Reading, Writing and Science knowledge in our schools. We are close to dead last in these areas in the USA, and most definitely even lower on the International scale.

Melissa Grossetete, SHRM-SCP

Vice President

Enviroworks, LLC

PO Box 340

Edgewood, NM 87015

505-286-4891 Office

505-286-4965 Fax

www.enviroworksforyou.com

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.1.9 NMAC, General Provisions

Cynthia Feiden-Warsh <cfeidenwarsh@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 9:35 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The proposed rules for an updated social studies for K-12 in New Mexico provides an opportunity for New Mexico students to begin to learn both critical thinking skills and the real history of the State and Country.

As good as the curriculum is, it will not be successful unless both the resources and the time are put into training teachers on the materials and how to teach the material. Please provide adequate training and funds to ensure that the excellent work in developing the curriculum is combined with the tools to implement.

Cynthiaj Feiden-Warsh

Cynthia Feiden-Warsh
cfeidenwarsh@gmail.com
cell: 301-908-3673
Home: 505-467-8251
41 Centaurus Ranch Rd
Santa Fe, NM 87507

[EXTERNAL] Comment on new standards

beckysmarshall@gmail.com <beckysmarshall@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 9:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello, my name is Rebecca Marshall, and I live in Albuquerque and have four school-aged children. I am asking you to please reject the proposed social studies standards for New Mexico. I agree that the current standards are inadequate and should be reworked, but absolutely reject them as currently written. They make repeated references to “inequity,” “oppression,” “unequal power relations,” “racism,” and “injustice.” These words are steeped in Critical Race Theory, and aim to impose this ideology onto our students. I have one minority child and three non-minority children. I do not want any of them growing up thinking America is inherently racist, because it isn’t, or that any of them, simply by virtue of being born with a certain skin color are victims or oppressors, because they are not. We need a balanced, fair understanding of New Mexico and America being taught in our schools, one that is rooted in truth, not in a misguided and extremely harmful political ideology. If we implement these new standards, many more families (including ours) will choose to move their children to private schools or homeschool, further degrading our public school system. Please say no to these harmful standards.

Thank you for your time and consideration,

Rebecca Marshall

815 Suzanne Ln. SE

Albuquerque, NM 87123

(505) 980-3341

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Susan Slade <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 10:11 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

What could be more important than teaching our children how to manage the money they will earn in their lifetimes. Having that knowledge as they leave school will help ensure their success at whatever life choices they make. This is one subject that should not be "learn as you go".

So, I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Susan Slade
2311 Ranch Club Rd, PMB 166
Silver City, NM 88061

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

Elisa Sánchez <xiqana100@aol.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 11:13 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am an 81 year old, born, raised and educated in NM. I am a member of the majority of students in the NM schools - Mexican/mestiza, Chicana, Latina. I whole heartily support the new Social Studies rules, why? NM has been at the bottom of all scales of education in this country using the old system and it is time to try something new. The last time I saw myself or anything about me reflected in the NM school system was in the 4th grade - and that was in 1948!! Basically, the majority of NM students: Mestizos and Native American were written out of the curriculum when the U. S. colonized the area after Mexico lost the Mexican American War and we became part of the U.S. Our cultures and languages deserve to be included in the curriculum and I am sure that it will make a difference for our standing educationally. Si Se Puede!!!

Elisa Sánchez
3045 Buena Vida Circle
Las Cruces, 88011

"He who is not angry when there is just cause for anger is immoral. Why? Because anger looks to the good of justice. And if you can live amid injustice without anger, you are immoral as well as unjust."

Thomas Aquinas (1225-1274)

[EXTERNAL] approve new rules

Arthur Meyer <ajmeyer229@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 11:24 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I strongly encourage curriculum that addresses our history of racism and injustice. I am a pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. Our church is involved in anti-racism education. We have emphasized education about the "Doctrine of Discovery" that legitimized centuries of violence and oppression against indigenous people in this land. I am white but have two close relatives married to African Americans. Racism is a painful legacy in the United States and in New Mexico and should be addressed in public education.

I know there is a lot of noise about "critical race theory" as a catchall phrase opposing such things as the proposed curriculum standards. In my view that outrage is ill informed.

I support the work that has been done in revising the curriculum standards and continued study of these issues. It will help our children.

Thank you,

Arthur J Meyer
Farmington
(505)320-0042

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards 6.29.11 NMAC

NANCY MURPHY <namurphy111@comcast.net>

Sat 11/6/2021 12:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena;

This letter is in support of the proposed revisions to social studies standards 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

While I have not read all of the proposed standards in detail, I have read a summary of them and I have looked at specific sections of the proposed changes. These new standards create a framework for public school children from the beginning of their education through the end of high school. This framework will encourage critical thinking, open discussion of historic and current issues, and evaluation of data and data sources. Important concepts of civics, economics, geography, and cultural differences are explored and reinforced year after year, helping students to become informed, effective citizens.

As a retired citizen who has always been a supporter of public education, I urge the department to adopt these standards which were so thoughtfully developed by social studies teachers. The young people of tomorrow need all the skills they can get to thrive in our fast-paced global world. The proposed social studies standards will help them acquire those skills.

Respectfully,

Nancy A. Murphy1 Via Tertia
Santa Fe, NM 87507
505-780-5519

[EXTERNAL] CRT programs for New Mexico schools...

BRUCE HIGGINS <bruce1946_69@msn.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 2:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr. Sena,

The CRT programs SHOULD NOT be put into our schools. This program distorts the history of the USA and sends a very, very bad message to the children in our schools!!!

William Bruce Higgins

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Marisa Ochoa <mrochoa87@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 2:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NMPED,

Thanks for sharing these proposed standards with us parents as we are in charge of our children's future and it is the public school's responsibility to assist us in our quest to raise and educate them properly. With that being said, I do take issue with a few of these proposals due to an undertone of viewing history from the perspective of race and gender. I do not believe that this is necessary to provide a complete education on our history and am concerned about how these topics may be misrepresented by a teacher with personal bias. The public educators' responsibility is to provide facts and not their own opinions on such matters.

I did think majority of the proposed standards were acceptable but the specific standards that should be left out are the following:

- 8.12 We do not need to focus on how "diverse groups were denied equality and opportunity" because the focus should be on how America fought to where it is today and anyone can become anything should they put in the time and effort to do so
- 8.78 Our children do not need to study "systemic oppression" as the facts will show the truth and again a teacher with bias could try to present this as ongoing, just as some prominent individuals in society do to this day. Not all parents agree with this idea and this is a topic that should be avoided.
- 8.81 When discussions about the Ku Klux Klan are made the educators should be required to explain the true origins of this group
- 9-12US.123 The "impacts of social and political conservatism in US on diverse groups of people" is mentioned here and I as a parent am wondering what this means. This does not seem appropriate as it seems to segregate a very diverse and present group of people with conservative ideas and paint them as oppressors. This should be removed as well.
- 9-12.US.130 This involves study of the "activism of the LGBTQIA+ community" and I do not wish for my children to be taught about this political issue. Not all parents agree with this movement and as a hot political issue should be left out of the classroom. We do not need our children to be indoctrinated in one way or another about the activities of this group as we can teach them what they should believe on our own. Not the place of the NMPED!
- 9-12.US.132 This involves the study of gun violence and is another issue that could be easily misrepresented by a biased educator and should not be taught in the classroom
- 9-12.US.141 This involves the study of "the plan of the US government during the COVID-19 pandemic" and is another political issue at the moment that should just be left out due to recent trauma for many people and sensitivity to ongoing issues related to the pandemic.

Thank you for your time and I hope your group listens to us parents about our very real concerns and also about the parts we are ok with our children being educated about. Parents are the ones who are in charge of their children's future and we should absolutely have a say in what goes on in the classroom.

Respectfully,

Dr. Marisa Ochoa
Rio Rancho, NM 87124

[EXTERNAL] Fully Support a Full and Critical View of Our Complex History

Rodney Sauter <r_m_sauter@msn.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 4:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I write in support of the development of the draft New Mexico Social Studies Standards. As a lifelong student of history, I believe that the purpose of history should be for students to learn about our context today from what has occurred in the past. This requires an exploration of all the historical facts and listening to historically marginalized perspectives. The focus of history should not be patriotism, nationalism, or even comfort.

I am the product of 4 different centuries of European colonization of North America. My earliest known immigrant ancestor (from England) set foot on the shores of what we now call Virginia in 1610. My most recent immigrant ancestor (of Polish heritage) arrived in New York in 1910. Other ancestors of German, French, English, and Scottish heritage arrived in the 18th and 19th centuries. I acknowledge my own privilege as a result of this colonization and my positionality as a white male in US society. I believe that we need to acknowledge and learn from our complex past so we can move forward, together, as a diverse group of people.

The impacts of the twice-colonized context of New Mexico (first by Spain and then by the United States) need to be acknowledged. Our children and youth can handle complexity. We need to empower them to do so! Students must have the opportunity to explore in full the deep and complex history and heritage of New Mexico and the United States.

Sincerely,
Rodney Michael Sauter

592 Canyon Point Road
Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards Feedback

Meredith Machen <meredith.machen@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 4:52 PM

To: Mer Machen <mermachen@cybermesa.com>; educ@lwnm.org <educ@lwnm.org>; FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Social Studies Standards Feedback

The League of Women Voters of New Mexico supports the proposed Social Studies Standards. They impart accurate representations of our complex history and develop the civic and analytical thinking skills essential to thriving in our diverse society. As a multicultural, multilingual, and majority-minority state, New Mexico's public education system must provide students an understanding of the nature of democracy in learning environments that respect diverse cultures and perspectives. This social studies curriculum will develop a broad understanding of history and foster an awareness of the rights, privileges, and responsibilities of participation in a democratic society. Students will learn to manage resources for the benefit of both present and future generations.

Meredith R. Machen, Ph. D.
LWVNM Education Co-Chair

--

Meredith Ross Machen

505-577-6337

Vote as if your life depended on it!

Meredith.machen@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies for K-12

EDWARD BUTTNER <ebutner4301@comcast.net>

Sat 11/6/2021 5:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern:

America is a great country with a short history. I believe there has been more good than bad. There is still much to do in making it even better than it is and will be. I don't think that emphasizing what divides us to the exclusion or minimization of what unites us is the best approach. More emphasis needs to be placed on educating versus indoctrination. There has been much of our history that may not have received the attention it deserves but let's not take the approach that it's payback time.

We have all this talk about uniting and even a team named UNITED but if you make a point of telling people why they are different and should be either grateful or resentful depending on where they are on the spectrum, I see a sad outcome.

Sincerely
Edward Buttner
Concerned New Mexico resident

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Andy Sutton <asutton@Rinchem.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 5:16 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I 100% disagree with any decision to implement CRT as part of the children's curriculum.

The fact that this is an option on the table is telling of who you are as a person.

The world doesn't need more division, rather inclusion.

CRT isn't the way.

My children won't be participating, and I will do everything I can as a parent to fight against this preposterous and ridiculous narrative.

Concerned father,

Andrew Sutton

[EXTERNAL] social studies standards in New Mexico

Carla Sanders Pope <csanderspope@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 5:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

As the parents of three NM public school students, we approve of the proposed social studies standards.

Respectfully,

Carla Sanders and Michael Pope

[EXTERNAL] Opposition to New Social Studies Standards

Elizabeth Ortega <diamondliz55@yahoo.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 7:35 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am appaled at the proposed revision of the Social Studies Curriculum! I believe the whole revision is intended to groom students with disdain for our countrie's history and prepare them for a corrupt, socialist government that will bring our country down religiously, socially and economically. I would prefer to educate our children with true history, and the values and goals that made the United States of America, the greatest nation in the world. We have enjoyed freedoms and prosperity not always enjoyed by other nations and societies, because we have kept our religious faith and traditions throughout the history of our unique, blessed government.

Those who wish to remove our freedoms and rule with the iron fist of communism are driving this new Social Studies curriculum to indoctrinate our precious children, and create an ignorant population of unquestioning followers who will never taste the successes of creativity and free enterprise. I as a parent would not allow my child to be taught this horrible curriculum but instead, would educate them myself with truth and dignity, that will sustain them throughout their lives!

In all sincerity,

Elizabeth Ortega, Educator

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Scott Hedglin <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 7:35 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Scott Hedglin
815 Calle Amor SE
Albuquerque, NM 87123

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Linda G. Harris <lgradyne@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 8:11 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Greetings,

I would like to comment on the proposed social studies standards for New Mexico. I am the author of several books about New Mexico, including the first Illustrated History of Las Cruces, published in 1993. In 2006, I also wrote the text for the only historical exhibit on Las Cruces history, which was exhibited at the Branigan Cultural Center in Las Cruces. In writing that text, I followed the social studies guidelines for middle school students in their New Mexico history studies.

It is distressing to read of the objections to the expanded standards. History is neither myth nor static. It is our responsibility to prepare these students to assess and evaluate history and to use those skills for lifelong learning. Do not allow the noise of politics to drown out your responsibility to New Mexico's future leaders and thinkers.

Respectfully,

Linda G. Harris
lgradyne@gmail.com
575-405-2177
4932 Tobosa Rd.
Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] the proposed repeal and replace of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies p-kearney@earthlink.net <p-kearney@earthlink.net>

Sat 11/6/2021 10:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have read the following document https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/wp-content/uploads/2021/09/21-15540-Draft-NM-Standards-For-Teachers-PRE-RULE-VERSION-8_31_21-508-fmt.pdf

I'm impressed with the quality and depth of this curriculum. I'm a retired college professor, and if only my students (in Virginia) had come to college with this kind of background in inquiry and evaluation of sources, my job teaching incoming freshmen would have been easier. The proposed social studies curriculum has the potential to create thoughtful, engaged, respectful citizens who know how to ask important questions and seek answers from quality sources. I appreciate the inclusiveness. This is real teaching. Real education. I'm especially impressed with the third and fourth grade content. This will provide a foundation for analytical thinking at higher grade levels—and throughout life. I support the adoption of this plan.

Patricia Kearney
526 Marr St. Apt. 5
Truth or Consequences, NM 87901

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies

Karyl Ann Armbruster <kaskacayman@gmail.com>

Sat 11/6/2021 10:35 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

"The goal of the updating New Mexico's Social Studies Standards is to ensure that all of our students see themselves reflected in the classroom, that our learning environments are culturally and linguistically responsive, and that the rich backgrounds and perspectives of all New Mexicans come alive in the classroom," That is it. No shaming (although it has been done to the minorities) and no political agenda. Each child should see themselves in history....Black, Asian, Mexican, Hispanic, Jewish, Muslim, gay, trans, etc. That is America. Those who do not feel that way have the choice to move to another state that is not a majority-minority state or send their children to a private school. It really is as simple as that. We have made progress in producing dolls of color, portraying individuals with disabilities on TV and gay/lesbian individuals and families on various shows. You cannot hide from the truth...reality...the world.

I wonder why I was never taught that 900 Jews on the luxury liner St. Louis who were escaping the Nazis were turned away from Cuba and then were turned away from THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA....Only to return to Europe where many, but not all were killed? How is that possible?... And is it still true?

Karyl Ann Armbruster
FMR District 4
NM Public Education Commissioner
Special Education Teacher - 17 years - Los Alamos Middle School
22 Years Special Education K-8 in California

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

William Rushing <wbrushing@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 8:33 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing in support of the new social studies standards that have been proposed for New Mexico K-12 public education. For far, far too long the study of history has been focused almost exclusively on the deeds of white men, who today represent just 37% of the U.S. population. The notion that teaching the history of all peoples is controversial is the product of a political and media narrative crafted by white nationalists who seek to weaponize education so as to regain control of a society that has largely rejected their intolerant view of this nation, where Native Americans stay on the reservation, LGBTQ people stay in the closet, immigrants go back to where they came from and African Americans 'know their place.' Those white nationalists on corporate state television used to at least use dog whistles; now they use foghorns to project their hateful rhetoric, and their efforts have revealed that a significant percentage of their authoritarian political party even reject democracy. The same voices that are suggesting that 'critical race theory,' which none of them can even explain, not be taught in the public schools (spoiler alert: it's not) are the same voices trying to retcon the January 6th attempt to overthrow the legitimate government of the United States into a 'peaceful protest.'

Educators have a duty to teach the truth, whether that is the pythagorean theorem, the correct use of prepositions, climate change or the history of racism in the United States. It is clear from the comments, many of which are being submitted by people who don't even live in the Land of Enchantment, that we have a lot of work to do. If adopted, these proposed standards would do much to lift the voices of marginalized peoples and allow all New Mexicans to feel that their histories are represented and respected. Those who oppose these standards need to check their hate and attempt to rediscover their empathy. Let's step back from an over-emphasis on jingoistic indoctrination in the public schools, embrace truth and celebrate our diversity.

William Rushing
Santa Fe, NM

[EXTERNAL] New social studies curriculum

Alyssa Howells <howellsalyssa83@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 10:34 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello. I am writing you in regards to the new social studies that the state is trying to pass. As a human, US citizen and New Mexican I do NOT agree with the new curriculum. This will only divide our us. Divide our children and future generations. I do think It's important to teach our children true NM history and history of this beautiful country we live in. We do not need to teach them to hate, we do not need to teach them to look at each other as an oppressor vs oppressed. We need to pull together. Teach them the FACTS of History. And teach them to love each other. Love NM. Love the USA. And change the world. Thank you!
Concerned parents!

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Standards - OPPOSED

Marguerite Martinez <margra80@yahoo.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 10:46 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning,

As a parent of a 14-year old and a 5 year-old I am strongly OPPOSED to the proposed social standards for the reasons given below:

- Specifically in reference to Theme 5: Myself and My Community, kindergarteners should NOT be taught the categorization of people via social identity; the first stage of social identity is categorization which leads to segregation. Kids don't need to be taught to segregate at all, ever! Kids instead need to understand that we're all equal. Segregation leads to numerous issues such as racism, discrimination, and inequality, which the founders of our country worked years and years to fix. We don't need more division in this world. Kids at this age are barely learning fundamentals such as putting their own clothes on; brushing their own teeth; using scissors independently; and learning colors, letters, and numbers. They should be learning to use their memory and the fundamentals of communication. If I as a parent choose to teach my children about categorizing, that should be my choice and not that of the school and I certainly do not choose to teach social identity to my kids.
- All the proposed standards in grades K-5 include teaching kids about "identity", specifically Theme 5 in grades K-5. Kids should not be taught identification based on division such as race, religion, and ethnicity, sex, etc., instead they should be taught to identify with everyone.

Social studies standards should be based on facts, not on theory which is what these new standards are proposing. In reviewing the proposed changes, they are proposing to teach kids in early learning years things their brain is not capable of understanding at their age. Instead kids need to learn reasoning by trial and error, and not be trained to identify others' differences which is what these standards are proposing. These standards are proposing to teach our kids how and what to think instead of teaching them how to learn, which is what schools should be doing. Kids need to be able to think and reason for themselves. Let the parents teach opinion and thought and leave teaching facts and history to the kids.

Thank you for your time,

Marguerite Johnson
1001 Acapulco Court
Rio Rancho, NM 87144
505-228-6695

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards Public Comment

LAURA ADKINS <laura.adkins@clovis-schools.org>

Sun 11/7/2021 1:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

TO: PED Public Hearing of SS Standards

Horace Mann developed 6 guiding principles in education:

1. Citizens cannot maintain both ignorance and freedom,
2. Education should be paid for, controlled, and maintained by the public,
3. Education should be provided in schools that embrace children from varying backgrounds,
4. Education must be nonsectarian
5. Education must be taught using tenets of a free society
6. Education must be provided by well-trained, professional teachers

The application of these principles does not only make the US public education unique but is held to higher standards of responsibility to maintain credibility. It is by trust and respect that parents place the education of their children in the educator's hands.

As an educator of over 30 years, I have never been more worried about public education. The public trust in our system has eroded. The timing and language in some of the proposed Social Studies Standards only adds to this stressful and volatile time in our country. The trust in public education needs to be regained by building on the guiding principles. Education must be free of religious and political ideology so that we can give each child the support and instruction they need to obtain their K-12 education.

First, I would like to ask PED to allow more time to work with the draft of the standards. Some of the Standards are vague, worded incorrectly, and incomplete. This is a draft of social studies standards and is not ready to be considered for a ruling.

Second, We need to remove standards that appear secular (biased by political or religion origins). Schools have improved and developed cultural, linguistic practices that improve public education. When we overstep parental authority and promote instead of support students, we have become biased and diminish trust in our school systems. When including social justice standards focus on the change in behavior, not the assumptions of bias. The focus of some standards on specific groups of people can lead people to automatically assume political bias.

Examples:

5-12 - Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. - Possible restructure - Describe how diversity in values, beliefs, and points of view have shaped and formed historical events.

6.16 - Identify their family and personal cultural identity, ~~determine how they want to present themselves to the world~~, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

6.22 - Explain how the treatment of people (past and present) shaped identities and culture. Possible restructure: Identify the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

7.28 - Evaluate how society's responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry. Possible restructure: Evaluate how biased words and behaviors and unjust practices, laws, and institutions limit the rights and freedoms of people based on their identity groups.

7.6 Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures. Possible restructure: Compare and Contrast some of the people, groups, and events in social justice history, their beliefs, and ideas that influenced them.

7.82 - Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impacts of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups. Possible restructure: Develop an action plan that consists of friends, family, and community members to make our world fairer for everyone.

8.20 - Identify facets of personal identity, ~~determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group~~, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

9-12 U.S. 129. - Explore the movement against police brutality. Possible Restructure: Explore the role of law enforcement in a free society and compare and contrast how that role has changed over time including historical events that have changed the role of law enforcement.

9-12 US 130 - Examine experiences and activism of the LBGTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes. Possible restructure: Examine social movements and activism in US history. (This will open it up to explore several great historical movements that have impacted the US)

9-12 US. 132. - Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future. Possible restructure: Examine the history of guns in America; the Boston Tea Party, 2nd Amendment, gun laws of past and present, trends of Gun violence and impact of future laws in the US.

9-12 US 134. (Again because you begin the standard with Anti-immigrant sentiment the standard seems politically driven because of current issues).
Examine anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States over time and the experiences of diverse immigrant groups past and present. Possible restructure: Analyze the role of immigration in U.S. History and its impact on U.S. Labor force, economy, population, taxes, housing, etc.

9-12 US 135 - Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including ~~Native Americans and African Americans.~~ (Your focus on certain groups of people makes this standard bias and one of inequity)

9-12 US 141. Compare and Contrast the response and plan of the US government during the COVID pandemic with the AIDS epidemic and the 1918 influenza. (COVID 19 pandemic is still in progress so you can't compare the response, we are still responding every day) Possible Restructure: Compare and contrast historical disasters that had a major impact on US History.

Third, some standards need to not just focus on a particular sub-group.

8.84 - Use an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of ~~June~~teenth. Possible additions: include ceremonies and celebrations from all cultures, tribes, etc in the US and New Mexico.

9-12 US 104 - Analyze state-sponsored persecution and "othering" including anti-Semitism and homophobia? Possible additions: anti-Semitism, people with disabilities, "inferior natives", homosexuals. (Broaden the standard to include a greater study of the prosecutions)

Fourth, the Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies section leans toward the current political drama that is impacting our country. The words: systemic inequity, unequal power need to be eliminated from the wording of the standards. Including wording like "self-identified", "determine how they want to present themselves" seems to encourage instead of support students. Education needs to support each individual from whatever background or identity for the purpose of obtaining their education.

One example - ECI 16 - Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement. Possible restructure: Assess how social policies and economic forces impact the diversity of cultures, races, and genders in various industries.

The enormous amount of standards being added to the Social Studies curriculum will be very difficult to teach as well as to evaluate for a public hearing. I appreciate the opportunity to participate and again would like to recommend that additional time be granted to PED, parents, citizens of NM, and educators before these standards become law.

Laura Adkins

Concerned Citizen, educator, administrator in public education
Portales, NM

Alone we can do so little, together we can do much. -- Helen Keller

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

Disclaimer: Privileged/confidential information may be contained in this message and may be subject to legal privilege. Access to this email by anyone other than the intended is unauthorized. If you are not the intended recipient (or responsible for delivery of this message to such person), you may not use, copy, distribute, or deliver this message to anyone this message (or any part of its contents) or take any action in reliance on it. In such case, you should destroy this message immediately.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies

jtritten121@comcast.net <jtritten121@comcast.net>

Sun 11/7/2021 2:16 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have reviewed the material available at <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/literacy-humanities/social-studies/>

My comments are as follows:

1. The proposed new standards are written in jargon not understandable to the general public. Therefore I assume that the PED does not really want inputs from the average resident of New Mexico or the parents of New Mexican students.
2. It appears that the emphasis is on what is wrong with America, and there is little emphasis on what is right, what has been exemplary, and what made this country great.
3. It appears that the emphasis is on forcing various agendas into the classroom rather than teaching students how to think and letting them make up their own minds.

James Tritten, PhD
491 Valle Vista Rd
Corrales, NM 87048-6404

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards - comment

Erika EJA Gmail <erika.jones.eja@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 2:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I attended Albuquerque public schools; elementary through high school, as did my children. My grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, attend(ed) the Farmington school system.

I think the new Social Studies Standards are excellent! Thanks to all the dedicated, wise, hard working educators who designed them.

I'm especially impressed with the inclusion of:

- actual history, especially as it tells the truth about racism and repression in New Mexico and America.
- telling the truth about our history, including horrible things done to past (and current) generations by our forefathers, fathers and mothers.
- teaching children how to examine and evaluate sources of information.
- teaching children how to think, how to think critically, how to reject lies even when those lies are padded with "but-everyone-agrees" or "this-is-exciting".
- teaching children how to value who they are and how to value others!

Bravo to all those who developed the new standards and who will be developing the curriculum and training to implement these standards.

All the best!

Erika Jones

10501 Lagrima De Oro NE, Apt 101

Albuquerque, NM 87111-3738

Cell: (505) 699-4600

Erika.Jones.eja@gmail.com

Sent from my iPad. Please excuse typos.

[EXTERNAL] Re: Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Curriculum Update

Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>

Sun 11/7/2021 2:27 PM

To: David Tofsted <dtofsted@gmail.com>Cc: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; juan garcia <garciagd1955@gmail.com>; ROBERT W ENDLICH <bendlich@msn.com>; rick@verde-environmental.com <rick@verde-environmental.com>; Jon P. Kahler <jpk476@comcast.net>; Dale Ann Lathrop <dalathrop87@gmail.com>; rebecca.dow@nmlegis.gov <rebecca.dow@nmlegis.gov>; Ronnie Sisneros <ronnie1519@gmail.com>; Bill Kolbin <figetaboutit@aol.com>; Bill Beerman <williamsr@wbeerman.com>; Ray Jaramillo <rjaramillo1@lcp.net>; Gilbert Bishop <gibishop@hotmail.com>; Bob Murray <robertkmurray@gmail.com>; Bob Rogers <bjoelrogers42@gmail.com>; David Cheek <dcheek@pdq.net>; Kimberly Skaggs <kim@gopnm.org>; Steve Pearce <Steve@gopnm.org>; Janice Arnold-Jones <jearnoldjones70@gmail.com>; Dave Gallus <davegal1@msn.com>; Daniel ☺ <daniel@missionoffaith.org>CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

David,

Wow, you took my thoughts to the Nth degree. Thank you. If you presented that to a jury this whole insane curriculum revision project would hit the trash can. This treatise of the subject you have so eloquently put together in such an easy to grasp short burst format should be published because you included everything we need to know on a curriculum revision of this type. These overeducated under intelligent bureaucrats are insidious at best and are totally desiring to turn neighbor against neighbor because it is so much easier to manage disgruntled people by continually steering them to blame their lot in life as the result of another's action.

Rob

On Nov 7, 2021, at 10:00 AM, David Tofsted <dtofsted@gmail.com> wrote:

When we consider the school subject matter of Social Studies what do we truly mean? We must mean, essentially, what mankind has learned over the past six thousand or so years about how human beings can get along with one another to form social orders in which we do not mistreat one another and in which we come to understand how different societies have attempted to form in the past.

Such social systems provide us insight into what humans have attempted before, and have either succeeded or failed, and what has been learned.

As such, let us begin our studies of the Social Studies agenda outlined in the proposed standards. We begin in 6.29.11.8 (Standards for Kindergarteners). Under paragraph A.1 (a) and (b) and A.2 (a) and (b) we find the discussion of rules, their purpose, etc. Yet what if we happened to be living in Hitler's Germany? Or Pol Pot's Cambodia? Would the discussion of Rules be treated the same? Obviously not. Breaking the rules could be a death sentence.

Therefore these discussions are inappropriate because they ASSUME knowledge of a specific context. The same would be true of A.3. What if the Hammer and Sickle or Nazi Swastika or Confederate flag were our symbols? This sort of teaching standard makes assumptions at its very beginning that lead young children to making assumptions about their state that are not based on the KIND of government that exists. Better to teach them about the merits of the system that they are being asked to tacitly endorse than to FORCE them to accept this system without knowledge of WHAT they are being forced into accepting.

Paragraph C.3 for Kindergarteners makes a terrible presumption. It presumes that kindergarteners would understand about migration, population differences, and other communities that may be hundreds of miles away. For children who have never travelled because their family has never taken them anywhere, or they cannot actually remember such trips, leads to disparate results depending on socio-economic situations. This is not a good outcome. This objective should be dropped until they have been introduced to various historic sources of information.

Paragraphs D.1 and D.2 are so vague that we have no idea what sort of HISTORY is meant. What sort of "historical change," "continuity," "context," and "reconciliation" are possible except as illustrated through specific examples to be taught. Similarly, what sort of "power dynamics," "leadership," and "agency" are meant?

And HOW is it historical if we are talking about current community leaders and not historical examples?

Then, in paragraph E the focus is on diversity and individuality. But what appears to be missing is how Americans are diverse from other peoples of the world. Why should the uniqueness of Americans be excluded from the standards? They should not. We should encourage our students to celebrate our freedoms.

Paragraph F then suggests that kindergarteners, knowing basically nothing of the world, world cultures, and political systems, should nevertheless be aware of "compelling questions" and how to 'critique' conclusions, WITHOUT knowing the foundations of LOGIC. Then, in F.3 they are to be encouraged to take "informed action."

I ask, informed by who/whom? Take group or individual action to "address local, regional, or global problems"? To use "deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about ... civic problems in their classrooms"? How is this "Inquiry"? Where were they informed of HOW to perform "deliberative" or "democratic" procedures?

It seems to me that these students were just told to FOLLOW the RULES laid down by their teachers and other authority figures. How is this consistent with "democracy"? Perhaps the students should be allowed to VOTE on when they should arrive at school, who can speak in class, when they should be allowed in the hallways, etc.

Everything about the school-day is completely UNDEMOCRATIC, yet somehow they are supposed to glean from this dictatorial system how to act as free citizens in a democracy? How is that possible? Where is the undergirding objectives that support these flowery concepts to be taught in F.2 and F.3? These objectives are unsupported.

In fact, virtually identical language for the Inquiry section is contained through the fourth grade. Why?

It seems as though the proper time to introduce much of the material that needs to be discussed in later grades is the sixth grade. In this grade (6.29.11.14), paragraph D.1.c discusses the advancements of Middle Eastern and Asian societies of technologies. Missing is any requirement to understand the positive impacts of various European technologies (the plow, horses, mules, oxen, cattle, and other agricultural equipment (shovels, rakes, hammers, nails, etc.) on indigenous societies.

Certainly the introduction of the horse greatly impacted ALL of the Indigenous populations of the Americas. Why does the word "horse" not appear in any of this document? Certainly the introduction of cattle and barbed wire affected the west, yet there is no mention of barbed wire.

Nor does the word "oil" appear. It is as though the oil boom in the west is a non-event. Should we not mention the existence of Route 66 which is a highly relevant component of New Mexico's history?

The word "uranium" ONLY appears in relation to nuclear weapons, but not in terms of nuclear power. Why?

When discussing the comparisons of different ruling methods in 6.29.11.14.A.2, only monarchy, democracy, republic, and oligarchy are mentioned. Yet the concepts of Marxism are never mentioned. Why is this? Shouldn't our students at least be taught about the failures of socialist governments in Russia (the Soviet Union), Nazi (national socialism) Germany, Fascist Italy, eastern Europe under the dictatorship of the Soviets and the Warsaw pact, Communist China, concentration camps in Vietnam, etc., or other forms of dictatorships around the world, past and present?

Nor are students (apparently) to be informed of the brutality of the Aztecs, Toltecs, Mayans, Navajos, or Apaches, who all brutalized their neighbors. If we're going to be honest in our histories about America, we also should be willing to be honest about other cultures as well.

Likewise, where is the discussion of the Mongol hoards who conquered much of Asia, or the historical brutality illustrated on the tombs of their rulers between the Egyptians and their neighbors, or the Assyrians, Babylonians (Chaldeans), Arabs, Turks, Huns, Goths, Vikings, etc.

More recently, European nations under monarchic rulers went to war against one another (the 30 years war, Julius Caesar's invasion of the lands of the Gauls, the Napoleonic wars, Viking invasions throughout Europe, etc. One need not look far to see wars between the Siamese and their neighbors the Vietnamese. Or Muslim invasion of Indonesia, or current Muslim insurrections between Muslims living on the island of Mindanao and Philipinos. Looking further back in history we could address the internal warfare between various clan factions on the Japanese Islands or wars in China between different ruling dynasties.

The point is that to look in isolation of current events at the behaviors of the early settlers and ignore all of the rest of world history appears to be a vast mistake. Humans have been warring with one another for thousands of years and perhaps as far back as humans have lived. The object has always been resources.

Take, for example, the Navajos. They have their internal name as the Dine. But they are termed the Navajos, which means raiders, because of their behavior towards the Pueblo peoples, whom Europeans found living in pueblos, cities without doors, accessible only by way of ladders so that their Navajos "neighbors" could not rob them.

And what of the history of the Aztecs of Mexico, who sacrificed tens of thousands of members of neighboring tribes the year before the conqueror Cortez arrived. If it had not been for Cortez how many thousands more Meso-Americans would have died due to Aztec holocaust policies? Shouldn't this material also be included in the world cultures section of the curriculum?

The study content also appears to be nearly completely devoid of any discussion of religious motivations for various societal behaviors. While most early religions featured beliefs in multiple gods, the rise of Zoroastrian, Jewish, Hindu, Buddhist, Christian, and Muslim belief systems produced profound changes in societal structures throughout Asia and Europe. These changes are totally ignored in the standards. The religious natures of present-day Japan, Thailand, Indonesia, the Middle East, North Africa, Israel, Europe, and the Americas have been profoundly affected by such religious tides. To ignore the geopolitical influences of such tides, and even intra-religious divisions such as the distinction between Sunnis and Shiites, or the influence of the Reformation (another ignored topic), is almost criminal, especially considering the religious makeup of these United States.

It seems further, to this observer, that the "Inquiry" sections of various subjects have been written to provoke "social justice" behaviors among students. Yet such behaviors, especially in the early years of education, have not been properly balanced by supplying students with (initially) a reasonable perspective on historical social systems, which were, in fact, brutal and horrible between the tribes in the Americas prior to the arrival of the "largely peaceful" European settlers from England and France. I won't speak of the Spanish since they came basically as their own types of raiders, but...

The French immigrants who explored the Mississippi valley largely attempted to get along with the Indian tribes. Likewise, the English settlers came primarily to escape religious persecution. Apparently that fact has been ignored by this curriculum as well. One portion of my family came here from England with William (Billy) Penn. They were Quakers, who were not on the same page with the "Church of England" under the king. This portion of the Social Studies curriculum has been completely ignored.

Another part of my family, I discovered recently from a cousin, fled from England because of a disagreement between one member of our family (who signed the death warrant for King Charles I and was later drawn and quartered) and the crown.

In light of my family's experiences of why we emigrated from Europe to this country, I see no evidence in these standards to explain these motivations. Further, we see no evidence for the emigration of Jewish peoples from Europe due to pogroms in the early 20th century, nor other religious objectors to state-run religions as motivations, nor the behavior of individuals in the early 1930's who left Germany prior to World War II and the Nazi regime's terror campaign against Jewish citizens, nor the emigration of oppressed Vietnamese following the end of the Vietnam war, nor from Cuba, nor Eastern Europe, all due to the oppressive policies of socialist or communist governments.

However, the experience and nature of the European immigrants must also be kept in perspective. The Spaniards who came to the Americas starting in 1492 came here the same year Spain itself was finally freed of the Muslim Moors who ruled the Iberian Peninsula for the prior 700 years. The Muslim faith fully accepts a slave mentality and had brutalized the peoples of Spain for the previous 700 years. Is it any wonder, then, that the Spanish who arrived in the Americas should have adopted some of the same Muslim attitudes?

Likewise, the word "slave" came from the word "slav," a tribe from eastern Europe. Thus slavery as a concept was not limited to its impacts only on people of color. Likewise, the Muslims of the Barbary coast of northern Africa, in 1800, were taking European ships and enslaving their passengers and crew. So slavery was not just a one-way (blacks enslaved by whites) phenomenon. Students need to know this.

We must also look carefully at the curriculum objectives surrounding "social justice warrior" training versus individual achievement in education. The underlying assumption of much of what is termed "Critical Race Theory" posits that entire races or ethnicities are oppressed and somehow held down by other ethnicities and/or races. While this content is not directly taught or justified in the stated curriculum, its assumptions appear throughout these standards (1) in the form of forcing students to classify themselves into "intersectional" ethnic, racial, and tribal subgroups starting as early as kindergarten [para. 6.29.11.8.E.1.f]. The standards then urge students to begin formulating plans to enact improvements to their lot in life as part of some tribal actions based on their differences from other groups as early as kindergarten [para. 6.29.11.8.F.3 a and b]. The standards then go on and on concerning directing children in this same vein of social justice throughout the K-12 curriculum.

However, no two individuals have the same talents and skills. This curriculum therefore focuses students on an argument that they can ONLY succeed IF the group that they are a part of can somehow overcome these civic, local, regional, or global "problems." But who is to define these problems? Is it the students themselves, or is it teachers with an agenda and an axe to grind who are directing them? And why start looking at (and burdening) children as early as kindergarten with considering problems that they cannot possibly address? Nor do these standards even attempt to address which problems they are planning to direct children into addressing.

For example, perhaps children should be addressing the problem of an Iranian nuclear and missile program that could lead to a nuclear confrontation? Or perhaps considering the proliferation of Chinese coal-burning power plants and the sale of Chinese-made products in the US coming from factories relying on said power plants. Or perhaps the issue is more local such as alcoholism on the Navajo reservation. Yet how would or could kindergarteners solve such deep and troublesome problems? Is this truly what we want to burden children who cannot read, write, add, spell, or subtract with? Thus this agenda is too much and too worrisome for young children. It should be relegated to High School classes, if desired, but certainly no younger, since younger children will have no tools to meaningfully examine the alternatives if they cannot read, and no useful tools to address these issues if they cannot write to express themselves on the issues.

There is also no content at all regarding the nature of the Communist Revolutions that occurred all over the planet during the 20th century and the millions of people who were murdered by the communists. By contrast, there are numerous references to our own Revolutionary War and nine references to our own Civil War. But the problem there is that one needs to keep these two wars in context. While our own wars were devastating and significant, the participation and the reasons for our involvement in the two World Wars and the Cold War deserve more than simply a few mentions at the High School US History level. Why? Because these wars occurred because opposing socialist, communist, and/or dictatorial governments fomented wars on the European and Asian continents that disrupted and greatly affected the economy of the United States. Students who do not understand the dynamics of how and why these different governmental forms have influenced decision-making in our government will be blinded to why and how our government is distinguished from these totalitarian systems up until they take US History in High School. This is simply not right.

Also, I note that the terminology "democratic principles" appears numerous times in the descriptions of various objectives, but never the terminology "republican principles" never appears, and the word "republic" only appears three times. Yet our government is not a democracy, it is a particular TYPE of democracy, it is a constitutional republic. In fact, at paragraph 6.29.11.17.A.1.e the document even says "constitutional democracy." This terminology is clearly misleading. There are many forms of democracies. But our country is a particular type of democracy, it is a Republic in which we elect representatives of the people to make decisions for the rest of the population. But it is more than a republic in the sense that our representatives are limited in their abilities to dictate to us the laws based on the restrictive framework of the constitution. Students deserve to know how our Republic restricts the use of power through its system of checks and balances. Yet while the use of the term "democratic principles" appears as many as nine times in these guidelines, the phrase "checks and balances" appears only once, in the seventh grade curriculum.

Likewise, when Benjamin Franklin was asked at the end of the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia what he had accomplished, he said, "a Republic, if you can keep it." Not a democracy, a Republic. Republican principles are different from Democratic principles. Republican principles involve limited authority to perform acts, and checks and balances to power, and in our Constitutional Republic they represent specific means of amending our laws and specific rights of citizens through the bill of rights. Further, the bill of rights is not even cited in the High School US History standards. This is a clear gap in the standards.

I believe that the Bill of Rights clearly should be included in the standards in relation to the High School Economics course, since these relate to property rights (search, seizure of property, use of property, free enterprise, etc.). It also should be included for comparison purposes in the study of High School World History in terms of rights that were not afforded to citizens in other societies. As an example, in the nineteenth century the ruler of Egypt sold one of the obelisks to the French government. This same ruler claimed to own ALL property within the nation of Egypt. Similar confiscation of property occurred in Nazi Germany and in Soviet Russia. In Pol Pot's Cambodia anyone with a college education was summarily murdered. And during deliberations over the text of the Declaration of Independence the phrase "Life, Liberty, and Pursuit of Happiness" was in one draft expressed as "Life, Liberty, and Property." So property rights and the right to life which are also related to "gun rights" (another phrase missing from the standards) were very important in drafting our Bill of Rights.

The subject of the Bill of Rights and the structure of the checks and balances present in the US Constitution should also be referenced in relation to the New Mexico Constitution in the New Mexico History curriculum. The Bill of Rights, in particular, are protected separately in our New Mexico Constitution, and not as Amendments, as they are in the US Constitution, but as specifically incorporated elements of our constitution. Students should know this, but this is ignored in the standards. Students should also know that the New Mexico government is structured like the US Republic in the sense of containing checks and balances to the power of the governor versus the state legislature versus the state judiciary. Yet this aspect of our government is not covered in the NM History standards.

Also in the New Mexico History class there is no mention of the tremendous impact of oil and gas exploration and industrial development and the southeast and northwestern corners of the state. Yet, curiously, there is mention of the Homestead Act twice, once at para. D.1.d and again with identical language at D.1.b. There is mention of weapons testing in NM (C.1.a), and artists (C.2), and cattle ranching (C.3.a), and agriculture (C.3.c), and the movie industry (B.1.b), yet not oil and natural gas? Why not? Especially since the movie industry is almost entirely subsidized by the state government itself, and artists make up an exceedingly small portion of the overall economy, yet the oil and gas sector makes up over a third of the state's economy.

Likewise, in examining the standards, the state's extensive historical mining industry has been completely ignored. In our county there are numerous old mine sites. Historically the mining industry was a very important part of New Mexico's economy. Why has this been ignored?

Overall, I find these standards to be woefully deficient of important aspects of our history and a reasonable perspective of the role of the US in world history and an important beacon of freedom when compared to dictatorial, monarchical, communist, and other totalitarian forms of government around the planet.

I also find it unconscionable that little kids in kindergarten through fifth grade should be rushed into considering social activist thinking when they have NO perspective at all on how to perform deliberative thinking, know nothing of the rules of logic, and have not been taught HOW to think, rather than having their heads filled with concepts and biases of school officials on WHAT to think.

Similarly, the overemphasis on "taking action" at all grade levels and in nearly every class is overkill and out of place for a curriculum presumably focused on giving children perspectives on what they need to know and not attempting to force them into group actions that will merely lead them into peer pressured situations where they will need to either go along with what the teacher or their peers think or be ostracized. These "inquiry" objectives that read nearly the same in every curriculum area are therefore out of place and overly repetitious. They should be removed or at best restricted to only a few High School level classes, not distributed throughout the curriculum. By placing these objectives in nearly every subject this "group think" mentality is being "infused" throughout the curriculum and there is no reason for this overly repetitious material to be taught over and over again to the exclusion of other more important subject matter, like the Bill of Rights, the Constitution, comparisons between present freedoms in the United States versus past lack of freedoms under monarchical or dictatorial governmental systems.

Finally, I do apologize if this material is somewhat repetitive. The standards themselves are highly repetitive and cover (or do not cover) many aspects of social studies that are unnecessary (or are missing), and coming to grips with all of these aspects in a very complex document are difficult to understand when looking at a single page of the standards. Overall, these should be completely revised to provide a more streamlined and focused document designed to teach students what they need to know to make informed decisions about social studies, but not direct them into taking actions based on preliminary and incomplete knowledge.

Sincerely,
David Tofsted, Ph.D. Electrical Engineering, NMSU 2013

[EXTERNAL] New Mexico Dept of Education Social Studies Curriculum changes

Lori Coleman <lorilytlecoleman@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 3:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern;

After reading the proposed changes/additions to the Social Studies program for Public Schools I adamantly disagree with the topics addressed. History has not played out yet on the topics of Covid-19 response by the federal government, nor has it played out on the supposed history on African American race discrimination or the history of the sexual identity crisis in our population. Addressing history based on political opinions and not biblically is wrong!!!! I am a mother of two teenagers and will fight this!! New Mexico should be ashamed!

Sincerely,
Lori Coleman
575-545-2814

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment on proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies curriculum standards.

Tallie Segel <tallie@eenm.org>

Sun 11/7/2021 3:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: EENM Director <director@eenm.org>; Stephanie Haan-Amato <stephanie@eenm.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see formal letter attached.

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena,

Environmental Education of New Mexico (EENM) works to support equitable daily access to outdoor and environmental learning for all New Mexico kids. We believe that access to high-quality, engaging, and meaningful outdoor and environmental education opportunities lead to a thriving future for all where environmental and social responsibility drive individual and institutional choices. We see strong connections to this vision through the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies curriculum standards.

As a community-centered organization supporting a broad network of in-school, out-of-school, and community-based educators and stakeholders, EENM appreciates the extensive and collaborative process undertaken to review and update the K-12 social studies standards. We particularly appreciate the guiding principles underpinning the process and the outcome of recommended standards, as we agree that epistemic justice, indigenous perspectives, and cultural diversity are foundational to more just educational experiences for New Mexico students. Our work echoes the need for addressing root themes and causes, divergence from singular narratives, authentic storytelling, and inquiry-based thinking and critical thinking.

EENM also sees alignment and possibilities for our network to support Social Studies education content through additions and new framing to the content standards, particularly inquiry and geography. We stand ready to support teachers who are keen to integrate outdoor and environmental learning into their repertoires around the anchor standards under geography, ethnic, cultural, identity stories, and inquiry as these anchor standards invite opportunities to support environmental literacy. Environmental education engages learners as they understand how nature works and how humans impact our world. Outdoor and environmental learning are hands-on, interdisciplinary, empowering, and relevant to learners' everyday lives. They give them the knowledge and tools they need to be environmentally literate—ready to face environmental and social challenges with confidence and optimism. Our view of outdoor and environmental learning is that it is student-centered, culturally relevant and responsive, relevant and meaningful, multidisciplinary, and supports physical, emotional, social, and spiritual health and wellbeing.

Finally, EENM sees alignment with the broad conceptual updates to the New Mexico Social Studies standards with our own strategic priorities of supporting environmental and outdoor learning communities of practices around culturally responsive education and inquiry based learning and investing in standards-aligned curricula on climate change, environmental justice, and place based cultural learning.

We stand ready to engage with educators around these content areas with the adoption of these much needed updates.

Tallie Segel (she/her)

Director of Strategy

Eileen Everett, Executive Director

Stephanie Haan-Amato, Communications and Development Director

Environmental Education of New Mexico, eenm.org

~Cultivating the Future of Environmental Education~

Our shared vision and strategy: Every Kid, Every Day, Every Way

Follow us on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram

November 4, 2021

Environmental Education of New Mexico

PO Box 36958 • Albuquerque, NM 87176-6958

info@eenm.org • 505-859-3366

eenm.org

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
Via email: rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena,

Environmental Education of New Mexico (EENM) works to support equitable daily access to outdoor and environmental learning for all New Mexico kids. We believe that access to high-quality, engaging, and meaningful outdoor and environmental education opportunities lead to a thriving future for all where environmental and social responsibility drive individual and institutional choices. We see strong connections to this vision through the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies curriculum standards.

As a community-centered organization supporting a broad network of in-school, out-of-school, and community-based educators and stakeholders, EENM appreciates the extensive and collaborative process undertaken to review and update the K-12 social studies standards. We particularly appreciate the guiding principles underpinning the process and the outcome of recommended standards, as we agree that epistemic justice, indigenous perspectives, and cultural diversity are foundational to more just educational experiences for New Mexico students. Our work echoes the need for addressing root themes and causes, divergence from singular narratives, authentic storytelling, and inquiry-based thinking and critical thinking.

EENM also sees alignment and possibilities for our network to support Social Studies education content through additions and new framing to the content standards, particularly inquiry and geography. We stand ready to support teachers who are keen to integrate outdoor and environmental learning into their repertoires around the anchor standards under geography, ethnic, cultural, identity stories, and inquiry as these anchor standards invite opportunities to support environmental literacy.

Environmental education engages learners as they understand how nature works and how humans impact our world. Outdoor and environmental learning are hands-on, interdisciplinary, empowering, and relevant to learners' everyday lives. They give them the knowledge and tools they need to be environmentally literate—ready to face environmental and social challenges with confidence and optimism. Our view of outdoor and environmental learning is that it is student-centered, culturally relevant and responsive, relevant and meaningful, multidisciplinary, and supports physical, emotional, social, and spiritual health and wellbeing.

Finally, EENM sees alignment with the broad conceptual updates to the New Mexico Social Studies standards with our own strategic priorities of supporting environmental and outdoor learning communities of practices around culturally responsive education and inquiry based learning and investing in standards-aligned curricula on climate change, environmental justice, and place based cultural learning.

We stand ready to engage with educators around these content areas with the adoption of these much needed updates.

Sincerely,

Eileen Everett	Stephanie Haan-Amato	Tallie Segel
Executive Director	Communications and Development Director	Director of Strategy

Environmental Education of New Mexico, eenm.org

~Cultivating the Future of Environmental Education~

Our shared vision and strategy: Every Kid, Every Day, Every Way

[EXTERNAL] Changes in History and Social Studies Curriculum

Janet <jwilli52@hotmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 3:25 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Janet Williams
President
Santa Fe NOW
Box 32674
Santa Fe, NM 87594
nowsantafenm@gmail.com

November 7, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena;

Please consider this letter to be our formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. Santa Fe NOW is concerned about the growing effort to suppress truth and believe teaching a true history will graduate students equipped to be critical thinkers and actors on behalf of their own interests.

We are writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. We want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and we are impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. We believe the K-8 standards and the framework of the 6 strands works beautifully. If we were to teach to these standards, we can envision how we or an experienced teacher might do so effectively engaging students. Had our generation been taught to these standards, we are convinced we would have a healthier democracy. While we found the high school standards also admirable, they could be better organized to ensure a clearer presentation. In their present form, there is a lot of repetition.

These standards respect the intelligence of children, concentrate on teaching critical thinking, evaluation of the credibility of data sources, and values that respect differing cultures and perspectives.

We urge the department to adopt these standards. We hope the department will stand up to those who seek to preserve the old approach to teaching social studies and history, that is Eurocentric and fails to enable children to face the challenges that are ever-present in their daily lives. Children need to master the standards outlined in this regulation to prepare to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectfully,

Janet Williams

President

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Standards Social Studies Standards

Jack Welch <johnwelc1957@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 4:18 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Sir/Madam, I strongly support the adoption of the proposed social studies standards. The adoption of these standards is vital to the education of our current and future students.

Sincerely

John H Welch

2467 El Dorado Ct.

Las Cruces, NM 88011

[EXTERNAL] Re: Changes in History and Social Studies Curriculum

JUDY KOWALSKI <judy_520@msn.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 4:23 PM

To: Janet <jwilli52@hotmail.com>

Cc: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Excellent letter, Janet. Thanks for writing such a thoughtful response!

Judy

On Nov 7, 2021, at 3:25 PM, Janet <jwilli52@hotmail.com> wrote:

Janet Williams
President
Santa Fe NOW
Box 32674
Santa Fe, NM 87594
newsantafenm@gmail.com

November 7, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena;

Please consider this letter to be our formal comments on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. Santa Fe NOW is concerned about the growing effort to suppress truth and believe teaching a true history will graduate students equipped to be critical thinkers and actors on behalf of their own interests.

We are writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. We want to commend the PED for undertaking these revisions, and we are impressed by the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them. We believe the K-8 standards and the framework of the 6 strands works beautifully. If we were to teach to these standards, we can envision how we or an experienced teacher might do so effectively engaging students. Had our generation been taught to these standards, we are convinced we would have a healthier democracy. While we found the high school standards also admirable, they could be better organized to ensure a clearer presentation. In their present form, there is a lot of repetition.

These standards respect the intelligence of children, concentrate on teaching critical thinking, evaluation of the credibility of data sources, and values that respect differing cultures and perspectives.

We urge the department to adopt these standards. We hope the department will stand up to those who seek to preserve the old approach to teaching social studies and history, that is Eurocentric and fails to enable children to face the challenges that are ever-present in their daily lives. Children need to master the standards outlined in this regulation to prepare to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectfully,

Janet Williams
President

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Jan Kapustinsky <jankap505@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 5:04 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am a long time resident of New Mexico (since 1971) and I am writing to you in support of repealing the current Social Studies standards in New Mexico schools to be replaced with the proposed 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

I have become familiar with the proposed standards and I commend the PED for undertaking the revisions and the scope of work undertaken by the committee that drafted them.

I believe the proposed standards will better prepare our students to deal with everyday challenges in a more truthful and ethical manner. And with this knowledge they will become more effective members of our society. That's a win win!

Respectfully,

Jan Kapustinsky
106 W. San Mateo Road
Santa Fe, NM 87505

[EXTERNAL] high school curriculum

Barbara Lenssen <barbaralenssen@comcast.net>

Sun 11/7/2021 5:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

January 6, 2021 ,the day we almost lost our democracy, should be added to the curriculum. Invaders came into the US Capitol with the purpose of overthrowing the Congressional vote to certify the election required by our Constitution. The mob was incited by a president who refused to concede the election and lied about nonexistent voter fraud. This invasion of the Capitol was one of the most historical events in the history of our country. Not since the War of 1812 had the Capital been invaded.

Submitted by Barbara G Lenssen Phd.

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social studies standards

Gl Ma <glamma5051@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 7:47 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it my concern,

Your department is responsible for ensuring the safety and inclusivity of ALL students, regardless of gender, background, race, and culture. What is being proposed pretends to adhere to what I described above, however in reality, it teaches the exact opposite. Are you seriously suggesting that teaching our students that their color is celebrated unless it's white?? What if siblings are a blend of Hispanic and white? African American and white?? Who are you to decide what color or race in our children is right or wrong?? Your job is to teach and guide students through STEM and literacy. Leave the divisive topics out of your decision making policies. Period!

Signed a concerned educator and parent,

M.B.C.

[EXTERNAL] SS Standards Feedback

Zoe Nelsen <znelsen@montedelsol.org>

Sun 11/7/2021 8:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr. John Sena
Policy Director
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar, Rm 121
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

My name is Zoë Nelsen, and I am the Head Learner at Monte del Sol Charter School. I support the Public Education Department's proposed update to the New Mexico Social Studies Standards. The inclusion of Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies will provide a more inclusive and inquiry strand to promote higher-level thinking.

As a school leader, I recognize the importance of teaching equity to our students while simultaneously connecting to their personal identities. As equity continues to be a priority for all, I support that these standards are reflective beginning in Kindergarten and through Grade 12. It is essential to teach students to continually connect with and develop their identities as they grow and learn.

The addition of inquiry standards allows our students to reach a higher standard of critical thinking as they move along through their educational careers. As seen in the standards, allowing students to identify biases while using primary and secondary sources, we are teaching our students to develop their views and make connections to real-time, real-world events and issues. The standards align with common core standards and enrich our students' learning for more of the school day.

I believe these standards are a significant upgrade to those currently in place and provide inclusion and rigor. I would again like to reiterate my support of these standards and look forward to implementing them in the upcoming years.

Best Regards,

--

Zoë A. Nelsen, Ph.D (she/her)

Head Learner

982-5225 ext.101

www.mdscs.org

4157 Walking Rain Rd.

Santa Fe, NM 87507

Confidentiality Notice: This email transmission and its attachments, if any, are confidential and intended only for the use of particular persons and entities. They may also be work products and/or protected by the attorney-client privilege or other privileges. Delivery to someone other than the intended recipient(s) shall not be deemed to waive any privilege. Review, distribution, storage, transmittal, or other emails and any unintended recipient's attachments are expressly prohibited. If you are not the named addressee (or its agent) or this email has been addressed to you in error, please immediately notify the sender by reply email and permanently delete the email and its attachments.

[EXTERNAL] Comments on the Proposed Repeal and Replace of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Sherida Burnett <sherida.burnett@gmail.com>

Sun 11/7/2021 9:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please find the attached PDF file with our public comments regarding the proposed social studies standards.

Thank you,

Sherida and Denny Burnett

86 McCasland Rd.

Pinon, NM 88344

sherida.burnett@gmail.com

To: John Sena, Policy Division, New Mexico Public Education Department
From: Sherida and Denny Burnett, Concerned Parents, Artesia Public Schools
Date: November 7, 2021
Subject: Comments on the Proposed Repeal and Replace of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dear Mr. Sena,

We are writing to express our concerns and comments on the proposed repeal and replace of 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies Standards. We currently have two children in public school and one that will enter kindergarten next year, so we write with great interest for the future of their learning within NM public education. We fear that these revised standards are trying to shape our children's young and impressionable minds with the idea that the America they live in is systemically biased and inherently against certain "groups". We do not understand why this is the case. Why is this the moment of time that we should begin teaching our children such a demoralizing theme about the nation that offers more freedom than any other country in the world? Why has the America we learned to be a place of opportunity for people of all colors, ethnicities, and identities, now suddenly become a place that our children are told is one of dissent, division, and inequality? If we are not mistaken, great measures have been taken throughout the years to ensure that ALL people in the United States are offered opportunity, support, and a right to pursue life, liberty, and happiness. Men and women throughout our nation's history have laid down their lives in battles and movements to help secure this for our own citizens and for those who willingly immigrate here. Now, do we dispute that America is not perfect? Absolutely not! We acknowledge our shortcomings and mistakes, but we learn from those circumstances and use our role as a citizen to help make the country we live in a better place. If we can readily acknowledge this, as students who passed through the public school system under older social studies standards, why is there a need to push new ideology on students through these revised standards? That seems to be the focus and goal of such ideology-to let children today know the "truth about our history". As if our children are not being taught any of the ugly and hard parts of our history. If this were true, then we would continue to have the same level of issues that our great country has waded through and clawed our way out of to form a more perfect union. We testify that we were taught the hard parts of our history and that we have learned from those things and see our nation as a melting pot of people united who rose above those low points and have rallied together-NOT as a bunch of divided groups that are oppressing or being victimized. As parents, we desire our children to be taught THE FACTS-not ideology, not feelings, not hypothetical experiences. Teach our children under the standard of presenting THE FACTS- the good, the bad and the ugly. That is your job as educators. It is not your job to teach our child how to identify or to present material that is intended to influence our child to think about history in a particular way. We should not be teaching our children how to group, separate, and divide each other into categories, we should be teaching them to be Americans. That is the identity they all share, and the one that should be presented as the standard for all social studies curriculum.

We would now like to address some of the proposed standards that will affect our children directly in the following school year. These are Kindergarten, Third Grade, and Fifth Grade standards that will apply to our children respectively.

Kindergarten: Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Standards 19. Diversity and Identity

- K.22. Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.
What even is a group identity? Does this mean ethnicity? Does this mean gender? Children certainly recognize the ways they are different and are more honest about this than anybody. Encouraging them to divide their classroom into groups does not teach them anything about social studies. It simply teaches them to point out how someone is different than them rather than teaching them how we are the same and can be united in friendship. How would a kindergartener have the capacity to think about this in a manner more deeply than that?
- K.23. Describe ways they are similar and different from people who share their identities, and people who do not.
Again, this is teaching five- and six-year-olds how to glorify differences rather than view all people as equal.
- K.24. Identify how their family does things both the same as and different from how other people do things.
We believe that it is absolutely fine to discuss and talk about how families carry-on different traditions and practices. However, the focus on these things in a classroom setting should be that this is what makes America so diverse and wonderful-not divided or pitted against each other.
- K.25. Describe their family history, culture, and past to current contributions of people in their main identity groups.
First and foremost, this is a poorly written standard that does not even use correct grammar. How do you describe family history TO current contributions? Should this say Compare rather than Describe? And again, we are looking at contributions to history through the lens of identity groups rather than simply acknowledging great Americans (regardless of color, gender, or age) who helped shape our country.

Third Grade: Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 19. Diversity and Identity and Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 21. Community Equity Building

- 3.27. Express a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly.
Why is it a social studies standard to have a teacher teach my child positive self-esteem? Again, this seems way out of the lane of public education. Also, what about the children who do not fit into any certain identity group or are perhaps even ashamed of their "identity"? How would openly discussing and forcing them to "identify" which group they belong to not make them feel badly? Right or wrong, not everyone has a "positive" view of their personal identity and should not be forced to break down what groups they belong to, especially when this has absolutely NOTHING to do with their education. Fitting in is a difficult enough pressure that kids today are facing, and this seems to only serve to exasperate that stress.
- 3.28. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups
Our comments above apply to this standard as well. Also, we do believe it is fine and healthy to compare and contrast cultural differences, but under the focus that our differences can all be celebrated as united Americans who have the freedom to carry out the traditions and lifestyles we choose. And again, right or wrong, many children who are multiracial may not have a specific "cultural identity". Forcing them to find or choose a group they belong to is undermining their right to identify as American.

- 3.29. Identify the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

We do not like the incorporation of the word “groups” in this standard. While it could mean organizations, following the previous two standards, it seems the implication is ethnic or “identity groups”. The word “groups” is used in this context throughout the standards document. The focus should be on the actions of “people” not groups. This will teach kids that people (no matter color, age, or gender) are what make a difference-NOT groups. They may be only one person, but they can make a difference, no matter what “group” they belong to.

Fifth Grade:

Inquiry 25. Communicate and Critique Conclusions

- 5.5. With teacher direction, construct responses to compelling questions supported by reasoning and evidence.

A standard is defined as “a degree or level of requirement or attainment”. This does not fall into the category of a standard. This is clearly worded as a specific assignment. Also, it concerns us greatly that it explicitly says, “With teacher direction.”. How is a teacher suppose to direct my child’s response? Are they supposed to use their own reasoning and evidence or be directed by the teacher on how to construct their response? This invites a teacher to impose his/her ideology on the class through the giving of such “compelling questions” and the directing of student’s responses. This seems very dangerous and again is an assignment, NOT a standard of learning.

Civics 2. Processes, Rules, and Laws

- 5.9. Analyze how different individuals and groups influenced the creation and interpretation of the foundational documents.

Again, we disagree with incorporating the use of the word “groups”. A variety of people led to the creation of our foundational documents, but their “group identities” are certainly NOT glorified or incorporated into those documents. In fact, those documents served to UNITE. As stated in the Declaration, “We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness.” Or in the beginning of the Constitution, “We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union...” By all means, let us recognize individuals and people who influenced the creation of the foundational documents, but trying to pin down “identity groups” at our nation’s inception is to demean the very value under which our UNITED States of America was born.

Civics 3. Civic Dispositions and Democratic Principles

- 5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

How is the word “inequity” supposed to be defined in this standard? This seems to only portray the idea that the United States has perpetuated injustice and unfairness rather than acknowledge that it has literally fought within itself (brothers against brothers) to bring about emancipation, justice, and liberty. It has fought to bring women’s rights and civil rights to its people. Also, what conflict is my child supposed to recognize? We don’t think you could ask any NM fifth grader to identify the conflict in our country right now and they would be able to definitively answer. This, therefore, implies that a teacher must “teach” my child about such “conflict” even if my child does not view their world or their country in such a manner. Their reality and experience is being skewed by the presentation of such ideology.

Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 19. Diversity and Identity

- 5.30. Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups.

What exactly qualifies as a main identity group? What if your family doesn't nicely fit into one of the "main identity groups"? Why do all of these standards seem to imply that people's contributions through history are tied to their "identity group"? I fear this teaches children that what they are able to accomplish or achieve is defined or directed by what "group" they belong to.

- 5.31. Explain how groups of people are treated today and in the past is a part of what makes them who they are.

Again, this teaches children that people should be divided into groups and that certain groups are treated differently today (even if this is not students' reality!!!!). If you teach a class that blacks are treated differently than whites, even if this is not student's real-life experience, you formulate an ideology in their minds and perhaps even cause the very divisive behavior that you are trying to relegate against! Don't we want our students to be united and not to view each other with resentment for the way your "identity group" treated my "identity group" even if it was in the far and distant past. We liken this to a little Hatfield and McCoy playing peacefully as best friends in the woods until they are reminded what their last names are and where they come from. Forget present reality, instead harbor dissension that they do not even understand and accept that this is a part of what defines you. What a damaging way of raising and educating our children!

Also, the way our children's ancestors were treated does not define who they are today. While we can recognize certain aspects of our ancestors' history, we cannot say that what they experienced truly makes us who we are. This teaches children that their personal choice and action in life will never change who they are or their circumstance because their identity is found in their "group" and the past treatment of such "group". Our individual identity is made up of the choices we do or do not make as independent/autonomous human beings. We strongly disagree with the damage this type of teaching can do to a child's ambition and pursuit of happiness.

We urge NM PED and the policy division within this state to strongly consider the public comment when rewriting and codifying these standards. Please, please, especially put weight into the considerate comments of parents who have a vested interest in the outcome of your decision on this issue. Our children's future in public education hangs in the balance, and we speak out against the damaging theme of these new standards for their sake and for all the children of New Mexico. Rather than propagating an ideology of group divides and dissension, let us hold true to our state's pledge to be a "symbol of perfect friendship among united cultures." Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

Sherida Burnett
sherida.burnett@gmail.com

Denny Burnett
nyned@hotmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Critical Race Theory

Scottar <scottar@arczip.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 2:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Critical Race Theory is a clone of what the Communists taught. CRT is damaging to the mental health of kids by feeding them damaging spin on history and race and should not be taught in public schools.

--

Scottar Brooke

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Curriculum

incidaki <incidaki@aol.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:10 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing to oppose the proposed new curriculum for social studies. I looked over the Social Studies Standards and disagree with many of the teachings. I have knowledge in this area as I had taken a New Mexico History Class at SFCC. It was by far the best class that I had ever taken. My eyes were open to the history of New Mexico and the way each state was formed to make the United States. We were given a book "Telling New Mexico, A New History" and I learned so much from it. It basically provided a detailed description of the Mexican/Spaniards exploration of the Southwest which at times was violent. I know that many Native Americans had religion forced on them, lands taken, forced labor, and some times death. The reason I tend to oppose the curriculum is that you will not have enough time to paint the whole picture of the settlement of New Mexico. I took the course at SFCC and even then we skimmed over a lot of pertinent info. My thought is that if you enact this curriculum don't just make it about the travesties of the Spaniards conquest. Will you mention the Pueblo Revolt where settlers were pushed back to Mexico and tons of Franciscans were killed? That is a part of history and should be told to. Also will it be taught about how the Spaniards, Mexicans, and blossoming United States all fought for this land with blood shed? I am aware that you are trying to teach kids about how there has always been racism and I hope it's not one sided teaching. Remember this, the US Army enacted the Indian Wars killing tons of Native Americans and authorizing the mass killing of buffaloes which the native people depended on for food, tools, and religion. One only read about "Wounded Knee" and "Sand Creek" both massacres committed by the US Army where they committed murder against women, children, and elderly. I heard to save bullets US soldiers would bash babies heads with a rifle buttstocks to save bullets. How horrible that is and act by the US Army. Will that be taught? I'm worried that your curriculum will be one-sided and only mention the atrocities of New Mexican settlers and not the atrocities of all races.

Gabriel

[EXTERNAL] 11/12/21 Meeting on proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

CHRIS JULSRUD <ckj926@me.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:12 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Can you let me know if the 11/12/21 meeting from 1PM to 3PM will be conducted in-person or by Zoom. If it is Zoom can you please send me the link. I fully support the proposed changes and wish to observe the public hearing. Thank you.

Chris Julsrud
16 Cole Lane
Santa Fe, NM 87508-5967
Phone: 773-744-1900
Email: ckj926@me.com

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to obtain input on the proposed repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies, to be replaced with 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies. The public comment period is from September 28, 2021 to November 12, 2021 at 5 p.m. (MDT). The public hearing will be held Friday, November 12 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. (MDT) at Mabry Hall. The location of the public hearing is subject to change due to concerns surrounding COVID-19 and in accordance with Governor Michelle Lujan Grisham's Executive Order 2021-049.

- Notice of Proposed Rulemaking
- Proposed Strikethrough
- Proposed Integrated
- Public Comment (Updated 11/4/2021)

[EXTERNAL] Concerned Parent

Mikole Ferrier <mikoleferrier3@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:13 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am concerned about Critical Race Theory being taught to my children. I do not want Critical Race Theory in our schools. It is harmful and destructive to our children!!

[EXTERNAL] Proposed new social studies curriculum

Dee Camp <kathaeryne@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:15 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Thank you for working to expand our social studies curriculum to more accurately reflect who we are as New Mexicans and how our state has developed. One of the things I love best about our state is it's cultural diversity. I strongly believe that diversity adds strength to our overall community. I think too many kids lack real exposure to other people's backgrounds and contributions and that as a result do not appreciate what those people add to the community and to life in general. Revising our curriculum to be more inclusive and to present an accurate picture of who we are and where we came from is extremely important. We live in a country (and definitely in a state) where understanding and learning about different perspectives can only enrich our understanding. I appreciate that this can be a divisive issue as some people do not want their children to be presented with this information because they believe (falsely) that this somehow diminishes their own culture and experience. Nothing could be further from the truth and I applaud you for taking this step to include more perspectives in this extremely important area. Thank you again.

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] Concerned citizen

Gma B <mfbaileymail@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:20 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena, NMPED - Policy Division,

I am concerned about critical race theory being taught to children. I do not want CRT being taught in our NM schools. I believe It is harmful and destructive and we the people DON'T want CRT!! Thank you

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jennifer Cole <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 9:36 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am a Certified Financial Planner and a Chartered Financial Analyst. While my clients are adults, it is clear that many have not received a proper grounding in personal finance. And my clients are those who have money! (some only through inheritance) I shudder to think what the average New Mexican doesn't know about creating and maintaining healthy financial habits.

As a result, I urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

The following text is boilerplate from Think New Mexico, but I couldn't have said it better:

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for weighing the experience of a financial professional in your review of this legislation,

Sincerely,

Jennifer Cole
1000 Cordova Pl, #44
Santa Fe, NM 87505-1725

[EXTERNAL] Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Curriculum Update

ROBERT W ENDLICH <BENDLICH@msn.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 9:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: ROBERT W ENDLICH <BENDLICH@msn.com>; dtofsted@gmail.com <dtofsted@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Feedback,

Bravo to Dave Tofsted on a well written, well-thought out feedback for the State of New Mexico.

Attached in the word doc are some of my comments that came to mind as I read Dave Tofsted's feedback.

And this, which expands on some of what is in the attached:

The Mayans and Aztecs thought they could change the weather by taking the blood of a still beating heart violently extracted from a young person in ritual sacrifice to the Rain God Chac.

Members of the Obama and Biden Administrations and many members of Congress think they can change the weather and climate by making cars lighter and more susceptible to crash damage by reducing vehicle power and weight to improve fuel economy standards, and reduce CO2 emissions. Those who will drive and ride in these econo-boxes are likely to be our youngest citizens wishing to pursue mobility in inexpensive cars. They will perish in the inevitable crashes which occur on the road with these unsafe vehicles.

This means that our United States Government is participating in ritual sacrifice of OUR young in the same manner as the Mayans and Aztecs; they think that they can change the weather through human actions, (which will be) directed upon the youngest.

They are wrong.

Sincerely submitted,

Bob

ROBERT W. ENDLICH, MSci (Meteorology)

Earth Scientist, Climate Alarm Skeptic

21 years Weather Officer, USAF

28 years Meteorologist White Sands Missile Range & NMSU Physical Science Laboratory

Climate Study Web Site: <https://casf.me/>

Bob Endlich's Comments and Notes WRT Dave Tofsted's "Feedback on Proposed Social Studies Curriculum Update," dated 7 Nov 2021.

First, Dave Tofsted's Feedback is a very well thought out reply; it contains critical thought which should have been included in the basic but is missing there. Below are some additional thoughts along Tofsted's line of thinking which come to mind.

Tofsted alludes to the conquest of what is present-day Spain from 711 to 1492, which means Spain was Muslim for 781 years. It has been only 529 years since the reconquest of Spain by the Christians, meaning that Spain was Muslim longer than the time since reconquest by the Christians, in 1492., to me, a useful metric.

Tofsted does not mention an even more warlike tribe which plundered the early west of the white settlers and the extant indigenous tribes of the west, the Comanches. The Comanches perfected the use of horses to raid their enemies on horseback. The Comanches' domain extended from The Comancheria which covers much of present-day Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico, and Colorado, and included forays into northern Mexico, and by some reports as far south as Queretaro, Mexico.

Mayans used human sacrifice including extraction of a still beating heart from a young person and spreading of the blood in a ritual borrowed from the Aztecs. My understanding from my visit to Chichen Itza in 2005, was that this sacrifice was to please the Rain God Chac to insure enough rainfall for the growing of crops.

While not the stuff for students younger than perhaps sixteen, the history of conflict, as above and among indigenous tribes and also among French, Spanish, Texan and settlers from and governments of the US and its states and territorial citizens is a complex area for study, by mature students.

Dave Tofsted's comments to NOT try to introduce complex social histories to young students still learning academic basics is especially important. At this time, we seem to be encouraging students of tender years into becoming social justice warriors when we in New Mexico are 50th out of 50 in reading and writing proficiency. In the words of Edweek.org, <https://www.edweek.org/teaching-learning/new-mexico-ranks-last-in-nation-on-quality-counts-annual-report-card/2019/09> "New Mexico ranked lower than all other states on the Chance for Success Index, with a grade of D-plus and a score of 68. That's due in part to being at the bottom of the rankings on family income and near the bottom on other indicators, like for the 2015-16 school year high school graduation rates, where it ranked 50th."

One intent of the Proposed Social Studies Curriculum seems to be to reducing the lessons to a "good guys vs. the bad guys" with a desire to establish Whites as the oppressors and everyone else as oppressed, with a subtext of inherited guilt of the Whites based on inferred actions of those long deceased. This line of thought is clearly against the strictures of the Constitution and goes against the notion that we are all created equal. Guilt based on skin color is racist. The State and the PED have no basis to teach racism to students, no matter the current fad. Teaching racism is wrong. The PED ought to know the difference between right and wrong.

Study and evaluation of the history of this area is complex and does not lend itself to the seeming cookie-cutter approach outlined in the Proposed Social Studies Curriculum Update.

ROBERT W. ENDLICH

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Trish Romero <trishromero@outlook.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 9:47 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good morning,

I am a grandmother of seven and I am disgusted with the way our NM and USA constitution is being ignored for the sake of personal political gain. The people are being dismissed as being too stupid to think for themselves. That may work for a season, but it will not prevail. I pray that the people of this great state and nation will remove the scales of their eyes to see that our "elected by the people for the people" representatives are not doing anything to help the people, but are only interested in personal financial gain.

Our children in NM and USA should be taught how to think, NOT what to think. That's what has kept us as a great nation.

As long as corrupt politicians oppress our voices and ability to believe that we have a say in our lives, we are doomed to dictator rule. That's why the people left England for the USA; from the tyranny of the King. Why would we want to go back to that?

Thank you.

Get Outlook for Android

[EXTERNAL] Comment on State Public Education Standards

June Krumpotick <krumplcar@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:06 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Thank you for inviting public comment on the proposed social studies standards.

I have been interested in education policy all my life and have volunteered with Albuquerque Reads since 2014.

I strongly support the proposed new social studies standards. They are not about guilt: incorporating the encouragement of actions to address inequities is a productive way to deal with such feelings...

They are about truth, pride, and the ability of all of us to do better.

New Mexico should continue to celebrate the rich diversity of our history and people.

Sincerely, June Krumpotick

--

Let's Make Facts Great Again

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies changes to Curriculum

Kevin Carroll <keetchcarroll@hotmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:27 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

As a former New Mexico high school history teacher for over 35 years, I write to express my concerns over some of the Public Education Department's proposed changes to the Social Studies curriculum. Like all countries, our nation's history has its injustices and social blemishes, but far fewer than most. These soiled aspects should not be brushed under the rug. American students should learn about things like the 3/5's Compromise, the Dredd Scott Case (1857), Plessey v. Ferguson (1896), The Trail of Tears (1836) and the internment of Japanese-American citizens and Italian aliens during World War II. However, equal emphasis should be placed on steps our nation took to correct these injustices such as Mr. Lincoln fighting the Civil War to end slavery and the adoption of the XIII, XIV and XV Amendments to the Constitution, Brown v. Topeka Board of Education (1954), and the United States' official apology and $20,000 in reparation payments to Japanese internee survivors several decades after the WWII.

Changes to the curriculum should include a more thorough examination of the United States Constitution and our nation's struggle to ratify it. This would provide students with a greater understanding of our nation's founding and how our federal government is supposed to function. We were the first nation in the world with a written constitution guaranteeing the "inalienable rights of the individual" against government usurpation. Students need to understand that concept.

The current proposal to have Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies students assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political and economic opportunity promote social divisions as well as racism. Many of the PED's proposals hammer on terms like "inequity, injustice and oppression" which will lead many to believe that they are born "victims," never able to improve their economic or social standing in society. To indoctrinate youngsters in these beliefs only fosters a sense of hopelessness and futility.

I ask you not to adopt changes to the Social Studies curriculum that echo so many pillars of Critical Race Theory.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully yours,

Kevin Carroll

M.A. History, Northern Arizona U.

Former high school teacher at Grants, Belen and Albuquerque Academy

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] request to comment on Nov12 public hearings on proposed social studies standards rainhousejoan@tularosa.net <rainhousejoan@tularosa.net>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:34 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: dgreenwald@tularosa.net <dgreenwald@tularosa.net>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please put Joan E. Price, Jornada Research Institute, on the agenda for the three minute comment on the PED proposed social studies standards Nov. 12, 2021 We will be sending in a longer written comment by the Nov 12 deadline as well. Please reply that you have received this and any information on when on Nov. 12 I may be speaking on the virtual meeting.

Thank-you for your consideration

Joan Price

Research Associate: Public Education Outreach

Jornada Research Institute

Tularosa, New Mexico 88352'(575)740--7084

[EXTERNAL] New proposed rules

taodragon@protonmail.com <taodragon@protonmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:35 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena

Policy Division

Mr Sena:

We are concerned about the proposed changes to the k-12 social studies standards.

We believe that the changes are not in the best interest of all New Mexicans.

Sincerely

Julie and Tim Serna Manville

Sent with ProtonMail Secure Email.

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

Ann Lavine <ann.lavine@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:35 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Educators,

I am strongly in favor of the new social studies standards being proposed. Please adopt them.

As a retired educator myself, I know the importance of a thorough and robust examination of where we have been as a country and where we intend to go. Students are strong and intelligent enough to learn fact-based history. We would do them a disservice to not provide that.

Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Ann Lavine
Santa Fe

"Be joyful, though you have considered all the facts." Wendell Berry

Ann Lavine
Lavine and Associates
Corporate Training - Individual Coaching - Writing
507.450.6098

[EXTERNAL] Opposed to Social Studies Standards rework

Laura Feight <lafeight@hotmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to inform you that I am opposed to the rework of the Social Studies Standards to include "CRT" ideology. I hate the idea of teaching the children divisiveness and victimhood. I support teaching children that we should support people of different backgrounds, races, religions, and other groups. All should have the same opportunities to grow and progress in life.

Thank you for your consideration.

Laura Feight

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Feedback Part II

David Tofsted <dtofsted@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Juan D. Garcia <garciajd1955@gmail.com>; ROBERT W ENDLICH <bendlich@msn.com>; Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>; Rick Reynaud <rick@verde-environmental.com>; Jon P. Kahler <jpk476@comcast.net>; Dale Ann Lathrop <dalathrop87@gmail.com>; rebecca.dow@nmlegis.gov <rebecca.dow@nmlegis.gov>; Ronnie Sisneros <ronnie1519@gmail.com>; Bill Kolbin <figetaboutit@aol.com>; Bill Beerman <williamsr@wbeerman.com>; Ray Jaramillo <rjaramillo1@lcp.net>; Gilbert Bishop <gibishop@hotmail.com>; Bob Murray <robertkmurray@gmail.com>; Bob Rogers <bjoelrogers42@gmail.com>; David Cheek <dcheek@pdq.net>; Kimberly Skaggs <kim@gopnm.org>; Steve Pearce <Steve@gopnm.org>; Janice Arnold-Jones <jearnoldjones70@gmail.com>; Dave Gallus <davegal1@msn.com>; Daniel ☺ <daniel@missionoffaith.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As I have considered the tone and content of the proposed Social Studies standards, something in these standards has seemed "off" or wrong. And yet it was not truly clear what that might be until after I had completed my first response which looked merely at individual elements and issues included or not included in the standards as stated. That is, it was a matter of missing the forest because of the individual trees.

It is this more fundamental jarring problem that I now wish to address.

This issue began to appear as I considered the words being used in the standard, and those that did not appear. In particular, the word "diverse" appears 31 times. The word "diversity" appears another 12 times. The word "action" appears 39 times. The words "take" and/or "taking" appear 35 times. Yet our system of government describes how such actions or changes routinely occur within our governmental system.

The US Constitution provides a means of amendment. Yet the word "amendment" only appears twice in the standards and only in relation to the 14th and 19th amendments, not as a general subject or study area for consideration.

Similarly, while diverse and diversity appear many times, the word "union" only appears 4 times, while "unity" only appears once. Yet our country is considered a Union.

Moreover, the names "Jefferson," "Washington," and "Lincoln," key founders of our Union, never appear in the standard. And the word "freedom" or "freedoms" only appears twice, while "rights" appears some 30 times.

Key elements of the early history of our Union are also not mentioned. The Louisiana Purchase is not mentioned. The significance of the Ohio, Missouri, and Mississippi river valleys for commerce are not mentioned. Therefore the significance of the Lewis and Clark expedition is ignored.

One of our national mottos was "E Pluribus Unum" ("Out of many, one"), focusing on this country's unity. During the Civil War the north was termed "The Union" while the southern states considered themselves only a "Confederacy." As a result of the Civil War the Union won. Yet this standard seems bent on dividing the people of New Mexico into dis-united factions (identity groups).

One such example of this disunity appears in the Eighth grade standards, where paragraph 6.29.11.16 .E.2.b states, "... describe daily life in the 13 colonies by featuring individuals with diverse identities and different perspectives". The word "different" shows up 29 times in the standard. "Differences" appears nine times. "Differing" and "differently" appear twice each.

What we know is that one of the key goals of Marxist ideology is to divide non-Marxist societies into groups that hate one another in order to divide and conquer a country by undermining confidence in the existing system, and converting it into a Marxist system under the promise of a utopian replacement. Yet, in fact, Marxism is a failed ideology. Every time true socialist goals have been pursued, the countries adopting these beliefs have been converted into hellholes of poverty and death, or, as in countries such as Denmark and Sweden, they have subsequently moved away from these principles and adopted free market principles once more prior to their collapse. Thus, teaching principles that pair well with destructive and divisive Marxist beliefs IS NOT in line with the founding principles of either the State of New Mexico or the nation of the United States of America, which were designed to build unity among peoples and not to seek and build divisions. The teaching of these principles, far from enlightening our students, seeks to only highlight a single mindset, a singular SECTARIAN viewpoint (lens).

Granted, this sectarian viewpoint is purportedly non-religious, but one of the uses of the word Sectarian is with regards to a politically sectarian element. Yet, talk to Marxists, who are primarily atheistic, a religious faith position, and their beliefs verge on the fanatical. In pursuing their ideologies they have adopted the view that their revolution should be enacted "By Any Means Necessary," "The Ends Justify the Means," etc. Yet in this country we believe that the Means reveals the quality of the Ends sought. If illegal or lying means are used to obtain a supposedly good end, history has taught us that the actual ends obtained have been horrendous and deadly.

Consider that during the Cultural Revolution in Red China millions of people were killed. In the Soviet Union millions of Ukrainians were killed to communize family farms. In Cambodia millions were killed in the "Killing Fields". In Vietnam, tens of thousands of South Vietnamese officials and their families were sent to prison camps. Conversely, the New Mexico Constitution's Preamble begins with a specific shout-out: "We, the people [not the peoples, not the identity groups, THE PEOPLE] of New Mexico, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty..."

Yet this social studies standard does not even mention the word "liberty" in it, nor the word "God" or the word "Almighty." Why not? Therefore, I ask, rhetorically, "What is wrong with this standard?"

What is wrong is that this policy proposal is based around a SECTARIAN neo-Marxist program of divisive teachings based on race, ethnicity, and group think. While it makes certain feigned appeals to individuality, in nearly every case it contrasts and demeans such individual efforts with that of presumably superior results and methods that groups provide in seeking to make changes in society.

Such a sectarian view is not consistent with that of the United States goal of seeking to form a more perfect UNION, nor with the New Mexico State Constitution's view that the people of this state are called to be a UNIFIED people. As a SECTARIAN perspective, this policy violates Article XXI, Section 4 of the New Mexico State Constitution which calls for the following: "Public Schools. Provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools which shall be open to all the children of the state and free from sectarian control, and said schools shall always be conducted in English."

Article XXI is that part of our state constitution that is termed the "Compact with the United States." It was the basis for permitting New Mexico to join the United States and enjoy the benefits of being a part of the United States. As such, the provisions of this section are not ignorable. They provide grounds for lawsuits against the state PED staffers for malfeasance in promulgating a standard that is illegal according to the state constitution.

At the same time the drafters of this standard have ignored numerous key elements in this state's and our nation's history that deserve a place in these standards, but which have been crowded out by these Marxist ideological study objectives.

The very fact that so many individuals have negatively commented on this standard should be telling the staffers at the PED who are part of this revision process that there is something seriously wrong with what they are proposing. If this revised set of standards WAS NOT sectarian, would there be such an uproar? No. Because, after all, our children deserve to know US and World history. Yet that is definitively NOT what this new standard is attempting to perform. This is obvious from the mountain of content that is being swept under the carpet instead of being given primacy of place by being called out explicitly in the standards. As such, the writers of this standard have clearly revealed their SECTARIAN bias based on the partisan agenda being promoted. As such, I believe this promotion is illegal from the point of view of the New Mexico Constitution.

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 Social Studies

Gene Strickland <StricklandG@hobbsschools.net>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please see feedback received on proposed Social Studies Standards as received from staff.

Gene Strickland
Superintendent
Hobbs Municipal Schools
575.433.0100

GO EAGLES!
#thehobbsway

	General Feedback
10/12/2	20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever. 2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves. 3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly. 4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted. 5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included. 6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives. 7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc. 8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom. 9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression. 10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups. 11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it. 12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias. 13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content. 14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)? 15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images? 16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials. 17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations? 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups. 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters. 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum. 	Civics (Blue)	history

Kindergarten
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/5/2021 16:04:08	Kindergarten	Not in Support of this; the current version is effective and valid.	Not in Support of this; the current version is effective and valid.	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Not in Support of this.

1st Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/5/2021 6:42:37	1st Grade	1.7	Having the students provide examples of how people play important roles in society is an important aspect for our younger students to master. The students should be able to identify important key members in our society, such as firefighters, police officers, doctors, nurses, astronauts, etc. and how those individuals benefit our society and how our society would be affected if we did not have these important people as a part of our community.	Civics (Blue)	Living, Learning and Working Together
10/5/2021 6:47:06	1st Grade	1.9	I believe it is very important for the students of New Mexico to identify with their culture and to be able to compare what life is like today in New Mexico to past life in New Mexico. Having the students identify cultural differences and appreciating their differences is important in our multi-ethnic society.	History (Purple)	Cultures Within Our Communities

2nd Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/5/2021 10:06:	2nd Grade	all	This is great information and students need it. Will it be able to be tied in with reading taught during a separate time during the day?	Civics (Blue)	Social Studies overall
10/6/2021 14:29:	2nd Grade	All of them.	I am not a supporter of the proposed. The current is academically effective.	History (Purple)	I am not a supporter of the proposed. The current is academically effective.

3rd Grade
Timestamp	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/12/2021 20:15:08	3rd Grade	3.29	I think this work is very necessary in our ever changing world. Responding to ideas about identity and cultures is important educating well-rounded students. I think it will be necessary that teacher get training on these strands and also look at resources that are more responsive to student/teacher needs. Resources need to reflect many voices and perspectives and be willing to challenge eurocentric norms.	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Global Diversity and Identity

4th Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/4/2021 16:35:	4th Grade	4.12	The standard as written seems beneficial however there seems to be significant chunks missing especially in referencing the impact of European settlers without first having an understanding of geographic location and impact to these indigenous people as well as settlers. Students need to understand the geography and know where the European Settlers were in relation to the state.	History (Purple)	Theme 2 Migration & Settlement
10/5/2021 8:28:0	4th Grade	4.1,2,3	I think fourth grade lacks on geography. Students struggle to read a map and identify the seven continents and oceans. Many do not know where New Mexico is located.	Geography (Green)	Geography (maps)
10/4/2021 16:31:	4th Grade	7.23	Cultural	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	cultural
10/5/2021 8:28:0	4th Grade	4.1,2,3	I think fourth grade lacks on geography. Students struggle to read a map and identify the seven continents and oceans. Many do not know where New Mexico is located.	Geography (Green)	Geography (maps)

5th Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/4/2021 18:14:	5th Grade	5.12	How is this not CRT? There are not inequalities except those made by generations of families themselves. Everyone in the US is free now and has the opportunity to learn and better themselves. There should not be conflict today resulting from the past on inequality.	Civics (Blue)	Inequality and Justice
10/5/2021 8:22:2	5th Grade	5.18	I feel this standard is extremely broad and has no focus. I'm not sure why we can only address one standard and one theme in this feedback. Will we be able to teach the different themes together? If I'm teaching about the US government (3 branches, Constitution, Bill of Rights, etc) i want to teach it in context with the historical events that created them.	History (Purple)	Theme 2
10/4/2021 18:23:	5th Grade	5.29	History is just that history. Perspective should not be a part of it. We look at history to grow and be better so that we do not make the same mistakes. Times change and people progress.	History (Purple)	Identity and Multiple Spaces
10/4/2021 18:20:	5th Grade	5.31	This is CRT. This should not include how people are treated today and in the past. It should just be how peoples' cultures today and in the past make them who they are.	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Identity and Multiple Spaces

6th Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/14/2021 7:20:	6th Grade	6.34	I believe that this Performance Standard is of great use to 6th grade students. They should be able to discuss, analyze, and perform their civic duties when they become of age in our country. This standard also allows the student to discuss the duties that are present within our system, such as voting, jury duty, and civic responsibilities. I hope that the pacing guide allows for at least a week to compare and discuss the civic duties inherent in other societies of the world. Each country and/or system has built in duties to the state by it's citizens. I hope to convey just how important it is to show respect for the political system that we live in. My only worry is that we may not have enough class time to fully convey the idea of civic duties due to one's country and therefore political system.	Civics (Blue)	Classical Eastern and Western Civilizations
10/12/2021 20:50	6th Grade	7.23, 7.24	This would be a good one. It connects the past with the present.	History (Purple)	History 14

7th Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/4/2021 16:37:	7th Grade	7.72, 7.82, 7.103	Just want to make sure that the wording of the standards and how they are written does not move students to create or defend the "victim mentality" from things hundreds of years ago. We dont want to fule hate and entitlement.	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	spanish coloial period

8th Grade
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/14/2021 10:22	8th Grade	8.33	This reads more like a lesson plan than a performance standard. This is a common problem in the 8th grade standards. The "standard" tells teachers specifically how they must evaluate student learning (i.e. draw diagrams or make models).	Economics (Yellow)	3: Colonization
10/14/2021 10:24	8th Grade	8.43	This reads more like a lesson plan than a performance standard. This is a common problem in the 8th grade standards. The "standard" tells teachers specifically how they must evaluate student learning (i.e. use maps to generate questions).	Geography (Green)	4
10/14/2021 10:26	8th Grade	8.63	This reads more like a lesson plan than a performance standard. This is a common problem in the 8th grade standards. The "standard" tells teachers specifically how they must evaluate student learning (i.e. use graphic organizers). Standards need to indicate what needs to be taught and leave it up to the teacher to do so.	History (Purple)	6
10/14/2021 10:32	8th Grade	8.74	If we are teaching U.S. history, the standards for this theme should reflect the entire war, not focus on events west of the Mississippi which were mostly side notes. The Battle of Glorietta Pass, while important to NM history, is a foot note in U.S. history.	History (Purple)	8: The Civil War
10/13/2021 15:10	8th Grade	8.9	Who will decide what is "anti-immigrant" policies vs. "common sense" immigrant policies? This seems to be a point that is political in nature. It is my understanding that it would violate the ethics standards that teachers should be held to and have been expected to follow in the past.	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Immigration and Industrialization
10/14/2021 10:32	8th Grade	8.74	If we are teaching U.S. history, the standards for this theme should reflect the entire war, not focus on events west of the Mississippi which were mostly side notes. The Battle of Glorietta Pass, while important to NM history, is a foot note in U.S. history.	History (Purple)	8: The Civil War

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images? 2909
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.
17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only

NM History
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/4/2021 16:29	NM History	9-12.NMH.18.	wonderful - well thought out	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

US History
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/4/2021 16:33:45	US History	9-12.US.115.	looks good -	Civics (Blue)	13 - civil rights Movement
10/14/2021 14:55:11	US History	All	Very truncated. If we are going to teach back to beginning of American in this course students need more historical detail. These standards need to be more specific in terms of historical content.	History (Purple)

Economics
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/4/2021 16:32:2	Economics	Economic Decision Making	Much higher level thinking skills required. Very detailed. Students who go on to take Economics in college will be better prepared.		Economics (Yellow)	Economics
10/13/2021 15:47:	Economics	9-12.Econ.15.	Is very similar to what I already teach		Economics (Yellow)	NONE

Civics/Gov
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/14/2021 14:28:54	Civics / Govt	Civ 15 and Civ 17	These are very broad. I think it would be helpful to students and teachers if this were to be more narrow and specific					Civics (Blue)	High School Civics

ECI
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:
10/5/2021 8:40:2	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity	9-12.ECI.16.	I very much disagree with this course. Depending on the teacher, this could very much turn into a class bashing one class of people at the expense of another.		Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Privilege
10/5/2021 9:18:2	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity	9-12.ECI.16	This is a complex subject and in order to give feedback a proposed grade to be taught in should be assigned. This is beyond the ability of many lower grade level students to understand without becoming defensive about their ethnicity, culture, and identity		Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 19. Diversity and Identity
10/12/2021 12:3	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity	9-12.ECI.16.	I do not agree with teaching young impressionable children that "the system" offers privilege merely by virtue of ethnicity or identity group born into. Teaching that certain privileges are offered to certain colors of skin (for example) is in itself inherently racist. No child needs to be taught that they are better than or worse than others due to anything except the content of their character. In America, everyone is equal, per our Declaration of Independence, which is what we should be teaching, not how people are born unequal.		Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	?
10/13/2021 15:0	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity	13-32	I have read through each standard and believe they are, in and of themselves, race driven which is divisive. I believe we should be teaching more of unity with less pointing fingers as to differences in race or blaming one race. As an long time educator, I believe it is my duty to make ALL students feel valued and equal in my classroom and I strive daily to promote unity amongst all my students.		Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange)	Ethnic, Cultural and Identity

World History
Timestamp	Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on	Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23	Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Provide the standard number and your feedback	Anchor Standard	Provide the Theme:

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

NM History ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

9-12.NMH.18.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme * wonderful - well thought out

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

4th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

cultural

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

7.23

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Cultural

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

882 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Economics ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Economics

Anchor Standard *

Economics (Yellow) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

Economic Decision Making

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Much higher level thinking skills required. Very detailed. Students who go on to take Economics in college will be better prepared.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

US History ▼

Provide the Theme: *

13 - civil rights Movement

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

9-12.US.115.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme * looks good -

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

885 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

4th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Theme 2 Migration & Settlement

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

4.12

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

The standard as written seems beneficial however there seems to be significant chunks missing especially in referencing the impact of European settlers without first having an understanding of geographic location and impact to these indigenous people as well as settlers. Students need to understand the geography and know where the European Settlers were in relation to the state.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

7th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

spanish coloial period

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

7.72, 7.82, 7.103

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Just want to make sure that the wording of the standards and how they are written does not move students to create or defend the "victim mentality" from things hundrends of years ago. We dont want to fule hate and entitlement.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

888 of 2909

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

5th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Inequality and Justice

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

5.12

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

How is this not CRT? There are not inequalities except those made by generations of families themselves. Everyone in the US is free now and has the opportunity to learn and better themselves. There should not be conflict today resulting from the past on inequality.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

890 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

5th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Identity and Multiple Spaces

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

5.31

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This is CRT. This should not include how people are treated today and in the past. It should just be how peoples' cultures today and in the past make them who they are.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

5th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Identity and Multiple Spaces

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

5.29

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

History is just that history. Perspective should not be a part of it. We look at history to grow and be better so that we do not make the same mistakes. Times change and people progress.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

1st Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Living, Learning and Working Together

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

1.7

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Having the students provide examples of how people play important roles in society is an important aspect for our younger students to master. The students should be able to identify important key members in our society, such as firefighters, police officers, doctors, nurses, astronauts, etc. and how those individuals benefit our society and how our society would be affected if we did not have these important people as a part of our community.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

1st Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Cultures Within Our Communities

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

1.9

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I believe it is very important for the students of New Mexico to identify with their culture and to be able to compare what life is like today in New Mexico to past life in New Mexico. Having the students identify cultural differences and appreciating their differences is important in our multi-ethnic society.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

898 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

5th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Theme 2

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

5.18

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I feel this standard is extremely broad and has no focus. I'm not sure why we can only address one standard and one theme in this feedback. Will we be able to teach the different themes together? If I'm teaching about the US government (3 branches, Constitution, Bill of Rights, etc) i want to teach it in context with the historical events that created them.

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

4th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Geography (maps)

Anchor Standard *

Geography (Green) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

4.1,2,3

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I think fourth grade lacks on geography. Students struggle to read a map and identify the seven continents and oceans. Many do not know where New Mexico is located.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Privilege

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

9-12.ECI.16.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I very much disagree with this course. Depending on the teacher, this could very much turn into a class bashing one class of people at the expense of another.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies 19. Diversity and Identity

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

9-12.ECI.16

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This is a complex subject and in order to give feedback a proposed grade to be taught in should be assigned. This is beyond the ability of many lower grade level students to understand without becoming defensive about their ethnicity, culture, and identity

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

906 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

2nd Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Social Studies overall

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

all

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This is great information and students need it. Will it be able to be tied in with reading taught during a separate time during the day?

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Themes were provided.

Anchor Standard *

Inquiry (Red) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

Performance Standard Numbers were present.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I am not a social studies teacher, but the anchor standard/theme appeared to be in context with performance standard.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Kindergarten ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Not in Support of this.

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

Not in Support of this; the current version is effective and valid.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Not in Support of this; the current version is effective and valid.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

912 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

2nd Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

I am not a supporter of the proposed. The current is academically effective.

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

All of them.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I am not a supporter of the proposed. The current is academically effective.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

913 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity ▼

Provide the Theme: *

?

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

9-12.ECI.16.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I do not agree with teaching young impressionable children that "the system" offers privilege merely by virtue of ethnicity or identity group born into. Teaching that certain privileges are offered to certain colors of skin (for example) is in itself inherently racist. No child needs to be taught that they are better than or worse than others due to anything except the content of their character. In America, everyone is equal, per our Declaration of Independence, which is what we should be teaching, not how people are born unequal.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Kindergarten ▼

Provide the Theme: *

History

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

1st Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

2nd Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

3rd Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

4th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

5th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

6th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

7th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

7th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Civics / Govt

Provide the Theme: *

history

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue)

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Economics ▼

Provide the Theme: *

economics

Anchor Standard *

Economics (Yellow) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Geography

Provide the Theme: *

geograhly and history

Anchor Standard *

Geography (Green)

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

NM History ▼

Provide the Theme: *

NM History

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

US History ▼

Provide the Theme: *

US History

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

World History

Provide the Theme: *

world history

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple)

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity ▼

Provide the Theme: *

culture and identity

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

n/a

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

20 Recommended Key Characteristics for a revised K-12 Hobbs Municipal Schools Multicultural Social Studies Curriculum

1. Teaching all sides of history/social studies and utilizing resources that aim to showcase diverse peoples is essential in the modern social studies classroom. Recognizing the unique struggles of people of color throughout history and empathizing with them takes precedence in learning, now more than ever.
2. Exposure to materials highlighting racial and cultural diversity, disabilities, and LGBTQIA representation in the elementary years helps students see beyond themselves and builds emotional connections to people who may be unlike themselves.
3. Proponents of greater inclusivity in history say that when young people see themselves in the story of our shared past, they not only develop a deeper appreciation of the subject but become more civically active. Students who feel a sense of belonging and identity in school are more likely to be engaged in society more broadly.
4. One important aspect of diversifying explicit curriculum is to consider the role that people from marginalized groups play and how their experience is depicted.
5. Expanding curriculum to include a variety of perspectives not only allows educators to discuss views and ideas that are less common or underrepresented, but also provides students a more holistic understanding of the subject area. Furthermore, positive role models from a variety of different backgrounds and cultural groups can be included.
6. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum celebrates cultural holidays and highlighting famous individuals from non-dominant groups, drawing attention to the fact that society is shaped by multiple perspectives.
7. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum incorporate discussions and activities that address social issues such as practicing equity within a democracy, overcoming discrimination/prejudice based on differences in access to power, providing accommodations for persons with disabilities, etc.
8. New proposed social studies curriculum must acknowledge and address a diversity of learning styles while challenging dynamics of power and privilege in the classroom.
9. New proposed social studies curriculum must not perpetuate privilege and oppression.
10. New proposed social studies curriculum must be complete and accurate, acknowledging the contributions and perspectives of all groups.
11. Study the history of discrimination in curriculum and ensure that as a school district we are not replicating it.
12. Teaching and learning materials must be diverse and critically examined for bias.
13. Examine all materials for bias and oppressive content.
14. Ensure social studies/history book do not show stereotypical or inaccurate images of people from certain groups or eras (ex. railroad workers)?
15. Ensure social studies/history reading or literature materials does not have racist language or stereotypical images?
16. Diversify images and content in bulletin boards, posters, and other constantly-visible materials.

17. Ensure that new proposed social studies curriculum always diversify, or only during special months or celebrations?
 18. Present content from a variety of perspectives, not only that of majority groups.
 19. Present content through a variety of lenses, not just those of a few heroic characters.
 20. Include an equitable panel of students, staff, parents, grandparents, community stakeholders and district leaders (representing every/all ethnic/race/cultural demographics) in monthly meetings (zoom or in-person) prior to deciding on a replacement social studies curriculum.
-

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

3rd Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Global Diversity and Identity

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

3.29

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I think this work is very necessary in our ever changing world. Responding to ideas about identity and cultures is important educating well-rounded students.

I think it will be necessary that teacher get training on these strands and also look at resources that are more responsive to student/teacher needs. Resources need to reflect many voices and perspectives and be willing to challenge eurocentric norms.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

6th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

History 14

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

7.23, 7.24

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This would be a good one. It connects the past with the present.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

969 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

13-32

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I have read through each standard and believe they are, in and of themselves, race driven which is divisive. I believe we should be teaching more of unity with less pointing fingers as to differences in race or blaming one race. As an long time educator, I believe it is my duty to make ALL students feel valued and equal in my classroom and I strive daily to promote unity amongst all my students.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Immigration and Industrialization

Anchor Standard *

Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies (Orange) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

8.9

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Who will decide what is "anti-immigrant" policies vs. "common sense" immigrant policies? This seems to be a point that is political in nature. It is my understanding that it would violate the ethics standards that teachers should be held to and have been expected to follow in the past.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

972 of 2909

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Economics ▼

Provide the Theme: *

NONE

Anchor Standard *

Economics (Yellow) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

9-12.Econ.15.

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Is very similar to what I already teach

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

974 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

6th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Classical Eastern and Western Civilizations

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

6.34

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

I believe that this Performance Standard is of great use to 6th grade students. They should be able to discuss, analyze, and perform their civic duties when they become of age in our country. This standard also allows the student to discuss the duties that are present within our system, such as voting, jury duty, and civic responsibilities. I hope that the pacing guide allows for at least a week to compare and discuss the civic duties inherent in other societies of the world. Each country and/or system has built in duties to the state by it's citizens. I hope to convey just how important it is to show respect for the political system that we live in. My only worry is that we may not have enough class time to fully convey the idea of civic duties due to one's country and therefore political system.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

3: Colonizatn

Anchor Standard *

Economics (Yellow) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

8.33

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This reads more like a lesson plan than a performance standard. This is a common problem in the 8th grade standards. The "standard" tells teachers specifically how they must evaluate student learning (i.e. draw diagrams or make models).

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

977 of 2909

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

4

Anchor Standard *

Geography (Green) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

8.43

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This reads more like a lesson plan than a performance standard. This is a common problem in the 8th grade standards. The "standard" tells teachers specifically how they must evaluate student learning (i.e. use maps to generate questions).

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

979 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

6

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

8.63

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

This reads more like a lesson plan than a performance standard. This is a common problem in the 8th grade standards. The "standard" tells teachers specifically how they must evaluate student learning (i.e. use graphic organizers). Standards need to indicate what needs to be taught and leave it up to the teacher to do so.

Google Forms

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

8th Grade ▼

Provide the Theme: *

8: The Civil War

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

8.74

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

If we are teaching U.S. history, the standards for this theme should reflect the entire war, not focus on events west of the Mississippi which were mostly side notes. The Battle of Glorietta Pass, while important to NM history, is a foot note in U.S. history.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

983 of 2909

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

Civics / Govt

Provide the Theme: *

High School Civics

Anchor Standard *

Civics (Blue)

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

Civ 15 and Civ 17

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

These are very broad. I think it would be helpful to students and teachers if this were to be more narrow and specific

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

Social Studies Standards 2021

Please provide feedback to the draft standards. HMS intends to collate the comments and provide them during the public input period.

Grade or Subject Area providing feedback on *

US History ▼

Provide the Theme: *

Early America and all themes

Anchor Standard *

History (Purple) ▼

Provide the Performance Standard Number, Example 7.23 *

All

Feedback on performance standard in context of Anchor Standard and Theme *

Very truncated. If we are going to teach back to beginning of American in this course students need more historical detail. These standards need to be more specific in terms of historical content.

This form was created inside of Hobbs Municipal Schools.

[EXTERNAL] New Cirriculum

stephanie green <geostephgreen@hotmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:46 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

This email is to serve as a comment against the new social studies curriculum that is being considered for our schools. Terms, ideas, and propaganda, that is to be implemented into what is taught to our children that segregates us by the color of our skin and does not teach how exceptionally and triumphantly our state and our nation has overcome abhorrent actions of the past. The sins of our past were not invented here, but in practice all over the world for the entire history of man. This country, this state, of free men and women have done more to triumph over, and eradicate from practice those actions in the past that are used to convince us we are oppressed or an oppressor and should be divided, segregated, and judged by the color of our skin-not the content of our character.

This will serve to push us back into the ice ages of man, not bring us forward into a better tomorrow! I urge you with every bit of energy I can muster in an email-DO NOT IMPLEMENT CRT(critical race theory) OR ANYTHING THAT REMOTELY RESEMBLES IT ON OUR CHILDREN!!! Our children in this state, and this nation-deserve to learn that regardless of the color of their skin, how much money their parents have, no matter if they are a boy or a girl; they are all capable of whatever they set their minds to-the only person holding them back is themselves if they choose to-unless of course it's the propaganda in the education system telling them otherwise. DO NOT TEACH THAT TO OUR CHILDREN-THEY DESERVE BETTER!

Get Outlook for iOS

[EXTERNAL] Re: Social Studies Feedback Part II

Robert Wood <robwood@wwdb.org>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:49 AM

To: David Tofsted <dtofsted@gmail.com>Cc: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; juan garcia <garciagd1955@gmail.com>; ROBERT W ENDLICH <bendlich@msn.com>; rick@verde-environmental.com <rick@verde-environmental.com>; Jon P. Kahler <jpk476@comcast.net>; Dale Ann Lathrop <dalathrop87@gmail.com>; rebecca.dow@nmlegis.gov <rebecca.dow@nmlegis.gov>; Ronnie Sisneros <ronnie1519@gmail.com>; Bill Kolbin <figetaboutit@aol.com>; Bill Beerman <williamsr@wbeerman.com>; Ray Jaramillo <rjaramillo1@lcp.net>; Gilbert Bishop <gibishop@hotmail.com>; Bob Murray <robertkmurray@gmail.com>; Bob Rogers <bjoelrogers42@gmail.com>; David Cheek <dcheek@pdq.net>; Kimberly Skaggs <kim@gopnm.org>; Steve Pearce <Steve@gopnm.org>; Janice Arnold-Jones <jearnoldjones70@gmail.com>; Dave Gallus <davegal1@msn.com>; Daniel ☺ <daniel@missionoffaith.org>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

David,

Thank you for clearing the forest so we can see the trees. Laws have become irrelevant as our nation dove into their basements following 9/11 leaving fear as the motivator to create security by trading off freedoms and negating or ignoring laws. This revision is just one more example, as you have so eloquently pointed out, to ignore the legal Standards our State is supposed to abide by.

Rob

On Nov 8, 2021, at 10:39 AM, David Tofsted <dtofsted@gmail.com> wrote:

As I have considered the tone and content of the proposed Social Studies standards, something in these standards has seemed "off" or wrong. And yet it was not truly clear what that might be until after I had completed my first response which looked merely at individual elements and issues included or not included in the standards as stated. That is, it was a matter of missing the forest because of the individual trees.

It is this more fundamental jarring problem that I now wish to address.

This issue began to appear as I considered the words being used in the standard, and those that did not appear. In particular, the word "diverse" appears 31 times. The word "diversity" appears another 12 times. The word "action" appears 39 times. The words "take" and/or "taking" appear 35 times. Yet our system of government describes how such actions or changes routinely occur within our governmental system.

The US Constitution provides a means of amendment. Yet the word "amendment" only appears twice in the standards and only in relation to the 14th and 19th amendments, not as a general subject or study area for consideration.

Similarly, while diverse and diversity appear many times, the word "union" only appears 4 times, while "unity" only appears once. Yet our country is considered a Union.

Moreover, the names "Jefferson," "Washington," and "Lincoln," key founders of our Union, never appear in the standard. And the word "freedom" or "freedoms" only appears twice, while "rights" appears some 30 times.

Key elements of the early history of our Union are also not mentioned. The Louisiana Purchase is not mentioned. The significance of the Ohio, Missouri, and Mississippi river valleys for commerce are not mentioned. Therefore the significance of the Lewis and Clark expedition is ignored.

One of our national mottos was "E Pluribus Unum" ("Out of many, one"), focusing on this country's unity. During the Civil War the north was termed "The Union" while the southern states considered themselves only a "Confederacy." As a result of the Civil War the Union won. Yet this standard seems bent on dividing the people of New Mexico into dis-united factions (identity groups).

One such example of this disunity appears in the Eighth grade standards, where paragraph 6.29.11.16 .E.2.b states, "... describe daily life in the 13 colonies by featuring individuals with diverse identities and different perspectives". The word "different" shows up 29 times in the standard. "Differences" appears nine times. "Differing" and "differently" appear twice each.

What we know is that one of the key goals of Marxist ideology is to divide non-Marxist societies into groups that hate one another in order to divide and conquer a country by undermining confidence in the existing system, and converting it into a Marxist system under the promise of a utopian replacement. Yet, in fact, Marxism is a failed ideology. Every time true socialist goals have been pursued, the countries adopting these beliefs have been converted into hellholes of poverty and death, or, as in countries such as Denmark and Sweden, they have subsequently moved away from these principles and adopted free market principles once more prior to their collapse. Thus, teaching principles that pair well with destructive and divisive Marxist beliefs IS NOT in line with the founding principles of either the State of New Mexico or the nation of the United States of America, which were designed to build unity among peoples and not to seek and build divisions. The teaching of these principles, far from enlightening our students, seeks to only highlight a single mindset, a singular SECTARIAN viewpoint (lens).

Granted, this sectarian viewpoint is purportedly non-religious, but one of the uses of the word Sectarian is with regards to a politically sectarian element. Yet, talk to Marxists, who are primarily atheistic, a religious faith position, and their beliefs verge on the fanatical. In pursuing their ideologies they have adopted the view that their revolution should be enacted "By Any Means Necessary," "The Ends Justify the Means," etc. Yet in this country we believe that the Means reveals the quality of the Ends sought. If illegal or lying means are used to obtain a supposedly good end, history has taught us that the actual ends obtained have been horrendous and deadly.

Consider that during the Cultural Revolution in Red China millions of people were killed. In the Soviet Union millions of Ukrainians were killed to communize family farms. In Cambodia millions were killed in the "Killing Fields". In Vietnam, tens of thousands of South Vietnamese officials and their families were sent to prison camps.

Conversely, the New Mexico Constitution's Preamble begins with a specific shout-out: "We, the people [not the peoples, not the identity groups, THE PEOPLE] of New Mexico, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty..."

Yet this social studies standard does not even mention the word "liberty" in it, nor the word "God" or the word "Almighty." Why not? Therefore, I ask, rhetorically, "What is wrong with this standard?"

What is wrong is that this policy proposal is based around a SECTARIAN neo-Marxist program of divisive teachings based on race, ethnicity, and group think. While it makes certain feigned appeals to individuality, in nearly every case it contrasts and demeans such individual efforts with that of presumably superior results and methods that groups provide in seeking to make changes in society.

Such a sectarian view is not consistent with that of the United States goal of seeking to form a more perfect UNION, nor with the New Mexico State Constitution's view that the people of this state are called to be a UNIFIED people. As a SECTARIAN perspective, this policy violates Article XXI, Section 4 of the New Mexico State Constitution which calls for the following: "Public Schools. Provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools which shall be open to all the children of the state and free from sectarian control, and said schools shall always be conducted in English."

Article XXI is that part of our state constitution that is termed the "Compact with the United States." It was the basis for permitting New Mexico to join the United States and enjoy the benefits of being a part of the United States. As such, the provisions of this section are not ignorable. They provide grounds for lawsuits against the state PED staffers for malfeasance in promulgating a standard that is illegal according to the state constitution.

At the same time the drafters of this standard have ignored numerous key elements in this state's and our nation's history that deserve a place in these standards, but which have been crowded out by these Marxist ideological study objectives.

The very fact that so many individuals have negatively commented on this standard should be telling the staffers at the PED who are part of this revision process that there is something seriously wrong with what they are proposing. If this revised set of standards WAS NOT sectarian, would there be such an uproar? No. Because, after all, our children deserve to know US and World history. Yet that is definitively NOT what this new standard is attempting to perform. This is obvious from the mountain of content that is being swept under the carpet instead of being given primacy of place by being called out explicitly in the standards. As such, the writers of this standard have clearly revealed their SECTARIAN bias based on the partisan agenda being promoted. As such, I believe this promotion is illegal from the point of view of the New Mexico Constitution.

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Rules on Social Studies Standards

Melinda Silver <melindasilver@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 10:57 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing to express support for the proposed new social studies standards for the following reasons:

- Fair and Full Process: As a former attorney in the Office of the Superintendent of Insurance, I look for a fair process of fact-gathering and input from stakeholders before creating proposed rules and regulations.
 - In this case, the process that was used to create the standards included a committee of 64 members, representing k-12 from 38 districts and charters.
 - In addition, Focus Groups were held in June 2021 for a wide array of stakeholder groups so that writing teams could incorporate feedback into the writing of the draft standards.
 - Superintendents were also regularly updated during weekly superintendent calls and the twice-weekly newsletter that they receive.
- Intent of the Standards – teaching Students Critical Thinking: These standards provide a framework that will prepare students for tomorrow's world; an understanding of the importance of global trade, competition, and teamwork that allows for a diversity of views. The standards teach students how to think, not what to think.
- Civic Values: These standards will teach, enforce, and value civic education as an integral part of student education.

All of these standards incorporate, value and provide for the preservation of a student's own cultural heritage.

Proposed Revision - Financial Literacy: I would suggest that the rule include more emphasis on financial literacy in all grade levels; understanding financial decision-making and consequences of those decisions.

Melinda Silver
Volunteer and Leadership Circle Member,
Coalition for Public Education (formerly the Interfaith Coalition for Public Education)

[EXTERNAL] New Social Studies Standards

Possin, Kevin E <kpossin@winona.edu>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:04 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Fellow Educators,

As an Emeritus Professor of Philosophy, having published critical-thinking texts and software and numerous articles on critical-thinking assessment testing, I completely approve of the newly proposed NM Social Studies Standards.

After reading the entire proposal, I find that the activities and objectives the proposal details are exactly what should be in a K-12 curriculum. They enhance critical-thinking skills and focus on robust evidence-based studies of the person, the community, and the world.

I only wish my early education had included all of these crucial topics and activities.

All the criticisms I am hearing about the proposal are nothing but Strawman Fallacies—just irrelevant misrepresentations of the proposal, most often intentionally so.

Thank you for your hard work drafting the proposal and your continued work at implementing it.

Most sincerely,

Prof. Kevin Possin

Kevin Possin
Professor Emeritus
Department of Philosophy
Winona State University
The Critical Thinking Lab
1012 Calle Dorthia
Santa Fe, NM 87506
USA
507.459.6689

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Barb Nicholes <spsussex@hotmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:10 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Sent from Mail for Windows

To Whom it may concern;

These are my thoughts on CRT (critical race theory).

Critical race theory is Wrong.

When you are all only looking at everything by the color of your skin, That is a racist thing. (Very Racist).

The U.S. census Form is a very racist document.

Race or Ancestral Background is really no business of anyone but me.

You should only be interested in:

- | | |
|------------------------------------|-----------|
| 1-are you a U.S. citizen | yes or no |
| 2-do you have a Visa or Green card | yes or no |
| 3-are you illegally here | yes or no |

This is all that should matter to the citizens of the United States, not the color of the my skin or where my ancestors are from. My identity or Ancestral background or (anyone else's) Does Not need to be recorded by any government, society or any organization at all.

Ethnicity and race are interesting and fun to see when you are searching your genealogy.

When the census workers call and want me to identify myself by white, black, Hispanic, Asian, ect.;; (Because I list our family as Americans), I ask them what year they want me to identify where my ancestors come from. Because I can get ancestors from every country.

So in short I come from ALL races, ethnicities & all countries.

CRT is hateful, racist and just plain wrong.

We need to be a people of acceptance.

It doesn't matter what the color of your skin is or where your ancestors are from.

All that matters is, that you are a person. A citizen of the United States of America.

Thank you very much for your time

Barbara Nicholes

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Changes to New Mexico's Social Studies Curriculum kimgryphon@gmail.com <kimgryphon@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:24 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I am writing in support of the proposed changes to the New Mexico's Social Studies Curriculum and particularly in support of these changes' emphasis on "major historical themes such as power, class conflict, struggle, geo-political impact, social justice, equity and diversity," and "ensuring divergence from a singular Eurocentric cultural script ensuring equitable inclusion of accurate historical stories reflecting Indigenous, Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizaro, African American and other cultural perspectives."

This commitment to equity and multiple perspectives will be crucial to help students understand and care about social justice in their communities and in the world. This is an incredible opportunity to expand the curriculum toward a more inclusive future. As a resident of New Mexico who works in public schools, I will be thrilled to teach these perspectives in the classroom.

Thank you for your time and attention.

peace,kim griffis
(they/them) 781 733 6431

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] American History

Kenneth Slater <slaterk2096@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:30 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Yes, it's about time that someone decided to teach real history in this country. The sugar coded version has to be replaced or nothing will change. This country was built on racism and it time every child knows it.

Mr. Kenneth Slater
Clovis, NM

[EXTERNAL] Social studies curriculum change

Sarah Nunn <sarahjnunn@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:38 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I strongly oppose the changes presented for social studies curriculum for k-12th grade. Children should not be divided into victims and oppressors, based on the color of their skin or labeled and defined by their race. This is a step backwards. This will cause division and encourage hate and bullying in our schools. I do not support this curriculum change. Critical race theory, or whatever you want to disguise it as, should not be taught in schools. Reading, writing, and math are what schools should focus on.

We are 50th in education and should be focused on teaching reading, writing, and math — not indoctrinating children in liberal ideology.

Sarah Nunn
505-697-8973
2493 Manzano Loop NE
Rio Rancho, NM 87144

[EXTERNAL] New Mexico Social Studies Standards comments

James Taylor <jtaylor505@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:55 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I have read the Social Studies Crosswalk and the Standards. I was particularly interested in the treatment of the period including the Civil War, and looked over the comparisons to the current standards. It is clear to me that this revision was long overdue. Try as I might, I could find nothing remotely objectionable in the standards. Overall, they address the considerable shortcomings in the current standards that take as a given that the dominant European-US culture defines our history and culture.

Well done.

Sincerely,

James C Taylor

Real mathematics involves not knowing what is going on, not having any idea what to do, and then playing around and hopefully finding your way through.

—Sarah Hart

O wake me from the sleep of being sure

—Amanda Jernigan

It was when I found out I could make mistakes that I knew I was on to something. - Ornette Coleman

[EXTERNAL] PED Proposed Social Studies Standards

Lynn Bickley <lbick09@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 12:16 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear PED, I write in support of the adoption of the proposed Social Studies Standards, which add to current standards without replacing them, emphasize critical thinking, encourage multiple perspectives and realistic respectful appraisal of the rich history and social development of New Mexico, and prepare students for a complex global future.

Sincerely,
Lynn Bickley

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Resolution

Cindy Sims, PhD <cindy.sims@emsdbears.us>

Mon 11/8/2021 12:22 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please find attached a Resolution passed by the Estancia Municipal School District. The Board is respectfully asking for more time to review the standards when staff have more time to be thoughtful and reflective in a non-Covid-crazy world!

Thank you - Cindy

Cindy L. Sims, PhD
Superintendent
Estancia Municipal Schools
PO Box 68
Estancia, NM 87016
(505) 384-2006

Every Student, Every Day Go Bears!

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This e-mail, including all attachments is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message.

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This email and attached documents may contain confidential information. All information is intended only for the use of the named recipient. If you are not the named recipient, you are not authorized to read, disclose, copy, distribute or take any action in reliance on the information and any action other than immediate delivery to the named recipient is strictly prohibited. If you have received this email in error, do not read the information and please immediately notify sender by telephone or email to arrange for a return of the original documents. If you are the named recipient you are not authorized to reveal any of this information to any other unauthorized person. If you did not receive all pages listed or if pages are not legible, please immediately notify sender by phone or email.

Petition of the
Estancia Municipal District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

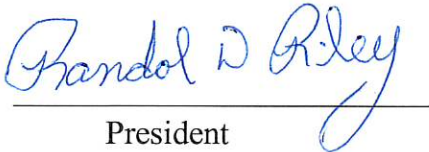

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

Whereas, the Estancia Public School District Board of Education (the "Board") deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by unanimous approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to at least July 1, 2023, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

Estancia Municipal School Board of Education

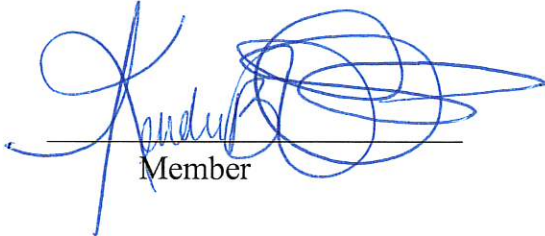

President

Vice President

Secretary

Member

Member

[EXTERNAL] Opinion on proposed educational standards.

Joseph Keenan <josephjkeenan@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 12:41 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Sir or Madam:

I'm writing to express my support for the new curricular standards. I find the arguments against it based in fear, ignorance and politics rather than valid critical assessments. This is a time to lead not follow the will of New Mexicans.

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards

Bill Adrian <oblatebill@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 12:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I applaud these standards. They definitely are what is needed to prepare New Mexican students for the 21st, and 22nd, Centuries. They appear to create the necessary building blocks of knowledge and thought process appropriate for each age group. The students should end up with the skills and knowledge needed for survival of the United States, and the World;

- understanding the history of New Mexico and United States society
- understanding the cultures of the past and present
- understanding the structure of New Mexico and United States government
- understanding the responsibilities to be an active participating citizen of New Mexico, United States and the World
- being able to identify the challenges of the present and the future
- being able to formulate feasible solutions to the challenges
- understanding the processes of implementing the solutions
- understanding how to review and adjust these processes, proposed solutions and definitions of the challenges as more information and knowledge is gleaned through an individual rational thought process

Sincerely,
William Adrian
Santa Fe, NM 87505
oblatebill@gmail.com

--

"I think procrastination is sometimes, not always, but sometimes a misnomer. I think it should be called rumination. Because some of us need a lot of time to just absorb it and then translate it out of ourselves."
Susan York

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Jaymie Duneman <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 12:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

I am a concerned parent of 4 students in APS, as well as an active employee of APS - my stance on this is very strong! Thank you for your time and deep consideration of this issue.

Sincerely,

Jaymie Duneman
919 Grecian NW
Albuquerque, NM 87107-5732

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC social studies comments from APS

Heather Bassett <heather.bassett@aps.edu>

Mon 11/8/2021 12:57 PM

To: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>; FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Elder, Scott <elder_s@aps.edu>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena,

Attached is the written comment from Albuquerque Public Schools regarding rule open for comment now until November 12, 2021 for 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies Standards.

Thank you for this opportunity to offer comments on this rule.

Sincerely,
Heather

--

Heather Bassett

Ph.D. I Policy Analyst/Government Affairs Liaison Albuquerque Public Schools

Cell: 505-350-1649 | heather.bassett@aps.edu | PO Box 25704 Albuquerque, NM 87125-0704

-

PED Rule Feedback
Policy Division, NM PED
300 Don Gaspar Ave., Santa Fe, NM 87501
November 8, 2021

Dear Mr. Sena:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comment on 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies Standards. Albuquerque Public Schools was able to get feedback from about a dozen schools during this review window and from district resource teachers who support social studies teachers.

At this time, APS supports a conditional adoption of these standards and believes with further comment and refinement we can fix the structural and logistical obstacles to implement these standards.

The majority of reviews from school social studies leaders in APS appreciate the addition of inquiries of thought as strands and the intentional attentiveness to culturally and linguistically responsive curriculum. Many of our APS reviewers indicated that the inquiry-based approach is significantly more rigorous than our current state standards.

If adopted, the proposed standards will require resources, time, and professional development for at least three semesters. APS suggests that during those three semesters, schools work with the current and proposed standards side-by-side. During this time, teachers shall strive to implement these standards and PED provide continued space to inform the refinement and polishing of these proposed standards. The purpose of this conditional adoption would be to continue to refine these proposed standards to address the numerous logistical and structural issues we have observed.

The proposed, new standards are a big departure from the current standards. In some cases, the proposed standards also influence grade level, graduation requirements, as well as scope and sequence. This list is illustrative of some of the issues. This list is not exhaustive, but it represents some of the logistical and implementation obstacles that teachers see in these standards that deserve consideration and time.

- The standards impact scope and sequence
 - US History, currently taught at 11th grade, is Reconstruction to present; the proposed, new standards expand that time period to be comprehensive US History
- It is unclear the measures of accountability for adoption and additional measures like End of Course Exams impacts the implementation and conversations about supports needed to implement
- Government is the current graduation requirement in statute and title for standards. The proposed standards address “Civics,” which is a different course that may be a different grade level and possibly out of line with statutory graduation requirements
- There is no mention of “checks and balances” in the civic standards
- Lack of specifics or consistency on naming of specifics. In some cases, specific historic events or people are named, but these instances do not provide exhaustive examples but also do stand as only examples. In some cases, these omissions represent significant conversations in current classrooms, such as
 - In US History, for example, the “Marshall Plan”
 - In World History, references to immigration are not inclusive and leave out the potato famine
 - In sixth grade, Egypt is missing
 - In eighth grade, there is limited reference to exploration

- Potentially objectionable and politicked language regarding gun rights is included in standards
- The inquiry standards may be better suited as their own section, rather than embedded within each content strand. This would provide clear articulation of skill development from year to year and support vertical integration.
- The number of standards is uneven between grade levels and in some ways, not achievable in one school year.
 - In sixth grade, there are only 54 standards, but there are 103 in seventh grade and 90 in eighth grade.
- The standards are broad and specify little about what to teach, but seem to dictate to teachers, how to teach. The lack of specificity may provide teachers autonomy and flexibility, but will also result in a lack of consistency and uniformity
- The standards include more content in New Mexico history than what can be covered in the existing, semester graduation requirement
- Not every anchor standard is represented at every grade level
- Clarification is needed for some terms and definitions
 - Offer clarification on how to define: “7.5 Analyze various forms of media to identify polarizing language, logical fallacy, and reasonable judgment”
- Guiding principles indicate these standards align to the ruling and implications of Yazzie/Martinez. The textbook adoption process needs to also align
- Implementation of these standards need to be accompanied or prefaced with pedagogical training and CLRI training for teachers

This list is only representative of the logistical impacts and implementation obstacles. The proposed, new standards represent an incredible shift in more than just content. In many ways, our teachers are ready to incorporate these changes, but there are instances where the process of teacher implementation might appropriately provide information that requires a change to the standards. Therefore, APS requests a process of implementation that requires a revisiting of the rule at the conclusion of three semesters of implementation in order to sort out the impact to scope and sequence, grade level, graduation requirements, End or Course exams, and other logistical issues related to these standards. The full analysis from the schools of Albuquerque Public Schools is long enough to warrant more time and an iterative process to continue to draft these standards.

We look forward to continued collaboration and recognize these proposed standards create a wonderful opportunity to begin a conversation about changing social studies standards in our state to be more culturally responsive. We recommend a transition of implementation that provides a window of time to allow these content standards to be further refined throughout a process, rather than merely moving forward with an immediate and final adoption.

Sincerely,

Heather Bassett
 Policy Analyst/Government Affairs Liaison
 Albuquerque Public Schools

Cc: Scott Elder, Superintendent, Albuquerque Public Schools

[EXTERNAL] Social studies agenda/ curriculum

Karen Buterbaugh <grkaem@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 1:01 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NMPED: I am totally against this critical race theory curriculum. The problem first arose when lower grades stopped teaching history and only "community " info. like your city and leaders there , workers in your community , subjects like that. Children had no sense of time line.

This type of CRT curriculum is just an extension and leads to fracture rather than bring groups together. It can create hatred among groups. This thinking is only erasing what happened in history not analyzing it and asking how can we learn from this and make it better.

The term racist is thrown around at the drop of a hat with no real examination of the situation first. Maybe movies are part of the problem due to the way many groups of people were portrayed, and before internet that's all we knew.

Mrs. Buterbaugh

Resident. Santa Fe

[EXTERNAL] Comments: "New Mexico Social Studies Standards, Draft — Pre Rule Copy (122 pages):"

Michael Campbell <camp.pecos@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 1:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I tender the following documents, to be added to the public record, as comments regarding: "New Mexico Social Studies Standards, Draft — Pre Rule Copy (122 pages):"

1. A 29-page letter, including endnotes, dated November 8, 2021 and signed by me, and;
2. An attached PowerPoint, Slide Nos. 1-17.

Could I ask that you or someone at the Department acknowledge receipt (by a short return e-mail) of these documents. Thank you.

Michael Campbell
camp.pecos@gmail.com

November 8, 2021

VIA E-MAIL

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gasper Ave, Room 121
Santa Fe, N.M. 87501
rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Re: Written Public Comments:
New Mexico Social Studies Standards
Draft – Pre Rule Copy (pp. 1-122)

Dear Mr. Sena

My background is noted.¹

I ask that you make these comments part of the public record in this matter. I have reviewed the “New Mexico Social Studies Standards, Draft – Pre Rule Copy (pp. 1-122)(the “Proposed New Standards”) as well as documents surrounding those standards, found on the PED website, and elsewhere. I offer a Summary of my Comments, followed by General Comments, and then Specific Comments on the Proposed New Standards by grade, beginning with the proposed standards for New Mexico Kindergarten children.

SUMMARY

By sponsoring the Proposed New Standards, the New Mexico Public Education Department (“PED”) introduces major tenants of Critical Race Theory (“CRT”) to New Mexico public school classrooms, beginning in Kindergarten and continuing with increasing intensity through Grade 12.

CRT is an ideology premised on division and fear that looks at American society with the conviction that racism is at the core of American law and institutions. The doctrine posits that there are only two types of people in America: oppressors and oppressed. It is sourced in classic Marxist theory about a struggle between capitalists and the working class. CRT theory dictates that to eliminate racism American society and institutions must first be destroyed, and then be rebuilt as directed by its proponents.

As proposed by PED, these CRT “standards” indoctrinate New Mexico children, beginning at 5 YOs in Kindergarten, by placing them in respective racial groups – presently defined by PED to include “[i]ndigenous, Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizano, African American” and, presumably, white.² CRT proponents euphemistically call these racial distinctions “identity groups.” Children are placed and kept in these “identity groups” beginning in Kindergarten with seemingly innocuous learning standards:

“K22 Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.

“K23 Describe ways in which they are similar and different from other people who share their identities, and people who do not.”

See, Proposed New Standards, Kindergarten at p. 16 (emphasis added). But PED intensifies CRT indoctrination as New Mexico children advance in age and grade. By the time New Mexico children reach 9th Grade, PED drops all pretense and out-right announces its demand that New Mexico public school students adopt CRT theory:

“9-12.ECI.14 Identify and analyze cultural, differently abled, ethnic, gender, national, political, racial, and religious identities and related perceptions and behaviors by society of these identities.

“9-12.ECI.16 Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.”

See, Proposed New Standards 9-12 at p. 122 (emphasis added). This is pure, unadulterated CRT-speak.

Any rational assessment would conclude that PED’s Proposed New Standards are infested with CRT. These standards are divisive, anti-American, anti-free enterprise, and destructive of the tri-cultural community at the center of New Mexico’s identity. There could not be a more socially-divisive educational approach than what the PED seeks to implement with its Proposed New Standards.

These Proposed New Standards should be abandoned or amended substantially. Any further PED meetings on these Standards should be noticed and open to the public and parents, which has not occurred previously.

GENERAL COMMENTS

These are comments on the general tone, tenor and content of the Proposed New Standards, the faulty, exclusionary procedure by which these standards have been drafted to date, and the prospect these standards may be adopted and implemented without appropriate public or parental disclosure or input.

1. With these Proposed New Standards, Critical Race Theory (“CRT”) Comes to New Mexico. Proponents of these Proposed New Standards will take one of two tracks to support their adoption. Some will argue that these standards do not incorporate CRT. That argument is demonstrably false. Facts demonstrate that language in these standards comes straight from CRT ideology and literature. Other proponents will argue that while these standards do incorporate CRT, it’s OK to teach CRT to New Mexico children, beginning in Kindergarten. That argument is also false.

2. What is CRT? We can’t see CRT unless we know what we are looking for. What is CRT?

CRT is an intellectual approach to looking at US society with a conviction that racism is at the core of [American] laws and institutions.³ It is an academic discipline built on the framework of Marxism.⁴ Relegated for many years to universities and obscure academic journals, over the past decade it has increasingly become the default ideology in public institutions.⁵

There are a series of euphemisms deployed by supporters of CRT to describe the doctrine, including “equity,” “social justice,” “diversity and inclusion,” “identity groups,” and “culturally responsive teaching.”⁶ CRT theorists, realizing a label of “neo-Marxism” would be a hard sell, cloak the program in terms of “equity.” But the object of CRT is to divide people into their respective racial “identity groups” and then let them fight it out as to who is more “oppressed.”

Marxist-based CRT embedded in these New Proposed Standards is culturally divisive, detrimental and destructive of the tri-cultural community at the center of New Mexico’s identity. These standards must be abandoned.

3. CRT is embedded in the Proposed New Standards by means of “Guiding Principles.”

It takes little effort to recognize the CRT-speak embedded in the Proposed New Standards. In its Introduction to the Proposed New Standards, PED announces “[t]hese standards were developed with the following guiding principles in mind:”

“Incorporating major historical themes such as power, class conflict, struggle, geo political impact, social justice, equity and diversity through content standards designed to teach these topics in developmentally appropriate ways.”

See, Proposed New Standards at p. 9. This is nothing but CRT-Speak. Why must the PED “guiding principles” be so uniformly negative? Are there perhaps other “major historical themes” – positive themes -- that might guide educational instruction, such as “America fought the Civil War to end slavery,” “America is a land of opportunity,” “rising living standards,” “eradication of Jim Crow laws,” “integration replacing segregation?” But optimism and patriotism have no place in CRT theory, which is grounded in division and disunity. In CRT-speak, some people are “oppressors” (usually identified as white, Christian, heterosexual males) and all other people are “oppressed.” Another of the PED’s “guiding principles” -- used to frame these Proposed New Standards -- is:

“Ensuring divergence from a singular Eurocentric cultural script ensuring equitable inclusion of accurate historical stories reflecting Indigenous, Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizano, African American and other cultural perspectives.”

See, Proposed New Standards, at p. 9. Hopefully, at some point, PED will explain to the public/parents the educational relevance of teaching differences among “Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, and Genizaro.” Why does PED propose to teach these racial distinctions to New Mexico students? How exactly are teachers supposed to teach these distinctions to students? And what are students supposed to do once they acquire this “knowledge?” Another of the PED’s “guiding principles:”

“Identifying tools to share authentic stories including the study of the relationship between power and oppression.”

Id. This is nothing but Marxist indoctrination.

The PED’s “Guiding Principles” undergird the Proposed New Standards beginning in Kindergarten and continuing through 12th Grade, See, Specific Comments, infra. The Standards should not be adopted.

4. The PED’s radical “Guiding Principles” were not drafted by the 64 New Mexico Educators. They were drafted by PED and imposed on the educators by fiat.

The PED, in public press reports, suggests the Proposed New Standards were the work of 64 dedicated New Mexico Educators.⁷ That is not fully truthful. Documents obtained through the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act appear to confirm that the radical “Guiding Principles” undergirding the Proposed New Standards were drafted solely by the PED and imposed on the educators with no room for debate.⁸

One plaintive participant reacted to the PED-imposed “Guiding Principles” with a lament probably held by many such educators:

“After looking at many of these concerns my number 1 concern is how much are we really looking out for the children. Many concerns about culture, sexuality, and diversity, but those are personal issues. Kids are the ones being taught so are they being [thought of] when we are writing the standards.”

See, PED document produced in response to IPRA request: “Reflection 4-13-21” (emphasis added).

5. The Proposed New Proposed Standards are sourced in CRT literature.

Where does this CRT-based language in New Mexico’s Proposed New Standards come from? Did the “64 New Mexico educators” who allegedly drafted these standards come up with these standards on their own?

No they didn’t. A review of the source materials used by the drafters of these standards confirms that the most controversial of these standards are grafted directly from reliable CRT sources.⁹ One of its sources is:

(a) “Social Justice Standards,” authored by the Southern Poverty Law Center (“SPLC”). The teaching principles of the SPLC are “divided into four domains: identity, diversity, justice, and action,”¹⁰ which is CRT-speak. The PED’s adoption of the Social Justice Standards is exemplified by comparing the following standards for Kindergarten students:

Social Justice Standard

PED’s Proposed New Standard

I can describe some ways that I am similar to and different from people who share my identities and those who have other identities. DLK-2.7

Describe ways in which I am similar and different from other people who share my identity, and people who do not. K.23

(emphasis added). PED has simply lifted standards from this CRT-favored source.

(b) A second source utilized by the PED is “Teaching Hard History (K-5),” also authored by the SPLC.¹¹ These are simply the same SPLC-authored “Social Justice Standards,” on steroids.

(c) A third source listed by the PED is “NCSS,” which is shorthand for the National Association of Social Studies. One can find all one needs to know about this organization by examining a speech the head of this group, Tina Lane Heafner, gave to the organization in 2018 titled “Agency, Advocacy, Activism for Social Studies.”¹² Ms. Heafner states:

“Social studies, more than any other subject area, has the capacity to reveal structural racism, inequality and exclusion that endures in U.S. society and is deeply rooted in our nation’s history and perpetuated through policies, practices, attitudes and cultural messages.

This is textbook CRT-messaging. It is embedded in the Proposed New Standards for New Mexico public school students.

There can be no credible debate that the Proposed New Standards are embedded with CRT.

6. There has been little, if any, public/parental participation in the formulation, discussion and drafting of the Proposed New Standards.

The PED website confirms that there has been little, if any, public or parental participation in formulation, discussion or drafting of the Proposed New Standards.¹³

7. This November 12, 2021 hearing may be the one and only opportunity for public/parental comment on the Proposed New Standards.

The PED website confirms that this November 12, 2021 hearing will be the one and only opportunity for public/parental input into these Proposed New Standards. The 64 New Mexico educators will “implement” these standards via teacher training and compilation of materials in the Spring of 2022, with full implementation contemplated by the 2023-2024 school year.¹⁴

8. The Proposed New Standards will be mandatory. Local School Boards cannot modify or opt-out of the standards.

The PED website states that the “[Proposed New Standards], once the Rule approval process has taken place . . . will be codified . . . and will continue to be mandated for students in grade k-12.”¹⁵ Local School Boards will have no authority to modify or opt-out of these standards.¹⁶

9. The “warts” or “evils” of New Mexico and American history should be taught in New Mexico public schools, but only at an appropriate time and in an appropriate manner.

I don’t criticize these Proposed New Standards thinking that students should not be educated on the “warts” or “evils” of the New Mexico and the American experience. They must be educated on that history – whether early practices of indigenous people, conflict among indigenous people, conflict between indigenous people and Spanish explorers, conflict among indigenous people, Spanish descendants, and white pioneers, slavery, Jim Crow laws in the South, woman’s suffrage, etc., etc., etc. But shouldn’t we be very careful and very sensitive about when we teach these subjects and how we teach them lest we exacerbate the tensions and conflict readily apparent in American society today. These Proposed New Standards fail on these criteria; they are neither careful nor sensitive about when and how we teach these subjects to New Mexico’s children. I fear that the adoption and implementation of these Proposed New Standards will worsen our already fragile societal cohesion.

SPECIFIC COMMENTS

I offer these more specific comments directed to the New Proposed Standards, by age and grade. I've reviewed the Proposed New Standards in detail. I've also reviewed the standards existing now, before these proposed revisions (the "Existing Standards").¹⁷

I've made detailed comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards. These are my specific comments.

1. Why is it either necessary or appropriate to teach "social studies" to 5-10 year old children in grades K-5, when the great majority of these students can't read at grade level?

Both the Existing Standards and the Proposed New Standards pose social studies "standards" for 5-10 year old children in grades K-5. The question should be asked . . . WHY? Why is it necessary or productive to attempt to teach these young children "social studies" -- particularly the controversial "social studies" posted by the Proposed New Standards (infra) -- when the vast majority of these children cannot read at grade level?

The latest achievement data posted on the PED website is for 2019.¹⁸ A spreadsheet at that site¹⁹ shows the dismal numbers for reading proficiencies by grade in all New Mexico public schools. For all New Mexico students/all schools, 63% of kindergarten children cannot read at grade level; for first grade, 66% are not proficient; for second grade 57%; for third grade 70%; for fourth grade 70%, and, fifth grade 67%. Math proficiencies at these grade levels are even worse. And this data was before the educational disruptions caused by the pandemic. Proficiencies are undoubtedly worse today.

It appears some educators agree with the proposition that at these younger ages in these early grades, a social studies curriculum should defer to (and be incorporated into) the reading curriculum. Common Core Standards, which I understand were adopted by the PED, state:

"The [Social Studies] standards below begin at Grade 6; standards for K-5 reading in history/social studies, science and technical subjects are integrated into the K-5 Reading standards."²⁰

(emphasis added). Doesn't it make sense to at least discuss whether the educational populace (students, parents, teachers and society in general) is better served by concentrating educational resources on basic subjects like reading and math in these early years?

2. The Proposed New Standards posit two completely novel “strands” of social studies: (v) “inquiry” and (vi) “ethnic, cultural and identity studies.”

In its Introduction to the Proposed New Standards, PED identifies four traditional “strands” of social studies: (i) civics and government, (ii) economics, (iii) geography, and (iv) history.²¹ These strands are also identified in the Existing Standards.²²

But the PED has inserted two new, completely novel “strands” in its Proposed New Standards: (v) “inquiry,” and (vi) “ethnic, cultural and identity studies.”²³ PED offers no justification for adding these new “strands” and it offers no “source” for these additions. It’s unlikely the 64 New Mexico Educators drafted these new “strands” on their own. What is the source of these two new social studies “strands?”

3. Grade-Specific Comments

What follows are specific comments, by age and grade-level, on the Proposed New Standards.

Because it is important that decision-makers understand that PED seeks to embed CRT theory into the very earliest public education grades, beginning with Kindergarten, I have made a detailed side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards for Kindergarten through Grade 3. The standards will apply to New Mexico children ages 5-8.

K. Kindergarten (5 YO)

I’ve attached to this letter as Slides 1-3, a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards, for Kindergarten students (5 YO). That comparison yields the following conclusions:

(i) PED has eliminated Existing Standards for teaching “patriotic activities.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for Kindergarten students as follow:

“KIII-B Recognize patriotic activities including the Pledge of Allegiance, the Star Spangled Banner, salutes to New Mexico, and the New Mexico State Songs.”

See, Slide 3 (attached). The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(ii) PED has eliminated Existing Standards for teaching “fairness.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for Kindergarten students as follow:

“KIII-C Describe and provide examples of fairness.”

Slide 3. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(iii) PED has eliminated Existing Standards for teaching “good citizenship,” including “taking turns” and “sharing.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for Kindergarten students as follows:

“KIII-D Describe what is meant by citizenship. Explain what is meant by “good citizenship,” to include: (i) taking turns and sharing, and (ii) taking responsibility for your own actions.”

Slide 3. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(iv) PED has eliminated Existing Standards for teaching “the importance of jobs.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for Kindergarten students as follows:

“KIV-B Understand the importance of jobs.

Slide 3. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(v) PED introduces racial distinctions (called “Group Identity”) to 5 YO Kindergarten children.

The Proposed New Standards introduce the concept of racial distinctions (called “Group Identity”) to 5 YO children at the Kindergarten level:

“K22 Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.

“K23 Describe ways in which they are similar and different from other people who share their identities, and people who do not.

Slide 3 (emphasis added). PED should explain why it's necessary or appropriate to teach New Mexico's 5 YO Kindergarten students about racial "group identities." Are the group identities to be taught those identities specified in the PED's introductory "Guiding Principles:" "Indigenous, Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizano, African American and other cultural perspectives?" Really? In Kindergarten?

(vi) PED's Proposed New Standards seek to teach "compelling questions" to 5 YO Kindergarten children.

The Proposed New Standards, under the new social studies "strand" of "Inquiry," propose to teach 5 YO Kindergarten children something called "compelling questions," whatever that might be:

"K1 Recognize a compelling question.

"K2 Identify the relationship between compelling and supporting questions.

"K3 Construct responses to compelling questions using examples."

Slide 1. I first thought this Proposed New Standard was a typographical error. How and why does PED propose to teach "compelling questions" to 5 YO children? What exactly is a "compelling question" suitable to be taught to a 5 YO child? Who decides that? What exactly is the reason or purpose in teaching a 5 YO child "the relationship between compelling and supporting questions?" Perhaps PED can explain what its objectives are here.

(vii) PED seeks to make 5 YO Kindergarten children "student activists."

The Proposed New Standards require that we teach 5 YO Kindergarten children to be "student activists;"

"K4 Take group or individual action to help address local, regional and/or global problems."

Slide 1 (emphasis added). Is it appropriate to teach 5 YO Kindergarten children to "address . . . problems?" Is it the collective mentality of the educational establishment in New Mexico that 5 YO Kindergarten students should be taught to "address . . . global problems?"

(viii) PED seeks to make 5 YO Kindergarten children "student activists," contd.

The Proposed New Standards require that we teach 5 YO Kindergarten children to:

“K5 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms.”

Slide 1 (emphasis added). Again, what exactly are we doing teaching 5 YO New Mexico Kindergarten children to “act on civic problems in their classrooms?” 5 YO children do not know or comprehend what “civic problems” are . . . unless their teachers tell them what they are. And is that what we want to happen? Don’t we want 5 YO children to grow in these years happy and inquisitive? Won’t their appreciation of “problems” come soon enough?

FG. FIRST GRADE – 6 YO

I’ve attached to this letter as Slides 4-7, a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards, for 6 YO First Grade students. That comparison yields the following conclusions:

(i) PED re-enforces teaching racial distinctions (called “Group Identity”) to 6 YO First Graders.

The Proposed New Standards continue the teaching of racial distinctions (called “Group Identity”) to 6 YO children at the First Grade level:

“1.23 Explain how groups of people believe different things and live in different and interesting ways.

“1.24 Explain how student and individual identities are part of what makes each person unique and special.”

Slide 7 (emphasis added).

(ii) PED continues its effort to make now 6 YO First Graders “student activists.”

The Proposed New Standards continue the goal to make now 6 YO First Graders into “student activists:”

“1.5 Take group or individual action to help address local, regional and/or global problems.”

Slide 4 (emphasis added).

(iii) PED continues its effort to make now 6 YO First Graders “student activists,” contd.

The Proposed New Standards require that we teach 6 YO First Grade children to:

“1.6 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms.”

Slide 4 (emphasis added). What exactly is PED’s objective with these “standards?”

(iv) PED has eliminated Existing Standards for teaching “US historical events,” like MLK day, Memorial Day, etc.

The Existing Standards contain a standard for 6 YO First Grade children as follows:

“1I-B Identify the significance of US historical events and symbols (e.g. MLK Day, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Veterans Day, US Flag, bald eagle).

Slide 4. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(v) PED has eliminated Existing Standards teaching “fairness, loyalty, patriotism.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for 6 YO First Grade children as follows:

“1III-D Identify examples of honesty, courage, fairness, loyalty, patriotism, and other character traits seen in American history.”

Slide 6. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(vi) PED has eliminated an Existing Standard teaching “good citizenship” and “fair play” and “being trustworthy.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for 6 YO First Grade children as follows:

“1III-D Explain and apply “good citizenship” traits within the school and community using the elements of fair play, good sportsmanship, the idea of treating others the way you want to be treated, and being trustworthy.”

Slide 6. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(vii) PED has eliminated an Existing Standard teaching the “value of work.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard for 6 YO First Grade children as follows:

“1IV-B Understand the value of work.”

Slide 7. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(viii) The Existing Standards focus on “commonality” among First Graders; the Proposed New Standards focus on “differences.”

The Existing Standards contain a standard based on “commonality” among First Graders; the Proposed New Standards focus on “differences” among them.

Existing Standard	PED’s Proposed New Standards
1I-A Identify common attributes of people living in New Mexico today.	1.12 Examine and identify cultural differences within a community. 1.23 Explain how groups of people believe different things and live in different and interesting ways.

Slides 4, 5 and 7 (emphasis added). Perhaps PED could explain why, in teaching New Mexico’s 6 YO First Graders, it thinks it best to focus on differences among children, rather than commonalities among them.

(ix) PED Proposed New Standards seek to teach “compelling questions” to 6 YO First Graders.

The Proposed New Standards, under the new social studies “strand” of “Inquiry,” increase teaching emphasis on “compelling questions,” now to 6 YO First Graders:

“1.1 Explain why a compelling question is important;

“1.2 Generate a supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.

“1.3 Determine if a source is primary or secondary and determine whether it is mostly fact or opinion.

1.4 Construct responses to compelling questions using examples.

Slide 4. Again, perhaps PED can explain what its objectives are here.

SG. SECOND GRADE – 7 YO

I've attached to this letter as Slides 8-12, a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards, for 7 YO Second Grade students. That comparison yields the following conclusions:

(i) For 7 YO Second Grade children, PED continues its demand for teaching “diversity” rather than “commonality:”

The Proposed New Standards mandate teaching New Mexico 7 YOs “diversity” on a global scale:

“2.13 Compare diverse world communities in terms of members, customs and traditions to the local community.

“2.15 Identify and compare the diverse North American cultural groups of the past and today.”

Slide 10 (emphasis added). And in a Proposed New Standard that defies comprehension, the PED insists on teaching 7 YO New Mexico children to:

“2.16 Evaluate the effects of people, goods and ideas that diffused from one world community into other world communities and the effects of the people, goods and ideas on these communities.”

Id. (emphasis added). What? For 7 YO children? One can only imagine the teacher training and classroom materials necessary to put this “standard” into effect.

(ii) For some unexplained reason, PED continues to insist that 7 YO Second Grade children be taught “compelling questions.”

The Proposed New Standards continue to insist that 7 YO New Mexico children be taught about “compelling” questions, whatever that might mean:

“2.1 Explain why a compelling question is important.

“2.2 Generate supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.

“2.3 Determine if a source is primary or secondary and determine whether it is mostly fact or opinion.

“2.4 Construct responses to compelling questions using examples, and relevant details.”

Slide 8. Good luck with this, when 57% of New Mexico 7 YO Second Graders are not proficient in reading at grade level.

(iii) PED re-emphasizes that 7 YO Second Graders must become “student activists.”

As if by rote and repetition, PED continues to demand that 7 YO Second Graders be taught to be “student activists:”

2.5 Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems.

2.6 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms.

Slide 8 (emphasis added).

(iv) PED insists that New Mexico 7 YO Second Graders remain in their respective “Identity Groups.”

Without any stated justification, PED insists that New Mexico 7 YO Second Graders remain in their respective “Identity Groups:”

*2.28 Describe ways in which we are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.*

*2.29 Demonstrate respect for the feelings of people who are similar to and different from me.*

Slide 12 (emphasis added).

(v) PED has eliminated standards to teach 7 YO Second Graders about the “public good” and “good citizenship.”

Existing Standards contained standards to teach Second Graders about the “public good” and about “good citizenship:”

“2III-C Describe the concept of “public good” and identify local examples of systems that support the “public good.”

2III-D Understand characteristics of “good citizenship” as exemplified by historic and ordinary people.”

Slide 10. The Proposed New Standards eliminate these standards .

TG. THIRD GRADE – 8 YO

I've attached to this letter as Slides 13-17, a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards for 8 YO Third Grade students. That comparison yields the following conclusions:

(i) PED, for 8 YO Third Grade children, continues to insist on teaching “group identity:”

The PED's Proposed New Standards continues its efforts to indoctrinate New Mexico's 8 YO Third Graders on their respective “group identity:”

“3.27 Express a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly.

“3.28 Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups.

“3.29 Identify the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.”

Slide 17 (emphasis added). With respect to the Proposed New Standard 3.29, would PED include America's Founding Fathers in any such group? Probably . . . not.

(ii) For 8 YO Third Grade children, PED continues to insist on teaching “compelling questions,” whatever those might be.

PED, with its Proposed New Standards for New Mexico's 8 YO Third Graders, continues to insist on teaching “compelling questions,” whatever those might be. The Proposed New Standards require Third Graders to:

3.1 Identify disciplinary ideas associated with a compelling question.

3.2 Use supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.

3.3 Determine the credibility of one source.

3.4 Cite evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.

3.5 Construct responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.

Slide 13.

(iii) PED, with its Proposed New Standards, continues to demand that New Mexico’s 8 YO Third Graders become “student activists.”

PED, with its Proposed New Standards for New Mexico’s 8 YO Third Graders, continues to teach children to be “student activists.” The Proposed New Standards require Third Graders to:

3.6 Identify challenges and opportunities when taking action to problems, including predictable possible results.

3.7 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms.

Slide 13 (emphasis added). PED’s own data confirms that 70% of New Mexico 8 YO Third Graders are not proficient at grade level reading.²⁴ Shouldn’t we perhaps focus educational effort on that deficiency before we ask these children to “act on civic problems in their classrooms?”

(iv) PED has eliminated an Existing Standard to teach 8 YO Third Graders about the “public good:”

There is an Existing Standard that requires teachers to teach 8 YO Third Graders about the “public good;”

“3III-A Explain the basic structure and functions of local government. Explain and give examples of “public good.” Explain how NM helps to form a nation with other states.”

Slide 15. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(v) PED has eliminated an Existing Standard to teach 8 YO Third Graders about “how the majority protects the minority.”

There is an Existing Standard that requires New Mexico teachers to teach 8 YO Third Grade students about concepts of majority/minority government:

“3III-C Describe how the majority protects the rights of the minority.”

Slide 15. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

(vi) PED has eliminated an Existing Standard explaining the US system of “free enterprise:”

There is an Existing Standard requiring teachers to teach 8 YO Third Graders to understand America’s “free enterprise” system:

“3IV-B Recognize that a market system exists whenever buyers and sellers exchange goods and services. Understand how businesses operate in the US in a free enterprise system, identify examples of economic systems.”

Slide 16. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard.

4G—6G. 4th THRU 6th GRADE - 9 to 11 YOs

Because of time and space limitations, I don't offer a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards for Grades 4 thru 6. But I have studied both standards and offer these observations:

(i) The PED, for Grades 4 thru 6, continues to insist on teaching racial distinctions based on “Group Identities:”

This category of standards is for some reason muted for 9 YO 4th Graders. But they reappear with a vengeance for 10 YO Fifth Graders and for 11 YO Sixth Graders.

“5.30 Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity group.”

“6.15 Describe the many facets of student identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and culture of other people in their self-identified affinity groups.”

“6.16 Identify their family and personal cultural identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.”

“6.20 Identify how differences and similarities between diverse groups impacts perspectives.”

“6.22 Explain how the treatment of people (past and present) shaped group identities and cultures.”

Proposed New Standards, at pp. 42, 45-46 (emphasis added). Perhaps someone should ask PED to explain why it insists on the teaching 11 YO New Mexico Sixth Graders about “self-identified affinity groups” when its own data shows that nearly 70% of them cannot read at grade level.

(ii) The Proposed New Standards for Grades 4 thru 6 continue to demand teaching the array of “compelling questions” first begun in Kindergarten.

The PED’s fixation on “compelling questions,” begun in Kindergarten, continues apace for 9-11 YO children in Grades 4 thru 6. Each such grade has some variation of the following Grade 4 standard for 9 YOs:

“4.1 Explain how a compelling question represents key ideas in the field.

“4.2 Use supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.

“4.3 Cite evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.

“4.4 Construct responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.”

Proposed New Standards, at p. 33. For nearly identical standards for 10 YO 5th Graders, see Proposed New Standards 5.1 – 5.5, id. at p. 38; for similar standards for 11 YO 6th Graders, see Proposed New Standards 6.1 – 6.3, id. at p. 44.

(iii) The Proposed New Standards for Grades 4 thru 6 continue to insist on “student activism:”

The PED’s insistence that the New Mexico public school children become “student activists,” first begun in Kindergarten, continues apace for 9-11 YO children in Grades 4 thru 6. Each such grade has some variation of the following Grade 4 standard for 9 YOs:

“4.5 Identify challenges and opportunities when taking action to address problems, including predicting possible results.

“4.6 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions and act on civic problems in their classrooms.

Proposed New Standards, at p. 33 (emphasis added). For nearly identical standards for 10 YO 5th Graders, see Proposed New Standards 5.6 – 5.7, id. at p. 38; for “Inquiry” standards for 11 YO 6th Graders, see Proposed New Standards 6.17, id. at p. 45.

(iv) PED has removed from teaching Existing Standards that are principled, and non-controversial.

Existing Standards require the teaching to 9 YO 4th Graders of simple, principled concepts of the free-enterprise system:

“K-4IV-B(1) Understand how the characteristics and benefits of the free-enterprise system in New Mexico compare to the other economic system in New Mexico (e.g. acequia system).

Existing Standards, fn. 19, supra., at p. 6. The Proposed New Standards eliminate this standard. Similar principled, non-controversial standards are eliminated from 5th and 6th Grade Existing Standards. See, 5th Grade Existing Standard 5IIC(2) (“Describe the contribution and roles of major individuals, including George Washington, James Madison and Ben Franklin” – eliminated); 6th Grade Existing Standard 6II-A(i) (“Identify the location of places using latitude and longitude” – eliminated).

(v) The PED’s Proposed New Standards insist of teaching some pretty strange topics in 4th thru 6th Grades.

In a Proposed New Standard, the PED requires teaching 9 YO 4th Graders to:

“4.26 Explain connections among historical contexts and people’s perspectives at the time.”

Proposed New Standards, at p. 36. Say again? A different Proposed New Standard demands teaching 11 YO 6th Graders to:

“6.7 Identify the inherent bias in maps.”

Proposed New Standard, at p. 44. Where is this nonsense coming from?

7G – 8G 7th and 8th GRADE – 12-13 YO

Because of time and space limitations, I do not offer a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards for 7TH and 8TH Grades. But I have studied both standards and offer these observations:

(i) 7th Graders continue to be indoctrinated in CRT theory.

The PED, with its Proposed New Standards, intensifies its efforts to teach 12 YO children the tenants of racial “group identity:”

“7.11. Examine the relationship between stereotypes, bias, and group identity.”

“7.28 Evaluate how society’s responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.”

Proposed New Standards, at pp. 52, 54 (emphasis added). The PED standards focus on pessimism, not optimism:

“7.38 Describe the role of citizens in ensuring the long-term survival of their community, including cooperation, obligations, rights and responsibilities.”

Id. at p. 55 (emphasis added). The PED proposes extremely problematic classroom teaching for New Mexico’s 12 YO 7th Grade children, particularly New Mexico children of Spanish descent:

“7.59 Compare the patterns of exploration, destruction and occupation of the Americas by Spaniards.

“7.60 Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.”

Id. at p. 57 (emphasis added). Hopefully, at some point, the PED will explain to New Mexico parents what its object is in teaching these divisive concepts to their children and, more importantly, what the result of teaching these concepts will be. At the same time, PED might explain why it insists on teaching these concepts when its own data confirms that 75% of New Mexico’s 7th Grade male students cannot read at grade level.²⁵

Moreover, PED insists on teaching what it calls “unequal power relations:”

“7.82 Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate the lasting impact of unequal power relations and disenfranchisement of persons and groups.”

Id. at p. 60 (emphasis added). Is there any data, from any source, that presents credible evidence suggesting that in New Mexico there exists “unequal power relations” or “disenfranchisement of persons or groups?” Unless the PED can produce such evidence, these exceedingly divisive standards should be stricken from its proposed standards.

(ii) The PED continues to indoctrinate 8th Graders with CRT theory.

As New Mexico’s 12 YO 7th Graders graduate to the next grade, the PED continues apace with its attempted indoctrination of them with CRT principles:

“8.12 Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally.

Proposed New Standards, at p. 64 (emphasis added). Emphasis remains on students’ racial “identity:”

“8.19 Describe the many facets of their identity (including family history and culture) and how they are connected to the collective history and other people in their self-identified affinity groups.”

Id. at p. 65 (emphasis added). Perhaps at some point the PED will explain what it means by its term “self-identified affinity groups,” a term it first introduced in its Proposed New Standards (6.15) for Sixth Grade?” What exactly does PED seek to “teach” New Mexico 13 YO with this “standard?” PED then introduces “gender” issues to its teaching standards:

“8.66 Describe immigrant and emigrant groups according to gender composition and develop a claim regarding the impact of gender (dis)proportionality had on immigrant/emigrant community’s culture.”

Id. at 71 (emphasis added). Really? Where is this standard coming from? Should we now be teaching alleged “gender discrimination” to New Mexico’s 13 YO 8th Grade children? When PED’s own data confirms that 69% of those children cannot read at grade level?²⁶ Finally, PED continues to require that we teach New Mexico children that . . . somehow, someway . . . maps are “biased:”

“8.5 Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.”

Id. at 64 (emphasis added). Ok. Who is the PED designee who will stand-up at a public meeting and explain this “bias in maps” and “cultural memory” teaching standard? Who will that person be?

9G – 12G HIGH SCHOOL – 9TH THRU 12TH GRADE -14-18 YO

Because of time and space limitations, I don’t offer a side-by-side comparison of the Existing Standards to the Proposed New Standards for 9th thru 12th Grades. But I have studied both standards and offer these observations.

Initially, it is of note that PED’s Proposed New Standards do not offer grade-specific standards for individual Grades 9 thru 12, as do the Existing Standards. Rather, the Proposed New Standards aggregate standards applicable for Grades 9-12, without specifying which standards apply to which grades. That non-distinction might make a big difference. The maturity level of a 14 YO 9th Grader is materially different from an 18 YO 12th Grader. The PED’s Proposed New Standards don’t recognize that differential in maturity levels. At a minimum, shouldn’t PED be made to break-out these proposed standards so as to identify which are grade/age appropriate for which grade/age? Or, alternatively, shouldn't PED at least admit that its goal is to indoctrinate all of New Mexico's high school students (Grade 9 -12) with each of these "standards" in each such grade?

For its proposed new high school teaching standards, PED drops all pretense and outright admits that it will teach New Mexico's high school students the core CRT concept of "privilege" vested in the white race and "systemic inequity" resulting for everyone else:

"9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement. "

Proposed New Standards, at p. 122 (emphasis added). Please read that sentence again. And then try to imagine how New Mexico's teachers are trained to teach this topic and what materials are distributed in the classroom. Try to imagine further how a classroom of multi-cultured students is supposed to react to such teaching. It's a bit frightening. But PED continues:

"9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical, cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups."

Id. Where is the factual data suggesting there exists in New Mexico or nationally "unequal power relations among identity groups?" What does "unequal power relations" even mean? What is the educational purpose of teaching New Mexico's high school students that there may be "unequal power relations among identity groups?" More importantly, what is the societal result of such teaching?

The radical standards PED proposes are particularly distressing when posed against the current dismal state of New Mexico student achievement in the core topics of reading, math and science. The PED's published data, with respect to the academic competency of New Mexico's public high school students, yields the following depressing statistics:

- Statewide, 60% of 16 YO 11th Graders cannot read at grade level²⁷;
- Statewide, 90% of 16 YO 11th Graders are not proficient at grade level math²⁸;
- Statewide, 75% of 16 YO 11th Graders are not proficient at grade level science²⁹;
- In the Santa Fe School District, 61% of 16 YO 11th Graders cannot read at grade level³⁰;

- In the Santa Fe School District, 91% of 16 YO 11th Graders are not proficient at grade level math³¹;
- In the Santa Fe School District, 78% of 16 YO 11th Graders are not proficient at grade level science³²;
- At Capital High School, in the Santa Fe School District, 68% of 16 YO 11th Graders cannot read at grade level³³;
- At Capital High School, 95% of 16 YO 11th Graders are not proficient at grade level math³⁴;
- At Capital High School, 88% of 16 YO 11th Graders are not proficient at grade level science³⁵;
- 97% of the male students in the 11th Grade at Capital High School, in the Santa Fe School District, are not grade level proficient in math.³⁶

Why is it -- given these heart-breaking statistics -- that PED has chosen to focus its energy on teaching CRT-embedded “social studies?” Shouldn’t our fundamental education goal be to improve New Mexico student performance in reading, math and science? Do PED’s Proposed New Standards advance that goal? No! New Mexico’s drop-out rate will probably increase with these teaching standards, with the only other result being that dropouts will be more despondent or more angry.

Tone deaf, PED persists in insisting on teaching that “systemic inequity” underlies the American system:

“9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.”

Proposed New Standards, at p. 122 (emphasis added). At one time, many thought that “assimilation” was noble and aspirational in American society. No longer. Assimilation, under the PED’s new standards, is not only ignoble; it is destructive:

“9-12.ECI.19 Examine the role assimilation plays in the loss of cultural, ethnic, racial, and religious identities and language.”

Id. (emphasis added). The PED’s very last teaching standard asks 14 – 18 YO New Mexico High School students to:

“9-12.ECI.22. Evaluate the role of racial social constructs in the structures and functions of a 21st Century American society.”

Id. (emphasis added). If one googles the terms “racial social constructs,” one retrieves 20+ pages of articles, books and blogs speaking to the topic. The most understandable definition of the phrase is this:

“Social construction is a theory of knowledge that holds characteristics typically thought to be immutable and solely biological – such as race, gender and sexuality – are products of human definition and interpretation shaped by cultural and historical contexts . . . As such, social constructionism highlights the ways in which cultural categories – like “men,” women,” “black,” “white,” are concepts created, changed and reproduced through historical processes within institutions and culture.”³⁷

A second definition of the term is found in the Urban Dictionary: “Social Construct: A rhetorical technique used (often by a neurotic undergraduate with a Yoko Ono Tattoo) to deny the existence of an irrefutable fact.”³⁸

Needless to say the “social construct theory of knowledge” is an esoteric field of study, highly controversial, the validity of which is hotly debated in the halls of collegiate academia. Like “CRT” itself, “social construct theory” may have a place for discussion within collegiate academia. It has no place as a teaching “standard” in New Mexico’s high schools.

CONCLUSION

Under the PED’s Proposed New Standards, what starts as a rather innocuous Kindergarten standard of teaching 5 YO children to “identify some of their group identities” (K.22) evolves, by the time these New Mexico children reach high school, into full-fledged CRT indoctrination:

“9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement. “

(emphasis added). PED must answer the question of why this is happening now? Why – when all ages/grades of New Mexico students continue to underperform on basic subjects like reading, math and science – must New Mexico expend any of its precious educational resources on CRT indoctrination?

These Proposed New Standards should be abandoned or substantially modified. They are divisive. They will be detrimental to the preservation of New Mexico’s unique tri-cultural community.

Respectfully Submitted,

/s/ Michael Campbell

Michael Campbell
camp.pecos@gmail.com

ENDNOTES

¹ I am 72 years old and a life-long resident of New Mexico. All of my education
¹ I am 72 years old and a life-long resident of New Mexico. All of my education – from kindergarten through graduation from law school – occurred in New Mexico. I obtained a BA degree in Education from UNM. Since I retired from the practice of law, I’ve been a volunteer in Santa Fe Public Schools (“SFPS”), tutoring middle-school students in English Language Arts (“ELA”). I’ve lived in Santa Fe for almost sixty years. I have an abiding interest in quality public education in New Mexico, believing it is the foundation for a productive and prosperous society. I have drafted and submit these comments on my own, without assistance or input from anyone.

² Proposed New Standards, at p. 9. The PED announces that one of its “Guiding Principles” in promulgating its new standards is:

“Ensuring divergence from a singular Eurocentric cultural script ensuring equitable inclusion of accurate historical stories reflecting Indigenous, Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizaro, African American and other cultural perspectives.”

³ Education Post: “Explained-The Truth About Critical Race Theory and How It Shows Up in Your Child’s Classroom.” <https://educationpost.org/explained-the-truth-about-critical-race-theory-and-how-it-shows-up-in-your-childs-classroom/>; see also “Critical Race Theory: A Brief History,” July 27, 2021 <http://www.nytimes.com/article/what-is-critical-race-theory.html>; RealClear Political Affairs: “Critical Race Theory in K-12,” July 2020 https://www.realclearpublicaffairs.com/articles/2020/07/16/critical_race_theory_in_k-12_education_498969.html#!#:~:text=Public%20schools%20and%20other%20educational%20institutions%20throughout%20the,maintain%20their%20elite%20status%2C%20both%20economically%20and%20politically;Critical%20Race%20Theory,the%20New%20Intolerance,and%20Its%20Grip%20on%20America,The%20Heritage%20Foundation,Backgrounder,No.%203567,December%207,%202020.

⁴ Imprimis: “Critical Race Theory – What is it and How to Fight It.” March 20, 2021 <https://imprimis.hillsdale.edu/critical-race-theory-fight/>.

⁵ Id.

⁶ Id.

⁷ See, Las Cruces Sun Time, October 7, 2021: “New Mexico Wants Your Feedback on Changing Social Security Standards.” <https://www.lcsun-news.com/story/news/education/2021/10/07/new-mexico-updates-social-studies-education-standards-asks-feedback/6034864001/>

⁸ At the first (virtual) meeting of the 64 New Mexico educators, the PED distributed its pre-drafted “Guiding Principles” with the directive that educators “Understand the guiding principles.” See, NMPED, Social Studies Standards Review – Writing Team Meeting 1 (Virtual) 4/13/2021, 4pm to 6pm.

⁹ Proposed New Standards; PED Answer to Question 11. <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/literacy-humanities/social-studies/social-studies-standards-faq/>.

¹⁰ “Social Justice Standards – The Teaching Tolerance Anti-Bias Framework” <https://www.learningforjustice.org/sites/default/files/2020-09/TT-Social-Justice-Standards-Anti-bias-framework-2020.pdf>

¹¹ “Teaching Hard History K-5 Framework – Learning for Justice” <https://www.learningforjustice.org/sites/default/files/2020-08/TT-2007-Teaching-Hard-History-K-5-Framework.pdf>

¹² Social Education, NCSS: “Agency, Advocacy, Activism: Action for Social Studies,” Heafner, Jan/Feb 2020 <https://www.socialstudies.org/social-education/84/1/agency-advocacy-activism-action-social-studies#:~:text=As%20social%20studies%20teachers%2C%20we,become%20informed%20and%20engaged%20citizens.>

¹³ Proposed New Standards <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/literacy-humanities/social-tudies/social-studies-standards-faq/>. PED answer to Question 7:

“The standards have been in process of re-write since the spring of 2021, after a statewide call, on February 18, 2021, for participants was circulated. The call was placed in the weekly communication blast to Superintendents from PED. Any educator was eligible to apply (teacher, superintendent, etc). The committee ultimately included 64 members (educators) to represent k-12 from 38 districts and charters.

“In addition, Focus Groups were held in June 2021 for the following stakeholder groups so that writing teams could incorporate feedback into the writing of the draft standards.

...
parents
students
...
Advisory Committee

There is no evidentiary indication that the public/parents have participated in the drafting of these Proposed New Standards.

14 Id., PED Answers to Questions 3 and 4.

15 Id., PED Answer to Question 5.

16 Id., PED Answer to Question 8 (“Local school boards do not have a formal role in the development of any administrative rules, including academic standards.”).

17 The existing Standards for Social Studies can be found at PED-Social Studies-Social Studies Standards. <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/instructional-materials/new-mexico-content-standards/>

18 PED Achievement Data <https://webnew.ped.state.nm.us/bureaus/accountability/achievement-data>

19 Webfiles-2019-Proficiencies-All-by-State-by-District-by School-by Grade (1).xlsx

20 Common Core State Standards <http://www.corestandards.org/ELA-Literacy/RH/introduction/>

21 Proposed New Standards, at p. 8.

22 Existing Standards, see fn. 17, Kindergarten.

23 Proposed New Standards, at p. 8.

24 See fn. 19, supra.

25 Id., Line 111, Column H.

26 Id., Line 124, Column H.

27 Webfiles-2019-Proficiencies-All-by-State-by-District-by School-by Grade (1).xlsx (Line 169, Column H).

28 Id. (Line 169, Column J).

29 Id. (Line 169, Column L).

30 Id. (Line 9343, Column H)

31 Id. (Line 9343, Column J).

32 Id. (Line 9343, Column L).

33 Id. (Line 45128, Column H).

34 Id. (Line 45128, Column J).

35 Id. (Line 45128, Column L).

36 Id. (Line 45130, Column J).

37 "Introduction to Women, Gender, Sexuality Studies: Grounding Theoretical Frameworks and Concepts," UMassLibraries.
<https://openbooks.library.umass.edu/introwgss/chapter/social-constructionism/>

38 Urban Dictionary. <https://www.urbandictionary.com/define.php?term=social%20construct>

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

KINDERGARTEN – 5 YO

EXISTING STANDARDS

- KI-A Identify the customs, celebrations, and holidays of various cultures of New Mexico.
- KI-B Demonstrate an awareness of community leaders.
- KI-C Identify the local, state, and national symbols (e.g., flag bird, song).
- KI-D Understand the concept of past and present.
- KII-A Define relative location of items in the physical environment in terms of over, under, near, far, up, and down.
- KII-A Define personal direction of front, back, left, and right.
- KII-B Identify natural characteristics of places (e.g. climate, topography).
- KII-C Identify family customs and traditions and explain their importance.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- K1 Recognize a compelling question.
- K2 Identify the relationship between compelling and supporting questions.
- K3 Construct responses to compelling questions using examples.
- K4 Take group or individual action to help address local, regional and/or global problems.
- K5 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms.
- K6 Communicate the purpose of rules.
- K7 Explain how rules help us work together.
- K8 Identify the consequences of following and not following the rules.
- K9 Identify authority figures and describe their roles

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS KINDERGARTEN, 5YO contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- KII-C Describe the natural characteristics of places (e.g. landforms, bodies of water, natural resources, and weather).
- KII-D Describe the earth's physical characteristics.
- KII-E Identify classroom population.
- KII-F Identify natural resources.
- KIII-A Identify authority figures and describe their roles (e.g. parents, teachers, principal, superintendent, police, public officials).
- KIII-B Recognize the name symbols and activities of the United States, New Mexico, and tribes to include:
 - US symbols to include the flag, bald eagle, monuments
 - NM symbols to include flag, Smokey Bear, State Bird, chili
 - tribal symbols and activities to include Feast Days, pottery, art, storytelling

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- K10 Identify the local, state, and national symbols (e.g. flag, bird, song).
- K11 Compare traditions found in communities over time.
- K12 Demonstrate an awareness of community leaders (teacher, principal, Mayor, Tribal Leaders).
- K13 Sequence important events in you life
- K14 Identify how individuals are similar and different
- K15 Distinguish between a need (basic needs like food, clothing, and shelter) and a want
- K16 Identify examples of goods and services
- K17 Explain what scarcity is and how scarcity affects the accessibility of goods and services

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS KINDERGARTEN, 5YO contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- ~~• KIII-B Recognize patriotic activities including the Pledge of Allegiance, the Star Spangled Banner, salute to the New Mexico flag, and the New Mexico state songs.~~
- ~~• KIII-C Describe and provide examples of fairness.~~
- ~~• KIII-D Describe what is meant by citizenship. Explain what is meant by “good citizenship,” to include:
 - taking turns and sharing
 - taking responsibility for your own actions . . .~~
- KIV-A Understand that basic human needs are met in many ways.
- KIV-B Understand the concept of product (something produced by human . . . process).
- ~~• KIV-B Understand the importance of jobs.~~
- KIV-C Describe trade (e.g. buying and selling, bartering, simple exchange).

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- K18 Create maps of familiar areas, such as the class room, school and community.
- K19 Recognize and identify signs and symbols around their town and community and indicate location of places, people and things.
- K20 Identify the differences and similarities of a globe and a map . . . Explain their purposes.
- K21 Explain why and how people move from place to place within a community.
- K22 Communicate a positive view of themselves and identify some of their group identities.
- K23 Describe ways in which they are similar and different from other people who share their identities, and people who do not.
- K24 Identify how their family does things both the same as and different from how other people do things.
- K25 Describe their family history, culture, and past to current contributions of people in their main identity groups.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

FIRST GRADE -- 6YO

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 1I-A Identify common attributes of people living in New Mexico today.
- 1I-B Identify the significance of US historical events and symbols (e.g. MLK Day, Memorial Day, Independence day, Labor Day, Veterans Day, U.S. Flag, bald eagle).
- 1I-B Identify and recognize major political and social figures in the US.
- 1I-C Identify and compare celebrations and events from the US, Mexico and Canada.
- 1I-D Demonstrate the use of timelines in order to show events in relation to one another.
- 1II-A Understand maps and globes and the four cardinal directions; Create, use and describe simply maps to identify locations within familiar places (e.g. classroom, school, community)
- 1II-B Identify and classify characteristics of places as human or natural.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 1.1 Explain why a compelling question is important.
- 1.2 Generate supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.
- 1.3 Determine if a source is primary or secondary and determine whether it is mostly fact or opinion.
- 1.4 Construct responses to compelling questions using examples.
- 1.5 Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems.
- 1.6 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their class rooms.
- 1.7 Explain and provide examples of how people play important roles in society

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS FIRST GRADE -- 6YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 1II-B Identify how traditional tribal and local folklore attempt to explain weather, characteristics of places, and human origin and relationships.
- 1II-C Identify examples of and uses for natural resources in the community, state and nation.
- 1II-C Describe the human characteristics of places such as housing types and professions.
- 1II-D Describe the Earth-Sun relationship and how it affects living conditions on Earth.
- 1II-E Identify characteristics of culture (e.g., language, customs, religion, shelter).
- 1II-F Describe the role of resources in daily life.
- 1II-F Describe the ways that humans depend upon, adapt to, and affect the physical environment.
- 1III-A Understand the purpose of rules and identify examples of rules and the consequences of breaking them.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 1.8 Investigate how people work together to accomplish a common task and how this benefits and challenges people when working together
- 1.9 Compare life in NM in the past to life in NM today.
- 1.10 Compare fact and opinion in stories and narratives from the past.
- 1.11 Demonstrate chronological thinking by distinguishing among past, present, and future using family, school, and community events.
- 1.12 Examine and identify cultural differences within a community.
- 1.13 Investigate significant events, people, and observations in history, and discuss their effects on local and national communities.
- 1.14 Examine choices that families make due to scarcity, and identify associated costs.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
FIRST GRADE -- 6YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 1III-A Describe different groups and rules that apply to them (e.g. families, classrooms, communities).
- 1III-B Identify the President of the US and the Governor of NM.
- 1III-B Describe how local, state, tribal and national leaders exemplify the ideals of the communities they represent.
- 1III-C Describe different ways to determine a decision (e.g. majority rule, consensus. Authoritarian [parent, teacher, principal]).
- ~~1III-D Identify examples of honesty, courage, fairness, loyalty, patriotism, and other character traits seen in American history.~~
- ~~1III-D Explain and apply “good citizenship” traits within the school and community using the elements of fair play, good sportsmanship, the idea of treating others the way you want to be treated, and being trustworthy.~~

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 1.15 Identify examples of a producer and a consumer.
- 1.16 Examine how earning money through work is related to the purchase of goods and services.
- 1.17 Examine decisions that people make about spending and saving money.
- 1.18 Create geographic representations to identify the location of familiar places
- 1.19 Identify the common symbols used on maps for man-made structures and physical features.
- 1.20 Use a variety of maps to locate specific places and identify major landforms
- 1.21 Explain how man-made structures are all examples of how people modify the physical environment . . .

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
FIRST GRADE -- 6YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 1IV-A Understand how resources are limited and varied in meeting human needs.
- 1IV-A Define and differentiate between needs and wants.
- 1IV-B Understand the concept of goods and services.
- 1IV-B Understand the condition of not being able to have all the goods and services one wants.
- ~~1IV-B Understand the value of work.~~
- 1IV-C Define the simplest form of exchange (the barter system being the direct trading of goods and services between people).

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 1.22 Explain how people interact with their physical environment in ways that may have a positive or negative effect on natural resources.
- 1.23 Explain how groups of people believe different things and live in different and interesting ways.
- 1.24 Explain how student and individual identities are part of what makes each person unique and special.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

SECOND GRADE -- 7YO

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 2I-A Describe how historical people, groups, and events have influenced the local community.
- 2I-B Describe the cultural diversity of individuals and groups and their contributions to US history (e.g. George Washington, Ben Franklin, Cesar Chavez, Rosa Parks, NAACP, tribal leaders, AIM).
- 2I-C Describe and compare similarities of the history of peoples in North America through literature (e.g. story-telling, fables, folktales, fairy tales).
- 2I-D Correctly sequence historic events.
- 2II-A Use a variety of maps to locate specific places and regions; identify major landforms, bodies of water
- 2II-B Describe how climate, natural resources, and natural hazards affect activities and settlement patterns.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 2.1 Explain why a compelling question is important.
- 2.2 Generate supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.
- 2.3 Determine if a source is primary or secondary and determine whether it is mostly fact or opinion.
- 2.4 Construct responses to compelling questions using examples, and relevant details.
- 2.5 Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems.
- 2.6 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their class rooms.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
SECOND GRADE -- 7YO, contd

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 2II-B Explain how people depend on the environment and its resources to satisfy their basic needs.
- 2II-C Identify ways in which people depend on natural and man-made environments
- 2II-D Describe the physical processes that affect the Earth's features (e.g. weather, erosion); identify characteristics of physical systems (e.g. water cycle).
- 2II-E Describe how characteristics of culture affect behaviors and lifestyles.
- 2II-F Describe ways that people and groups can conserve and replenish natural resources.
- 2III-A Understand the purposes of government. Describe and compare class rules made by direct democracy (entire class votes on the rules) and by representative democracy (class elects a smaller group to make the rules).

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 2.7 Evaluate how American society has changed through laws and rules.
- 2.8 Understand the purposes and structures of government (Tribal, local, state, national government).
- 2.9 Assess how the contributions of diverse individuals have helped develop our national identity.
- 2.10 Examine and compare the American democratic principles to neighboring countries.
- 2.11 Examine and understand the qualities of good leadership.
- 2.12 Describe events in North America that illustrate how people from diverse cultural groups attempted to work through conflicts to solve a problem.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
SECOND GRADE -- 7YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 2III-B Identify local governing officials and explain how their roles reflect their community.
- ~~2III-C Describe the concept of “public good” and identify local examples of systems that support the “public good.”~~
- ~~2III-D Understand characteristics of “good citizenship” as exemplified by historic and ordinary people.~~
- 2III-D Explain the responsibilities of being a member of various groups (e.g. family, school, community).
- 2IV-A Identify economic decisions made by individuals and households and explain how resources are distributed.
- 2IV-B Understand the roles of producers and consumers in the production of goods and services. Explain the role of the worker in the local economy.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 2.13 Compare diverse world communities in terms of members, customs and traditions to the local community.
- 2.14 Demonstrate chronological think by distinguishing among years and decades using a timeline of local and national events.
- 2.15 Identify and compare the diverse North American cultural groups of the past and today.
- 2.16 Evaluate the effects of people, goods and ideas that diffused from one world community into other world communities and the effects of the people, goods and ideas on these communities.
- 2.17 Examine how consumers react to changes in the price of goods and how this influences economic decision making and the use of money.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
SECOND GRADE -- 7YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 2IV-C Understand that money is the generally accepted medium of exchange in most societies, and that different countries use different currencies.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 2.18 Explore how communities share resources and services with other communities.
- 2.19 Investigate what resources are available in the community, how available resources differ in communities, and what resources are obtained from neighboring communities.
- 2.20 Identify different types of jobs performed in the community.
- 2.21 Using maps, identify and locate the US, Canada and Mexico as the countries that make up North America.
- 2.22 Identify and locate the bordering states to NM and under that NM is in the Southwest.
- 2.23 Compare the human and physical characteristics of two regions in the US.
- 2.24 Generate a definition for your region of the US by identifying unique features.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
SECOND GRADE -- 7YO, CONTD.

EXISTING STANDARDS

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 2.25 List at least three different waves of immigration to the Western hemisphere in chronologic order. (Movement)
- 2.26 Describe ways in which individuals and groups use or save resources.
- 2.27 Express a positive view of themselves without being mean or making other people feel bad.
- 2.28 Describe ways in which we are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.
- 2.29 Demonstrate respect for the feelings of people who are similar and different from me.

COMPARISON OF ESISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

THIRD GRADE – 8 YO

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 3I-A Describe how the lives and contributions of people of NM influenced local communities and regions.
- 3I-B Describe local events and their connections to state history.
- 3I-C Identify and compare components that create a community in the US and neighboring countries.
- 3I-D Interpret information from multiple resources and contexts to determine chronological relationships.
- 3II-A Identify and use the mapping tools of scale, compass rose, grid, symbols and mental mapping to locate and draw places on maps and globes.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 3.1 Identify disciplinary ideas associated with a compelling question.
- 3.2 Use supporting questions to help answer the compelling question in an inquiry.
- 3.3 Determine the credibility of one source.
- 3.4 Cite evidence that supports a response to supporting or compelling questions.
- 3.5 Construct responses to compelling questions using reasoning, examples, and relevant details.
- 3.6 Identify challenges and opportunities when taking action to problems, including predictable possible results.
- 3.7 Use deliberative and democratic procedures to make decisions about and act on civic problems in their classrooms.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

THIRD GRADE -- 8YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 3II-B Describe how human and natural processes can sometimes work together to shape the appearance of places (e.g. post-fire reforestation).
- 3II-B Explore examples of environmental and social changes in various regions.
- 3II-C Identify personal behaviors that can affect community planning. Identify ways in which people have modified their environments (e.g. building roads, etc). Describe the consequences of human modification of the natural environment (highways, etc.)
- 3II-D Identify the components of the Earth's bio systems and their make-up (e.g. air land, etc.)
- 3II-D Describe how physical processes shape features on the Earth's surface.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 3.8 Explain how the democratic principles motivate people to migrate then and now.
- 3.9 Explain how to be a responsible and active citizen in a democracy.
- 3.10 Evaluate the reasons for migration and immigration and the effects on people, culture, and ideas in world communities.
- 3.11 Analyze how human settlement and movement impact diverse groups of people and how the cultural aspects of a region spread beyond its borders.
- 3.12 Analyze the movement of indigenous groups, including the removal and return of indigenous people throughout NM and the US.
- 3.14. Explain how world events impact NM and the US , bit in the past and today.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

THIRD GRADE -- 8YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 3II-E Describe how patterns of culture vary geographically. Describe how transportation and communication networks are used in daily life. Describe how cooperation and conflict affect neighborhoods and communities.
- 3I-F Identify the characteristics of renewable and nonrenewable resources.
- 3III-A Explain the basic structure and functions of local government. Explain and give examples of "public good." Explain how NM helps to form a nation with other states.
- 3III-B Explain how symbols, songs, icon, and traditions combine to reflect various cultures over time.
- ~~3III-C Describe how the majority protects the rights of the minority.~~
- 3III-C Explain how rules/laws are made and compare different processes used by various governments to determine rules/laws.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 3.15 Examine the various ways people earn a living to meet their basic needs of food, clothing, and shelter, and how this has changed over time in various world communities.
- 3.16 Investigate who receives the goods that are produced in various world communities.
- 3.17 Explore the concepts of surplus and scarcity in relation to resources for various world communities.
- 3.18 Explore the basic economic concepts of supply and demand.
- 3.19 Explain how supply and demand influence prices and trade.
- 3.20 Describe how technological developments in transportation and communication influence trade over time.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

THIRD GRADE -- 8YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

- 3III-D Explain the significance of participation and cooperation in the classroom and the community. Understand the impact of individual and group decisions on communities in a democratic society. Explain the significance and process of voting.
- 3IV-A Explain that people want more goods and services than is possible to produce. Define and categorize resources (human, financial, natural). Identify a variety of products that use similar resources.
- 3IV-B Recognize that a market system exists whenever buyers and sellers exchange goods and services. ~~Understand how businesses operate in the US in a Free enterprise system.~~ Identify examples of economic systems.
- 3IV-C Understand the purposes of spending and saving money. Identify currency, credit, debit and checks as the basic mediums of exchange in Western society.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 3.21 Identify currency, credit, debit, and checks as the basic means of exchange in Western society.
- 3.22 Compare currency, debit, credit, and checks in the US to other world systems.
- 3.23 Create a model to demonstrate how geographic factors influence where people settle and how some people make adaptations to the environment to make a location more suitable for settlement.
- 3.24 Identify and use the mapping tools of scale, compass rose, grid, symbols and mental mapping to locate places on maps and globes.
- 3.25 Explain how physical and cultural characteristics of world regions affect people, and examine geographic features of various global communities that might create a need for migration or immigration using a variety of maps. Photos, and other geographic representations.

COMPARISON OF EXISTING STANDARDS TO PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS
THIRD GRADE -- 8YO, contd.

EXISTING STANDARDS

PROPOSED NEW STANDARDS

- 3.26 Identify the components of the Earth's bio systems and their makeup (e.g., air, land, water, plants, and animals).
- 3.27 Express a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly.
- 3.28 Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups.
- 3.29 Identify the actions of people and groups who have worked throughout history to bring more justice and fairness to the world.

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Rosie Martinez <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 1:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Rosie Martinez
P.O box 1776
Las Vegas , NM 87701

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Rosie Martinez <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 1:15 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Rosie Martinez
P.O box 1776
Las Vegas , NM 87701

[EXTERNAL] Delete Critical Race Theory from Proposed Social Studies

Jaymie Duneman <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 1:18 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you not to adopt the recommended revisions submitted for Social Studies for New Mexico students

Moving toward a CRT agenda in Social Studies is culturally devastating to the children of New Mexico. They deserve an unbiased delivery of history, particularly at the early stages of education.

As a parent of 4 children in APS, an employee of APS and a native of NM, I urge you not to include CRT in our children's education.

Thank you for your time and consideration on this extremely life altering issue. Children are our future.

Sincerely,

Jaymie Duneman
919 Grecian NW
Albuquerque, NM 87107

[EXTERNAL] Add Personal Finance Standards to 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Ezekiel Ortega <mailagent@thesoftedge.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 1:39 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena:

I am writing to urge you to adopt the recommended revisions submitted by Think New Mexico and add substantive personal finance standards to the economics standards in 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies.

New Mexico is one of only five states that fails to include personal finance in its education standards. This means that our schools are failing to teach students essential life skills and concepts like budgeting, checking and savings accounts, credit, interest, investing, and the costs of borrowing. Every student needs this education, whether they are going on to college or entering the workforce.

Including strong personal finance benchmarks in New Mexico's education standards is also an anti-poverty strategy that will advance educational equity. Personal finance education is most important for lower-income students who may come from families who are unbanked or underbanked. Moreover, many students who learn personal finance concepts in school bring these skills home to their parents, grandparents, and other family members, helping to combat the effects of intergenerational poverty.

Think New Mexico's proposed personal finance standards would make sure that every student in New Mexico has the opportunity to learn essential personal finance skills before they graduate from high school, benefitting them for the rest of their lives. I strongly urge you to adopt Think New Mexico's recommendation.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Ezekiel Ortega
96a ojitos frios rd
Las Vegas , NM 87701

[EXTERNAL] Proforma meeting on Social Studies Changes per PED

Richard Williams <rtw88220@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 2:08 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; johnsena@state.nm.us <johnsena@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good afternoon.

Is the now 5 hour zoom meeting supposed to give us all a chance to say that what is being proposed is wrong. How many of us parents have access to computers with a zoom opportunity to respond. How many minutes will be allowed if by some miracle they do get access? Too bad you will not let parents go in person so there could be an overflow audience against this Socialist Doctrine.

Basically this meeting is set up to appear to appease New Mexico parents, so they can give their opinions, when it is a fraud. The Governor and the Democrats want to force your CRT on us who love our country, love our New Mexico State, love our history and the leaders that formed it.

Don't even try to act like this is not Critical Race Theory. You will do the bidding of MLG to keep your jobs. It takes courage to stand up for what is right. Will you do it? This meeting is for show only, this is already a done deal.

Same thing having this meeting the day after November 11, Veterans Day, so you can spit in the veterans faces of our heroes with these horrible changes, so you can say our military fought and died for nothing. What is the rush to force this false teaching on our children? Shame on all of you in power to force this on us. Shame on the Governor who tries to demean anyone who disagrees with her Socialist/Communist doctrine.

We are against there changes if you bother to care to listen or to read that the great majority of us in New Mexico are against these radical changes.

Richard and Emilia Williams

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Standards

Barbara Atencio <nanatencio@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 2:23 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To EVERYONE who is working on the so-called new "Social Studies Standards" for New Mexico students:

I read in your opening statements on your web site that these new "Social Studies Standards" and I quote, "Is to ensure that ALL of our students see themselves reflected in the classroom, that our learning environments are culturally and linguistically responsive and that the rich backgrounds and perspectives of ALL New Mexicans come alive in the classroom." From what I read in these new standards you are hardly ensuring ALL students will be treated equally. This is just one example... 9-12.US.123. This will be a question teachers will be told to ask their students, "Assess the short and long term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people." Why wasn't liberalism included in this question? Why are you trying to create divisiveness among our children? Why is it the school's job to pit one group of children against another? I had always held the understanding that teachers were to keep their personal and political beliefs to themselves and teach the basics. We never intended for school systems to usurp our parenting duties and rights in the manner that you are proposing in this curriculum which is so biased. With Covid affecting our students' quality of learning in an adverse manner, teachers should be spending more time on basic core subjects not social indoctrination. What happened to teaching our children to judge an individual on the content of their character and not on the color of their skin or their political or social leanings.

There may be a couple good things in these standards but unfortunately there are far too many other bad examples in the Proposed Social Standards as well. Teacher Wendy Leighton, one of the drafters of these new so called "Social Standards" was quoted in the Santa Fe New Mexican (Sunday Nov. 7, 2021) "We have developed a very thorough, up-to-date, historically accurate social studies standard which will provide a well-rounded education, where ALL stories and voices will be heard,"

Unfortunately the following proposed standards and others listed in the proposal will only consider certain opinions and ideologies from students, far from a "well-rounded education where ALL stories and voices will be heard.": "9-12.US.56". / "9-12.US.129". / "9-12.US.132". Are you now proposing that our already overworked and overwhelmed teachers will now have the duty of indoctrinating our children and usurping any rights as parents to instill our own values at home? As a parent and grandparent I am deeply concerned about where these "proposed social standards" are going and about the future of our children and our society if these standards are implemented in our schools. We feel that this is the same federal government "intervention" that was attempted in the state of Virginia's public schools and was soundly rejected by the voters in their last gubernatorial election. Please do not go through with these changes. It will only bring hurt and harm. Surely you see how these changes are so biased. Please see that this is a bad idea that does not need to be a part of New Mexico schools. New Mexico is better than this. We need ideas that will encourage and inspire our students such as vocational and trade programs for the 80 percent of students who do not go on to higher education or drop out of school completely, so more students will be able to graduate from High School with job skills ready to join the workforce. We don't need to go backwards in the way we treat one another as these proposed "social studies" standards will only cause divisiveness. Why can't New Mexico be a leader in education policies with beneficial ideas and changes instead of following a bad precedent by this administration that will cause more division since segregation.

We would also ask that PED listen to all school districts, other parents and educators who are calling for an extension of public comment on these proposed Social Standard changes as the schools have not yet recovered from the shutdown caused by the pandemic. These proposed changes are not only bad but they are an unnecessary burden on our teachers at a time when New Mexico is ranked "dead last" in the United States for the quality of our education system according to the "WalletHub" study.

Very concerned parents,
James and Barbara Atencio

[EXTERNAL] I VOTE NO on C.R.T.

Will Steinberg <wsteinberg@protonmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 2:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a concerned New Mexico Citizen, I DO NOT Support Critical Race Theory.

Will Steinberg of Albuquerque, N.M.

On 11/7/2021 the Las Cruces Sun-News ran an op-ed from lieutenant governor, Howie Morales, who defended the Governor's Critical Race Theory (CRT)-filled proposed social studies curriculum.

Morales claimed that a fear-driven "noisy minority with a deep stake in maintaining the status quo has seized upon those fears and blown the whole thing way out of proportion."

The Lieutenant Governor said the most "radical outcome" is for students to "respect and value others," although the means of this supposed outcome is through forcing children into a power struggle over their identity and to sew seeds of doubt in their minds about their supposed inherent racism or privilege. This is Critical Race Theory, plain and simple.

Morales continues to prove concerned parents' points by admitting that Critical Race Theory is seeping through in these standards and proposals. He admits that students are told to look at race and other external factors about others that "look like them."

[EXTERNAL] CRT

Barb Nicholes <spsussex@hotmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 2:43 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

These are my thoughts about CRT

Thanks Barbara Nicholes

Sent from Mail for Windows

To Whom it may concern;

These are my thoughts on CRT (critical race theory).

Critical race theory is Wrong.

When you are all only looking at everything by the color of your skin, That is a racist thing. (Very Racist).

The U.S. census Form is a very racist document.

Race or Ancestral Background is really no business of anyone but me.

You should only be interested in:

- | | |
|------------------------------------|-----------|
| 1-are you a U.S. citizen | yes or no |
| 2-do you have a Visa or Green card | yes or no |
| 3-are you illegally here | yes or no |

This is all that should matter to the citizens of the United States, not the color of the my skin or where my ancestors are from. My identity or Ancestral background or (anyone else's) Does Not need to be recorded by any government, society or any organization at all.

Ethnicity and race are interesting and fun to see when you are searching your genealogy.

When the census workers call and want me to identify myself by white, black, Hispanic, Asian, ect.;; (Because I list our family as Americans), I ask them what year they want me to identify where my ancestors come from. Because I can get ancestors from every country.

So in short I come from ALL races, ethnicities & all countries.

CRT is hateful, racist and just plain wrong.

We need to be a people of acceptance.

It doesn't matter what the color of your skin is or where your ancestors are from.

All that matters is, that you are a person. A citizen of the United States of America.

Thank you very much for your time

Barbara Nicholes

[EXTERNAL] Curriculum In NM Schools

Christy Jaqua <cjaqua1117@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 2:51 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a parent in the state of NM I am completely opposed to teaching Critical Race Theory! Why would you subject kids to divide and rhetoric that does more harm than good? People of all races and color should be able to have the freedom to learn and not be ashamed of the color of their skin. I still believe we are One Nation Under God. Critical Race Theory and Communism can be electives at a college level when students are old enough to make an informed decision to learn about it or not.

Christy Jaqua

[EXTERNAL] Comment on Social Studies standards

Susan Gibbs <su.susangibbs@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 3:13 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attached please find my letter in strong support of adopting the proposed social studies standards. Thank you for your work in drafting and proposing these standards, and I hope they are adopted.

--

Susan Gibbs

su.susangibbs@gmail.com

Susan Gibbs
P. O. Box 5122
Santa Fe, NM 87502
November 8, 2021

John Sena
Policy Division, New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena;

I support the adoption of the proposed Social Studies standards for New Mexico. I taught 7th grade social studies at a public middle school in Santa Fe for 9 years before retiring in 2011, so I am very familiar with the previous social studies standards. I am writing to express my very strong support for the proposed standards. The proposed standards are excellent, and a strong step forward for social studies teaching in New Mexico. Please extend my congratulations to the teachers and others who drafted these standards, and thank them for this very comprehensive and detailed work.

When I taught, the standards were organized into Civics, Economics, Geography and History. Those topics are carried forward in the new standards but now include important updates, such as recognizing digital and multimedia sources, and emphasizing the evaluation of sources for their reliability, credibility, and relevance.

More importantly, I strongly support the inclusion of the two new standards, Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies and Inquiry. The focus on these ideas will allow teachers and students to personalize their understanding of social studies and make it relevant to their lives. I quickly found the most engaging lessons for students were ones that they recognized as relevant to their own cultures, histories, and lives. Encouraging teachers to focus on Inquiry lessons gives students agency for their own learning and interests, and brings the teaching of social studies into the mainstream of modern educational practices, already included as a focus for teaching standards in other subjects.

If I would be excited to teach these standards, and to engage students in a year-long discussion of social studies in modern life. These standards do not require teachers to learn new content beyond an understanding of social studies - I would find it easy to implement them starting in the coming school year.

These standards encourage students to take responsibility for their own learning, and they emphasize critical thinking, including the evaluation of the credibility of data sources. They encourage students to learn about their own history and culture as well as to value and respect different cultures and perspectives.

Respectfully,

Susan Gibbs
su.susangibbs@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards

Jana Theis <jmtheis33@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 3:14 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am greatly impressed with the newly drafted Social Studies Standards and support them fully.

As a librarian for 27 years, many of them working with teenagers, I can appreciate the significance of these standards. Learning about our nation, our state, our community and how we got to now is always so relevant to understanding ourselves, our world, and our future.

One thing that will be essential is teacher training. I hope that is a carefully thought out piece of the plan.

Thank you,
Jana Theis
Santa Fe

[EXTERNAL] New standardsHailie Drake <hailie.drake@icloud.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 3:21 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I have read through the proposed standards as well as listened to teachers opinions. It is heartbreaking to say the least. How do you think my 6 year old black daughter will feel hearing the divisive lessons? Our oldest three children have white skin. So according to the proposed teaching they are oppressors and the world is set up for them. My baby will hear because her skin is black she is oppressed and society is systematically set up for her to fail. Not only is this a lie from the devil it will plant seeds of a victim mentality, hate and fear. It will cause division in family, in classrooms on teams and in our community. A victim mentality will set more students on a path of defeat and lead to increased problems and drop outs. It will hurt the black community not put us on a path to equality. Racism does exist. It is an awful reality that we have faced as a family. This is not a solution in fact I feel it takes away from the true accounts of racism that happen in real time. Instead of handling issues as they arise we are distracted by this rhetoric. We are so focused on what sounds "good" and "helpful" we are missing the dangers being instilled. If this was to create equality and critical thinking it would leave students feeling empowered, driven for success and motivated to innovate.

From the one sided views on gun control, sexuality and other topics the underlining theme of this curriculum is to push an agenda. I am strongly against it being accepted in our schools.

Hailie Drake

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies standards

Teri Hackler <terihackler@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 3:30 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I approve of the new standards.

They are carefully drafted and the update is very necessary.

Thank you,
Teri Hackler

[EXTERNAL] Comment on Proposed Social Studies Curriculum

Cecelia Romero Likes <cecelia.romerolikes@desertmontessori.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 3:33 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

My name is Cecelia Romero Likes and I am an Early Childhood Educator in Santa Fe, NM. I am 100% in favor of an ABAR, decolonized, and inclusive Social Studies curriculum. I believe this to be a non-partisan issue that would be favorable to the development of all children.

Sincerely,

--

Cecelia Romero Likes

Lead Toddler Teacher

Desert Montessori School

www.desertmontessori.com

[EXTERNAL] Comments and concerns about the NM social science proposed standards

S.J. Fiske <fiske_sj@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 3:38 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: sjfiske@gmail.com <sjfiske@gmail.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Public Education Professionals,

I am commenting on the High School social science standards, as a former professor and faculty member at University of Maryland and also as a cultural anthropologist with extensive experience in diversity. I currently vote and reside in New Mexico.

I believe the majority of the proposed changes for social studies are in the correct direction. High school Civics, Geography, Economics and History both U.S., New Mexico, and global are all very important and should start with a discussion of "Inquiry" – helping students distinguish between sources of information and fact and falsehoods.

Where I am critical and concerned is with the last standard, "Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies."

First of all, this is the last standard on the list -- and the most clearly related to social studies -- of all the units for which there are proposed standards. Because it is the last unit, it is the most likely to be condensed into the few remaining weeks, or not dealt with at all. I have designed many syllabi and curriculum, and I know that the last on the list gets shortchanged in terms of time in the classroom and consideration by the students.

Next, I am concerned that by so identifying it as "Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies" the unit sticks out like a sore thumb and is going to be one of the first of the standards that is lopped off in the next administration, or in voter and parental feedback. Each school district is going to end up burying it, or championing it, depending on the parental and voting political winds. It will be the first to be cut in the budget and the first to look to when school administrators want to move funding around. By so identifying it, it becomes a target.

I believe that ethnic and racial studies and cultural understandings are at the core of learning and are extremely important. That is why I recommend that ethnic, cultural and identity be integrated into each and every discussion of the other standards, from Civics to Economics and History. Certainly there is much to discuss about income inequality and economic opportunity, and why this is distributed along racial and ethnic lines. Civics – from voter participation, to the ethnic and cultural makeup of our politicians is affected and always has been, by racial and ethnic considerations. The Voting Rights Act is a case in point.

By segregating ethnic, cultural, and identity studies from the other standards is to endanger it, not to ensure that it will survive.

Please consider integrating these standards into the other components of the Social Studies standards. I am happy to help re-draft the proposed standards along these lines.

Thank you in advance,

Dr. Shirley Fiske
Santa Fe resident
202 744-9350

Sent from Mail for Windows

This email has been checked for viruses by Avast antivirus software.
www.avast.com

[EXTERNAL] FULL SUPPORT of NM Social Studies Standards

Sarah McKinney <sarah.a.mckinney@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 4:07 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing to voice my full support for the new NM Social Studies standards as drafted. As a professional educator and parent, I was skeptical as I opened up the document to skim what I figured was a watered down version of what I wish our children were learning in schools. However, my skepticism was misplaced. These standards and the kind of serious thinking about social issues and identity promoted in them is what we need. Please do not those who want to drag us back to white-washed, revisionist history change these standards. It would be an injustice to our children and our future.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sarah McKinney, PhD
(505) 328-6457

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Studies

Jennifer Nevdahl <jennifer.nevdahl@cottonwoodclassical.org>

Mon 11/8/2021 4:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

I would like to ask in the public comment portion of the adoption of the new standards that more time be given to read through the new document and that more time be given before implementation. It is a big ask to have this ready to go by next school year when we are barely keeping our heads above water as it is. Please consider giving us more time to fully read and understand the new standards and give us more time to plan and prepare to implement them.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Nevdahl

--

Jennifer Nevdahl, M.A.
Social Studies Department
World History Teacher
Cottonwood Classical Preparatory School
jennifer.nevdahl@cottonwoodclassical.org

[EXTERNAL] SS Rule Changes

Cody Skinner <cskinner@bulldogs.org>

Mon 11/8/2021 5:17 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Many of these proposed standards are not standards at all. They are teaching assignments. Many of the standards talk about describing and identifying with a group of people, not as Americans or New Mexicans, but as people who have been mistreated by others. These new standards expect students to examine the role of the oppressor vs. the oppressed and create action plans which are more equitable for diverse groups of people. Shouldn't the students learn what has already been done to make life equitable across the board for every New Mexican? Why should students learn about the consequences of gun violence in America without learning the contributions guns have made and still make each day in our Country? Many of these standards want students to learn about current events, not History. There are too many standards wanting students to identify with a group. This does nothing but show people how different we are and divide our nation even further apart. Students should learn more about how everyone's differences, when working together, has been what has made our country the greatest on Earth. Many of these standards are poorly written and appear to come from a Leftist point of view. Standard 9-12.US.56 says, "evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States." So, it's saying that our economic system is inefficient, unequitable, and unjust? Many of these proposed standards are not Pro-United States or Pro-New Mexico. More time is needed for everyone to study these proposed standards and FIX them.

Cody Skinner

[EXTERNAL] Social studies "standards" jeffrey-s-brown <jeffrey-s-brown@comcast.net>

Mon 11/8/2021 6:51 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Sent from Samsung Galaxy smartphone.
Stay away from the public schools.

[EXTERNAL] proposed social studies curriculum slaveymom <slaveymom@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 6:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please note my vehement opposition to this curriculum being taught in any NM schools.

Lainie Slavey

Farmington

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone

[EXTERNAL] RE: Reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11 ehausman@rockridge.biz <ehausman@rockridge.biz>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:10 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: cagonzales@sfps.k12.nm.us <cagonzales@sfps.k12.nm.us>; sbooses@sfps.k12.nm.us <sbooses@sfps.k12.nm.us>; rudygarcia@sfps.k12.nm.us <rudygarcia@sfps.k12.nm.us>; sasanderson@sfps.k12.nm.us <sasanderson@sfps.k12.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena,
Policy Division,
New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED),
300 Don Gaspar Avenue,
Room 121,
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena,

RE: Reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11

My name is Elaine Hausman and I'm a constituent from Santa Fe County. I was on the founding parent board of Turquoise Trail Charter School,, and served as Substitute Principal in the first year of operation.

New Mexico is dead last in education, and the proposed social studies curriculum is designed to keep us there. This country was founded by those seeking religious freedom, willing to risk a long journey across a vast ocean in wooden ships propelled only by the wind.

Instead, our children will learn that African slave ships, motivated by greed created this nation.

The new curriculum does not mention our nation's Founding Fathers, i.e. George Washington or Thomas Jefferson. There is no mention of the Constitution or the Bill of Rights. We have no Presidency, no Congress, no Supreme Court. Our kids need honest CIVICS, not hatred and divisiveness.

In the proposed "standards", Diversity is the hallmark of every class level and sexuality a principal issue.

New Mexico already has a curriculum that reflects our values! It needs to be strengthened, not undermined. Loving kindness, competence, being a good citizen, striving for excellence, and helping others are the Values we need to teach our children!

I am asking you to reject these standards, as they promote and instill assumptions about race and inequality as the basis for America in our students. This progressive/liberal bias is not new. It stems from an ideology of Critical Race Theory (CRT). Critical race theory is destructive and rejects the fundamental ideas on which our constitutional republic is based. Applying the philosophy would violate a multitude of American civil rights laws by treating people differently according to race. It should not be elevated in American classrooms or in our military.

Specifically, I urge Michelle Lujan-Grisham's NMPED to promote knowledge of Civics, not social action or diversity training. Many schools around the country are spending significant amounts of money on so-called anti-bias training. Educators should focus on teaching how our government functions, the importance of constitutional rights and the equal treatment under the law, as well as historical facts and content that prepare students for life in the world.

Here are the ten most egregious new standards:

1. In Ethics, Cultural and Identity Studies, a requirement that students assess how social policies and economic forces “offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity.” This standard assumes that there are only 2 choices.
6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d)
2. Throughout the entire social studies curriculum for K-8 grades, there is a continued focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. This has the effect of dividing people among various minority groups, which can quickly lead to victimhood.
3. There are also numerous examples where a teacher can impose the notion of “justice and fairness,” unequal power relations, “past and current injustices,” although those terms are open to many interpretations. These phrases are also pejorative as it perpetrates the sense of inequity in our society along racial lines. 6.29.11.11(E)(2) and 6.29.11.15(E)(7) and 6.29.11.15(E)(12)
4. Within High School U.S. History, numerous references, or preoccupation with slavery during the formation of America which echoes both CRT and the 1619 Project that slavery/racism is the foundation of American society. 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(b) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(d) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(e) and 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(k) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(f) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(g) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(h)
5. Within High School U.S. History, a requirement that students “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” This standard assumes that there is no such system in the US and it imposes the belief on students that our current capitalistic system must be eliminated to eliminate racism. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i)
6. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to understand how gender and sexuality norms were changing during Reconstruction and 1920s, as well as are required to examine the activities the LBGTQIA+ community during a recent 40-year period. Why is this a standard rather than an option? This standard imposes a liberal bias on students.
6.29.11.21(A)(3)(m) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(z) and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(ll)
7. Within High School U.S. History, students are required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg)
8. In the 5th Grade, students are required to describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. This standard pits race against race and stresses racial disparity and inequality. Again see the socialist class v class assumption herein.
6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)
9. In the 7th Grade, students must compare the patterns of exploration, destruction, and occupation of the Americas by the Spaniards. How about the benefits of the occupation such as western civilization? 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)
10. Within High School U.S. History, students must explore the movement against police brutality. How about teaching students to be good citizens, and that good citizens obey the law? 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)
Government funded bias has no place in our classrooms, our military, or in our country. We emphatically reject the overall socialist- bias that these standards are intended to impose on our children and grandchildren.

Teaching children hatred, victimhood and fear is downright evil! Why would you even want to do that?

I intend to attend a protest on these proposed standards in Santa Fe, Friday, November 12th from 9-12 am in Mabry Hall of the Jerry Apodaca Building, 300 Don Gaspar, in downtown Santa Fe.

Thank you for your time, and please consider these heart-felt concerns for the children of New Mexico!

Sincerely,

Elaine Hausman
18 Rockridge Rd.
Cerrillos, NM 87010
505-660-0283

CC: School Board

Chairman, Santa Fe School Board
610 Alta Vista Street, Santa Fe, NM. 87505

[EXTERNAL] please reject the Soc St standards

Lorinjerry Armstrong <clanarmstrong92@yahoo.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:27 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please reject the proposed 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies standards. There is too much there for successful implementation Thank you

Gerald Armstrong
3001 Sunland Drive
Alamogordo nm 88610

[EXTERNAL] Support for new social studies standards

Genevieve Richter <gennyrichter@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 8:39 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I give my support for the new social studies standards. They are shockingly great, thank you so much!

-Genevieve Richter, DPT

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Curriculum Standards

Laurie Wenner <roswalien.lw@gmail.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 9:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear NMPED,

I am writing to voice my concerns about the proposed update of the Social Studies curriculum in New Mexico. From page 9 outlining the “Standards and Guiding Principles” whereby the entire curriculum is geared toward “Social Justice and Equity” and “ensuring divergence from Eurocentric cultural script”, I can see that thinly veiled Marxism and Critical Race Theory is the “guiding light” of this entire program. The directive of “study of “authentic stories about power and oppression” from Kindergarten through 12th grade is over emphasized. Having children determining their differences from others in their classes is repeated over and over for every grade level. Reading through the 128 pages of repetitive and convoluted directives is arduous and difficult. There were some hopeful phrases throughout the document such as “Use multiple sources” to support your point of view. In high school, students are introduced to evaluation of investments, insurance, budgeting and various day to day finances. Much of the standards are expected skills necessary to understand our world but buried within all the details are recurrent references to CRT related dogma.

For instance:

Pg 11 Anchor standards #21 the goal is to teach students “Community Equity Building” skills.

Pg 39 5:12 “Describe how inequity in the US laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.”

Pg 64 9-12 Econ 69 “Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally.”

Pg 86 9-12 Econ 69&70 “Government should provide alternatives to private markets for supplying goods and services when it appears the benefits to society of doing so outweighs the cost to society.”

Pg 88 9-12 Econ 126 “Define environmental racism and its impact on New Mexico.

Pg 118 9-12 130 Hate crimes against the LGBTQIA+

Pg 118 9-12 132 Emphasis on Gun Violence rather than 2nd amendment rights

Pg 118 9-12 135 “Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups”

This program encourages division and victimhood among the diverse populations of New Mexico. I would rather see the emphasis on our unity as Americans with opportunity for economic and power advancement based on education, hard work and family structures that support one another. Having recently had a 2 term black President from a distressed background shows that equality of opportunity is far more prevalent than this PED social studies curriculum indicates. Not to mention that literally millions of people would not be clamoring to get into America if they saw us as a racist and oppressive country. The term “EQUITY” which is liberally sprinkled throughout the document is a Marxist and CRT term meaning that there should be equal outcomes no matter the choices one makes for their education, hard work, career path, marriage and lifestyle. “EQUALITY” of opportunity should be stressed and students taught how to build upon that. Dr. Martin Luther King showed us how to judge a person NOT by the color of their skin but by the content of their character. Let us please take that to heart and implement that ideal throughout our social studies education curriculum.

Sincerely,

Laurie P Wenner

Roswell, NM

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Revision

Jayne Nordstrom <jaynenord@aol.com>

Mon 11/8/2021 11:21 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena,

As a mother and grandmother, I am writing in support of the proposed social studies standards. The scope of work is impressive. The standards respect the intelligence of children and the six strands that run through grades K-12 provide a framework for critical thinking which is so important to future success of our young people. I commend the committee for their dedication to this important work. I urge the department to adopt these standards and to resist the calls to maintain the old Eurocentric approach that is failing to prepare our children to be effective citizens and problem solvers.

Respectively,

Jayne Nordstrom
1 Calle Vecinos
Santa Fe, NM
87507

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] Vote against proposed curriculum changes

Ashley White <a.white88043@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 5:50 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing to give feedback in regards to the proposed history curriculum changes and "Critical Race Theory."

I am AGAINST the changes to the curriculum and feel that the proposed changes would only cause more divide in our students and communities. Students, parents and teachers already have so many hard changes they have had to deal with over the last 2 years, many families have already moved out of state due to unhappiness with our states public school systems over the last year. I feel that further changes would lead to definite withdrawal of children from NM public schools in large amount.

Thank you.

Ashley White

Cloudcroft, NM

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Repeal of 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies

Dave Jones <emildave@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 6:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am a concerned parent and I disagree with any change to the NM standards for excellence - Social Studies.

Our children should not have Critical Race Theory taught to them.

Dave Jones

emildave@gmail.com

[EXTERNAL] Proposed social studies standards

Lynn Pickard <lynnpickard1@yahoo.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 6:58 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Although I am not a member of the League of Women Voters, I read their letter in The New Mexican, reviewed some of the standards and recent comments against them, and want to register that I stand with LWV in encouraging you to adopt the proposed standards. We need a citizenry who are critical thinkers and who have learned about diverse cultures and perspectives so that they can make their own educated choices. Please adopt the proposed standards.

Sincerely,

Lynn Pickard

Sent from my iPhone

[EXTERNAL] K-12 Studies Standards

Gary Hays <ghays@cliffsamusementpark.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 6:59 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Greetings

I am an older man who grew up under a different mind set for education. Our society has changed but things remains the same. Parents are directly responsible for and need to be involved in their children's education and the educational system presented by the state needs to focus on education, not philosophy. Reading, writing and arithmetic should still be the norm, not cultural and societal experiments.

I am not in favor of the proposed changes presented by the PED.

Sincerely,

Gary Hays

Bernalillo

Sent from Mail for Windows

[EXTERNAL] New standards

Sharon Shoemaker <shoemaker714@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 7:23 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I appreciate the department's efforts to make content more relevant and current. I hope the standards can stand in the face of the rampant paranoia on social media. I have a daughter who had significant vision problems which created challenges especially when she got to high school. She could listen to audio versions of assigned novels but those textbooks were too much info to take in. So I read her science and social studies textbooks to her, I mention this to say that 30 years after my schooling was completed, I learned a lot of new information about advances in science and ideas about other parts of the world. My sense is that the changes in knowledge and perspectives over the past 30 years is even greater.

Stay firm in your commitment to upgrade the curriculum.

Best,

Sharon Shoemaker

Santa fe.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Vivian Skadron <vskadron@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:08 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

After reading Howie Morales' editorial this morning, I am convinced we need to revise our social studies standards to reflect the world today. I am strongly in favor of emphasizing the study and discussion in class of ethnic and cultural diversity with emphasis on Native American and Black History.

Please do not let a vocal, but misinformed minority, make the headlines as they did when they screamed about new science standards a few years ago. It took scientists and educators to right the false narratives they tried to promote. We should do better this time.

Vivian Skadron

--

Vivian Skadron

[EXTERNAL] Proposed repeal and replace-integrated 6.29.11 NMAC 1 becky green <bgreen4ever@hotmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:12 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

PROPOSED REPEAL AND REPLACE - INTEGRATED
6.29.11 NMAC 1

Dear NM PED,

My concerns happen to sign with Los Cruces parent, Rick Reynaud attached below this statement. It is disheartening to see the depths of history being "replaced". As a parent of 3 racially diverse adopted children we know the value of history's truth even when shameful and ugly. It is only through teaching without embellishments or adding to/deleting history that we see the beauty of this American country where all men are created equal and can say, "we the people" proudly unashamed of who we are individually knowing we overcame our family history whatever it may be. Our children (whose ethnicities consist of American Indian, Black, Russian, Hispanic, White and Asian) were raised and taught it did not matter how you looked but what your character showed. They were raised to be American, proud Americans not divisive in "choosing" a race/identity. I am thankful they graduated from New Mexico schools years ago under the previous "standards". They are now full grown adults with ethnically diverse children of their own and it is these future children who, if these standards are changed, will miss out on the true "Just" system that makes up the USA. We live in the greatest country of the world and diminishing/canceling history does not change it. We simply cannot learn from it. When we are willing to learn from them, our past mistakes make us stronger but we can't learn if we don't know. Teach the ugly truth.

Please scrap these standards and revert back to the previous standards.

Sincerely,

Kevin and Becky Green

Citizens, Rio Rancho

"here are my comments. I have attached a marked-up copy to my email that I hope you can include in the record, but if not here is my Summary:

Begin remarks:

These standards contain history based on a negative view of our Nation. Here's an excerpt-example from the proposed U.S. Anchor History High School standards:

"Evaluating what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States;" So we don't have a "just" economic system in the U.S.?

The U.S. is and has been the standard of excellence for true Justice in the world, economically and otherwise. The U.S. Constitution, the greatest achievement of mankind, is derided by these historical revisions. This is the basis for my voluminous objections to these revised standards.

My overall recommendation: Scrap this and revert back to the previous Standards. If the standards are to be re-written, then the divisive and utterly non-productive ethnic/identity standards must be dropped. Negative assessments of this nation proclaimed as "matters of fact" must not be tolerated.

V/R
Rick Reynaud"

Thanks!
Becky
Sent via the Samsung Galaxy S9, an AT&T 5G Evolution capable smartphone

[EXTERNAL] Fwd: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

Billie Waters <billiefwaters@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:17 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Subject: Opposition to Revision of Social Studies Curriculum

I am opposed to the proposed changes being considered which add critical race theory and revisionist history to the curriculum. These ideas are divisive and use language such as "inequality," "racial injustice" and "unequal power" to teach our children that they are instigators and victims of a flawed system. This is cultural Marxism which divides rather than unites our country. The Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Standard as well as Inquiry Standard will support categorical division of individuals and set students up to depend on government for survival. No student should be taught hatred against another student. This is a biased agenda which does NOT ever belong in our public schools.

Billie Waters

[EXTERNAL] No to Critical Race Theory!!

Will Rooney <lordofradio74@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:22 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Pitting any race against another or giving one race an excuse to be victims before they start life is wrong! Empower them Yes! But Empower All equally!!

[EXTERNAL] New Proposed Curriculum

Valerie Rogers <willrogersnm@hotmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:22 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

HELL NO to this crt curriculum. Go back to teaching for a change, and not divisiveness, and racism. This crt is a "theory", that seeks to impose progressive world view. Such theory is ultimately to destroy our foundational system in this country; instilling ideas of white supremacy, evil capitalism and ultimately to DESTROY PRIVATE RIGHTS. I really question the moral and ethical grounding of anyone proposing such a sinister, disgusting idea to children. I can see why this state of NM is last in so many areas, including this pathetic "education" - it is run by total despots, morons wallowing in a "progressive" cesspool, and un-American values. Horrible, and I want it stopped.

Valerie Rogers, Grants

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

[EXTERNAL] New social studies standards

Julie Denning <juliedenning@comcast.net>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:32 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I completely support adopting the new standards. I have a strong background in history and social studies, a master's degree in library science, and a long career as a librarian. I know the value of facts. These new standards are attempting to provide more accurate and inclusive information. Let's do everything we can to enhance education in New Mexico!

Julie Denning
8417 Cherry Hills Rd NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

Sent from my i-pad

[EXTERNAL] Public opinion on CRT

John Gentry <johnrgentry@yahoo.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:36 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NO to any CRT in New Mexico school system.

John R Gentry

[EXTERNAL] Social studies curriculum

merrie611 <merrie611@protonmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:40 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

The schools especially in NM need to focus on reading and math. We are at the bottom in these areas. CRT is not America's actual history but rather a worldview unsupported by evidence. Parents should be responsible for training on this subject not the schools.

Sent with ProtonMail Secure Email.

[EXTERNAL] Update of New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Susan McKinney <smck0350@hotmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:47 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I fully support updating the NM social studies standards with the proposed standards as is. Don't let this step toward truth and justice be hijacked by fear and baloney.

The piece by Howie Morales in the Albuquerque Journal today put the issue intelligently and objectively. "The new social studies standards are good. Really good. They'll make sure our children are respected and valued for who they are, and learn to respect and value others."

[EXTERNAL] Social studies curriculum

Britney Decker <britneydeck@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:57 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am voicing my concerns about the new proposed social studies curriculum. I am very much opposed to it. I have read the majority of the 122 pages and am disgusted with this proposed curriculum. I found many opportunities to teach my very bi-racial family that some of their relatives do not have their beat interest at heart. There is no need to teach children to hate and find fault with each other. Please do not encourage more hate. Let's embrace the positive and teach that all races have made mistakes and do make mistakes, but together we can continue to progress and be better tomorrow. Once again I am opposed to the new curriculum prosed.

Britney Decker
Farmington, NM

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Kathryn Sherlock <kcsherlock43@yahoo.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 9:26 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing in support of the proposed New Mexico Social Studies Standards (6.29.11 NMAC.Social Studies)

Why?

First, I am impressed by the thoughtful vision of the authors. Instead of focusing only on the memorization of names and events that are important in NM history, they have developed a thorough framework of action-based performance standards.

There are 6 “Categories” of Standards for each grade level: K-8 and 2 courses in High School. (Civics, Economics, Geography, History, Ethnic Cultural and Identity, and Inquiry). These areas for exploration are carefully aligned with each other.

Although the performance standards utilize much information about the history of New Mexico and related places, people and events, the overall aim is to develop and encourage students’ “agency” – i.e., ability and self-confidence to develop “critical consciousness.” These standards consistently aim to develop students’ mastery of communication skills and to promote student thought and action - participation, reflection and evaluation - as they are applied to Social Studies problems.

As a former school librarian, I am especially glad to see the inclusion of the last Category – “Inquiry.” These performance standards focus on the development of students’ “information literacy” and “media literacy” skills - which align with the teaching goals of school library media programs.

Kathryn (“Kitty”) Sherlock, Ph.D.

[EXTERNAL] A great step forward!

Cynthia Gefvert <cynthgg@icloud.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 9:32 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To who it may concern:

I read the new social studies changes and I am in agreement with these. In the public elementary school I went to (back in the 60's), we learned the very basic facts of the different religions of the students in class. We had Christmas and Hanukkah activities. We knew about Ramadan although there were no Muslim students. It was before Kwanzaa or I'm sure that would have been taught. My point is, we all developed an understanding of others and no one felt their religion was less. I believe it helped me to appreciate the differences in my fellow students.

I like the plan to promote civic engagement! We are in a country where large numbers of citizens decline to participate in elections. Look around and you will see that for many, throwing trash out the car window is considered acceptable. People walk their dogs and don't pick up after them. Teaching some personal responsibility and accountability is a good thing!

It's long past time to teach the whole truth about our founding fathers, the Civil War, our treatment of Native Americans, our treatment of blacks, Jim Crow laws, Japanese internment camps, Vietnam and so on. Students need to learn that while the founding fathers did some great things, they also owned slaves and their personal lives were not always so pure. Students need to learn about the many massacres of Native Americans and how the country worked to eliminate their cultures. Students need to learn about Tulsa. By learning about the bad things as well as the accomplishments, students can learn perspective and how to better look at the difficult questions facing our country today.

Learning the truth will not make students feel guilty about last actions they had no part in. But hopefully it will help them to understand how we can, as a country, do better.

Kudos to the new standards!

Cynthia Gefvert

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Curriculum

Gale Wright <galewright318@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 9:53 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am very much in favor of the new social studies curriculum being considered by the NM Public Education Department. I think it is very important to teach our children an accurate version of history and to include stories of all the different cultural perspectives in our country. I think it is important for children to know the truth and therefore be able to understand the current problems in our society. Only then can they help guide our society to good solutions in the future.

Patricia Gale Wright
Santa Fe, NM 87508

[EXTERNAL] Proposed standards

Janet Eduardo <JanetEduardo2@outlook.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 9:54 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

It is past time that TRUE history and Social Studies be taught in our schools.
The proposed changes are a step in the right direction.

Janet Eduardo
Santa Fe

[EXTERNAL] Literacy-humanities/social-studies/ proposed curriculum

Judith Kitzes <judy@seriouslight.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 9:56 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I strongly support the inclusion of increasing diverse perspectives and histories of the peoples of New Mexico in the social studies curriculum. We need to move beyond the tri-cultural only perspective and acknowledge the histories of other ethnic groups that have lived the New Mexico experience. By hearing more voices we can honestly critique the strengths and weaknesses of historical social engagement of communities. Diversity, struggle and change is constant.

The intertwining of the several themes enriches the curriculum.

Thank you

Judith Kitzes, MD, MPH

[EXTERNAL] Comment on Proposed NMPED Curriculum

Daniel Feldbusch <dan_feldbusch@yahoo.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 10:24 AM

To: Feedback, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern,

I'm currently a parent of (2) APS students. I'm writing to inform you that my wife and I are against the new proposed curriculum. A number of issues these days are being politicized. Politics should never be brought into our child's classrooms. This new curriculum has completely politicized the history of our great country. It is designed to make students think in only one way and only see the history in one way. Students should be taught to be critical thinkers. They should be taught the facts about what happened in history without a bias. This curriculum is completely bias. It is focused more on the evils that have taken place in the past than the good things our country has done. It teaches that our country is racist and evil. It teaches students to hate our great country. There is no mention of Martin Luther King Jr. at all in this curriculum! "I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character." However, this curriculum is focused on skin color and separates people into groups based on their skin color. There is plenty mention of race and how our country needs to change because it's apparently evil and racist, but no mention of Martin Luther King Jr. This is horrible. This curriculum was supposedly put together by 60 teachers. I don't see how 60 teachers could all get together and agree that our county is racist and treats everyone except white people that they're looked down on and treated differently. I would love to have a discussion with theses 60 teachers or whoever came up with this garbage and remind them that this is the greatest country on our planet and there's a reason for that. It sure isn't because everyone is focused on race. It's actually the greatest country because we aren't focused on race! We are more focused on knowledge and innovation. We are determined and willing to be the best in the world at everything we do. The more we talk about how our country is racist, which it isn't, the more time that is lost learning about real problems and how to solve them. We have many serious problems that need to be solved instead of wasting time on teaching our kids to look at color of peoples skin before anything else. Our country is not racist, but the brainwashing in this curriculum will force the future generations to look at nothing but race. This curriculum will actually make the country racist. It seems to be based off of the 1619 project which has been proven to be historically inaccurate to say the least. In this curriculum the teaching of the American Revolutionary War is focused on race and groups of people instead of what the war was about. The war was for our freedom from a tyrannical king. It was to form our own country where everyone is created equal! One Nation under God indivisible, with liberty and justice for ALL!!! We are all equal under the Constitution of the United States of America and that is what should be taught to the future generations.

If this curriculum passes, my kids will not be attending public school or any school that teaches the nonsense that is this proposed curriculum. I know the schools get funding by the number of students they have. If this curriculum passes there will be many other parents pulling there kids from these schools. I will inform every parent I know about the curriculum and urge them to pull their kids form any school teaching this curriculum.

Thank you,

Concerned Parent

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards for NM harrisb609@aol.com <harrisb609@aol.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 10:29 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

rule.feedback@state.nm.us

Dear Mr. Sena,

I am writing in support of the proposed Social Studies Standards. I am a retired New Mexico elementary teacher with more than 35 years working with both elementary students, mostly primary grades, and elementary school teachers.

I looked carefully at all 40 pages of the standards and was very happy to see emphases on New Mexico history, geography and map drawing, and honesty in both New Mexican and American history. I was especially pleased by the strong emphasis on learning honestly how people of color, Indigenous people, and marginalized people have been treated and whose voices have most often been excluded or given little attention in our traditional social studies classes. The standards as proposed also ask students to learn and understand how the promise of our Constitution has never been fully realized and to think about what has happened as a result of this unequal treatment of people in our state and our country. Then they are asked to consider for themselves what could be done about it to make our society more just. I read recently in a post from a local foundation that teaching students like this is wrong and will lead students to hate each other and America.

I disagree. I strongly believe that a society that does NOT strive to improve, to make itself more just, is a society that will not survive. A society where the members believe in 'every man for himself' is not one that can stand. If we consider democracy important, we must have an educated citizenry who actually cares about each other. In today's America we see tremendous selfishness and anger. I am convinced that January 6th occurred because of how social studies has been neglected and/or taught in ways that ignore the realities of all persons now and throughout our history.

The fact that we have darkness in our past doesn't make us a bad country. A few years ago I visited Germany and other countries in Eastern Europe. In each country were monuments to people who had been treated in horrible and unjust ways. They did not try to hide or minimize the ugly truths. Each country wants to make sure everyone knows about these things so that they never happen again. Surely we are a strong enough country to face the ugliness and detrimental effects of our history. We should be called upon to do something about them. We have much in our history and today to be proud of and it is clearly in these standards. But being proud of something we don't even understand or know is hardly a great thing.

Someone said to me that if we'd all been taught according to these standards we wouldn't be in the trouble we're in now. I firmly agree and I'm grateful to all the stakeholders who worked so hard and with such strong hearts to create these standards for the benefit of all New Mexico students.

Sincerely,
Cindy Chapman
2301 Calle del Estavan NW
Albuquerque, New Mexico 87104

[EXTERNAL] 11/12/21 NMPED 6.29.1.9

Dale Harrier <hharrier21@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 10:31 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Will LGBTQ+ curriculum be limited to Middle/High School - or will be taught also to Elementary Students. If so Parents need to have opt out provision to avoid their childs possible confusion wiith gender and transgender identity.

H. Dale Harrier MD

505-927-7347

[EXTERNAL] response to criticism of draft NM Social Studies Standards

John R Thayer <ranchoelaxonm@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 10:46 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I am writing this letter in response to Mr. Splendoria's radical propagandistic comments regarding the NM PED's draft standards for Social Studies. (Optic, 11/3/21) As a retired K-12 educator, Early Childhood Specialist and History instructor I take great issue with his criticism.

Why study history? The opening sentence of the US Constitution reflects the intent of the founders. Public education has as its mission to educate and inform our citizenry in order to advance the ideals of democracy as expressed in the Preamble. Students must have a knowledge of history in order to fulfill the promise and intent stated therein. Criticism and evaluation of past mistakes and a willingness to address them is patriotism at its highest level. The unquestioning acceptance of historical myths that have oppressed significant segments of our society have created the conditions in which students find themselves today. Children (including kindergarteners) are much more aware of and concerned by conflict than most adults give them credit for. They often feel powerless, particularly when the adults around them struggle to make meaning of events. They have an innate sense of fairness and justice and they are capable of understanding how individual and group actions can lead to empowerment and positive change. It is inappropriate to hold students accountable for the "sins of their fathers", however students live in the reality that their ancestor's actions have created. They are often outraged when they find out that much of the story presented as history consists of lies or has been left incomplete or untold. Mr Splendoria's criticisms pertain primarily to the teaching of US History. He imputes the "intent" underlying the standards: criticism of "conservatives", disrespect for authority (police), and support for an increasingly dictatorial government. Mr Splendoria wonders that communism and fascism are not analyzed. He conveniently ignores the sections outlining the Economics and Civics course standards, which actually do analyze and critique other economic and governmental systems. It is unfortunate that he fails to recognize the value of examination and questioning embedded in the performance standards. Mr Splendoria criticizes the standard that examines the role of guns in our society. Clearly he has never had to confront students' growing reality of gun violence in their lives. Mr Splendoria's criticisms appear to focus mainly on the PED's expectations that teachers will actively encourage students to examine the historical, social and economic assumptions and conditions that exist in our society. He cites examples of what he calls "extremism" on the part of the proposed standards, and begins by praising the striking of "teaching of social activism" to kindergarten and elementary students. Mr. Splendoria criticizes the standards that call for students to evaluate our economic and governmental system's efficiency, equity and justice. He equates those ideas with code words for systemic racism and white privilege, and he assigns to PED and educators the intent to guilt trip, marginalize and demonize people of European ancestry. Such an equation is little more than right wing propaganda. In history, it is the stories that matter. To only learn the stories promulgated in the interests of the status quo eliminates our ability to understand and move forward in addressing our society's many pressing problems. It does nothing to advance the inclusionary "us" in U.S. and as outlined in the Constitution's Preamble and in the Declaration of Independence. High quality social studies and history education give students the opportunity and ability to analyze the conditions and question the assumptions they find operative in their world. It empowers students as good citizens to strive to advance the stated intent of our economic and governmental system. Mr Splendoria's comments are clearly driven by the intent to limit discourse and debate and to spread right-wing propaganda through his use of dog-whistle terms and reactionary statements that impute evil intent on the part of educators and the PED. He quotes Lenin on the power of education but conveniently ignores the role of history education and educators since Socrates in resisting tyranny and the unquestioning acceptance of the status quo.

Sincerely,
John R Thayer
POB 124
Buena Vista, NM
87712

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies standards lthrtrc@gmail.com <lthrtrc@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 11:39 AM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I just read through the standards. I was totally impressed! The folks who put these together went to great pains to make the objectives for every grade level not only age appropriate but couched in such a way as to sort of back off and look at events from an historical, objective point of view, starting from first grade looking at differences as quite normal and without judging. They look at movements of peoples around the world as populations grew and ran into each other and what happened when they merged or didn't. It has kids look at their family backgrounds and how much or little that affects their lives today. I could go on and on – it really is a quite brilliant way to approach the study of societies and how they work with or contrary to each other, mixing economics with religions, climate, governments, etc. from personal to planetary. It made me jealous of what kids are learning today compared to what we learned and had to unlearn later on. I would encourage everyone to go through them – it's long but you can go through them pretty quickly and see the progression and see how carefully they avoid judgements. As a former teacher I could see myself learning with the kids through this process; I was actually excited about it. Check it out. Dennis Everything will be OK in the end; if it's not OK, then it's not the end.

[EXTERNAL] Don't Change, Do Better

Matt Jones <matthew.l.jones1975@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 12:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Public Education Department,

A new survey shows that New Mexico is ranked 49th in education among all of the states.

It is my understanding that the public education department wants to change not only how it teaches Social Studies and History in our classrooms, but what it teaches. The only reason we've been given as to why the public education department wants to make such a drastic change in these areas, "the curriculum is outdated."

I do not believe that the curriculum that we are attempting to teach the students in New Mexico is outdated. It is simply not being taught. I, as many of you, went through the public education system here in New Mexico.

I graduated high school in 1993, and sadly to say, nothing has changed in 28 years. In fact, I believe the highest rank that New Mexico has achieved in those 28 years is 47th.

Here are my questions for you,

- How is this curriculum actually better than the previous curriculum?
- How will you guarantee that this curriculum actually helps students learn any better than the previous curriculum?
- Why not simply take the current curriculum and make sure that you are teaching it well?

In short, I am asking you to reject this new volatile curriculum. Help improve the lives of all of the children in the classroom. Teach them how to read, write and perform simple math before throwing yet another new social based standard at them.

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment on Proposed Rulemaking, NMAC 6.29.11

John Dyrz <john@nmaft.org>

Tue 11/9/2021 12:46 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Whitney Holland <whitney@nmaft.org>

 1 attachments (268 KB)

11.9.21 PED Social Studies Standards Letter.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

NM PED Policy Division:

Please find the attached public comment on behalf of the American Federation of Teachers New Mexico in support of the proposed Social Studies standards changes being considered by the NM PED.

Thank you for your work in this area, please let us know if you require any additional information related to our public comment.

Best,
John Dyrz
AFT NM

--

John Dyrz || State Affiliate Political Organizer, AFT New Mexico
505-554-8679 || 530 Jefferson Street NE, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87108

This message contains confidential information and is intended only for the individual named. If you are not the named addressee, you should not disseminate, distribute or copy this e-mail. Please notify the sender immediately by e-mail if you have received this e-mail by mistake and delete this e-mail from your system. If verification is required of this e-mail, please request a hard-copy version.

AFT New Mexico
AFL-CIO
A Union of Professionals

An affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO

Higher Education
PSRP
Teachers

MAIN OFFICE
530 Jefferson Street NE
Albuquerque, NM 87109
T: 505/266-8888
F: 505/266-1967

nm.aft.org

November 9, 2021

Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department, Room 101
300 Don Gaspar Avenue,
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Re: "6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies"

NM PED Policy Division:

Please accept the below comments on the proposed new administrative "Rule 6.29.11 NMAC, Social Studies":

AFT New Mexico is submitting this letter in support of the proposed revisions to the New Mexico Social Studies standards.

Development of Proposed Standards

As educators, we appreciate the State devising a process where these proposed rules were considered, debated, vetted, and agreed upon by actual public educators who saw a need for a long-overdue revision to New Mexico's Social Studies standards. To be clear, revisions to our academic content should not be a hasty process, and to us, the NM PED got this aspect of the rulemaking right.

Our social studies standards have not been updated in some twenty years, and we agree with the NM PED that modernizing our standards is critical at this juncture. New Mexico's unique educational position in relation to the historic Yazzie/Martinez decision makes the need for these long overdue changes not only necessary, but critical for the well-being of our students' educational journeys.

Transparency of Proposed Rulemaking

Additionally, we appreciate the expanded access given to the public during this process to not only give their opinion, but the commitment from the NM PED to take feedback received from public comment to members of the committee who drafted these proposed rules.

This, to us, shows a deep commitment to our State and making sure all voices are heard throughout this process. This commitment to transparency has also been demonstrated through the NM PED's efforts to expand access to the public-facing component of rulemaking, namely expanding the time for public comment on this proposed rule.

Additional Content Areas

The addition of "ethnic, cultural, and identity studies" and "inquiry" are necessary inclusions for a few reasons. Primarily, adding focus areas around ethnicity, culture, and identity serves the purpose of widening our lenses when studying our shared history. New Mexico is a multi-cultural state, but for too long, our historical lens has skewed towards viewpoints representing only a fraction of those who call our great state home.

AFT New Mexico
AFL-CIO
A Union of Professionals

An affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO

Higher Education
PSRP
Teachers

MAIN OFFICE

530 Jefferson Street NE
Albuquerque, NM 87108
T: 505/266-6638
F: 505/266-1967

nm.aft.org

We must do better, and having honest, and sometimes passionate conversations with students will best equip them to learn, understand, and interpret historical events in a more holistic way. We view this additional content as a celebration of our students and these revised standards will help them see how their own histories have shaped our current societal climate.

Teaching skills around inquiry is also important for our students. In a society where historical facts are questioned regularly, helping students to think critically and hear viewpoints which are perhaps different than their own can help future-adults to be appreciative of the rich history of our State and how it has shaped the reality they will enter upon leaving our classrooms.

We believe strongly a well-informed and engaged society is a barometer of a healthy democracy. Equipping our students to be able to evaluate information presented to them – whether it is by an educator or anyone else – is important.

We recognize the current proposed rule does not require uniformity in thought, and as educators, we share this value. We simply want to best prepare our students to be able to navigate a society with complex historical issues and how those issues are expressed in a modern context.

Volume of Content

One area of feedback we have received from educators is the concern that with additional, modernized standards, the due diligence that can be reasonably given to an already lengthy set of standards could be constrained due to lack of time in an academic year.

We would request that as you evaluate public feedback around this proposed rule, that the sheer volume of material expected to be covered is considered. Educators desire to fully teach the content area, however, with additional standards, this desire could be unrealized.

We look forward to seeing the finalized standards soon, and our union of professionals appreciate the thoughtful and inclusive approach to these proposed revisions.

Ultimately, our profession and our union will always advocate for curriculum which reflects the varied histories of our students and communities – both shared histories and moments where historical events can be uncomfortable to discuss. Public schools must strive to be honest and trusted sources of information at all levels of education, and we believe these proposed social studies standards are an exercise in that deeply held belief. We owe no less to our students and their families.

Sincerely,

Whitney Holland
President, AFT New Mexico

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501
(505) 986-4792

FW: House Republican Caucus Comments on New, Proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards

Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

Tue 11/9/2021 12:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (735 KB)

Final Version of House Republican Caucus Letter Regarding Proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards.pdf;

From: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 2021 12:22 PM

To: Terrazas, Denise, PED <Denise.Terrazas@state.nm.us>

Subject: FW: House Republican Caucus Comments on New, Proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards

FYI

From: May, Rick <Rick.May@nmlegis.gov>

Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 2021 12:12 PM

To: Sena, John, PED <John.Sena@state.nm.us>

Cc: Hedin, Ryan <ryan.hedin@nmlegis.gov>; Matthew Garcia-Sierra <mattgarciasierra@gmail.com>; Alonzo Baldonado <ZOBaldonado@gmail.com>; Bill Rehm <billrehm@comcast.net>; Ezzell, Candy S. <csecows@aol.com>; Cathrynn Brown <Rep.Brown@windstream.net>; Gail Armstrong <Gail@gailfornewmexico.com>; Nibert, Greg <greg.nibert@nmlegis.gov>; Jack Chatfield <JackCHD67@gmail.com>; Strickler, James <jamesstrickler@msn.com>; Jason Harper <JasonHarperNM@gmail.com>; Jim Townsend <Townsend@pvt.net>; Joshua Hernandez <joshua@hernandeznm.com>; Powdrell-Culbert, Jane E. <jpandp@comcast.net>; Kelly Fajardo <Kelly.Fajardo@gmail.com>; Larry Scott <LrScott52@gmail.com>; Luis Terrazas <luis.terrazas.d39@gmail.com>; Martine Zamora <Zamora4StRep63@plateau.email>; Rachel Black <RachelBlackfor51@gmail.com>; Randall T. Pettigrew <rpettigrew@randallpettigrew.com>; Randy Crowder <RandalCrowder@gmail.com>; Rebecca Dow <Rebecca@dowforhouse.com>; Montoya, Rod <roddmontoya@gmail.com>; Ryan Lane <ryan@laneforliberty.com>; Stefani Lord <info@lord2020.com>; Zach Cook <ZachJCook@gmail.com>

Subject: House Republican Caucus Comments on New, Proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards

John:

Attached is a letter signed by every member of the House Republican Caucus expressing opposition, concerns, and suggestions about a number of the proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards that are currently open for public comments. Please add this letter to the official record of public comments.

We are attaching a PDF version of our letter.

Thank you for your consideration of our concerns, comments, and suggestions.

The House Republican Caucus

House Republican Caucus
New Mexico House of Representatives
State Capitol, Room 125

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501
(505) 986-4792

State of New Mexico
House of Representatives
STATE CAPITOL
Santa Fe

November 9, 2021

Mr. John Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar Avenue, Room 121
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

We are writing to express our strong opposition to the new proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum Standards that are currently undergoing a 45-day public comment period. Our opposition to these new proposed standards is based on our belief they incorporate the fundamentally flawed concepts of Critical Race Theory (CRT), plus they impose a progressive/liberal bias in regards to historical and societal events that are being mandated to be taught to New Mexico students. We, in turn, strongly urge the Public Education Department's (PED) leadership team to make substantial changes to these proposed standards in order to eliminate both of these highly objectionable aspects.

Social Studies education should be focused on teaching students why the U.S. and state constitutions are the pillars of our republic and how/why these documents are fundamental to fulfilling the American ideal that all people are created equal; how our governmental structures work and why governmental authority is dispersed among three separate, but co-equal branches; and how our free-enterprise system has resulted in a standard of living that is the envy of people across the globe and which provides a beacon of economic opportunity for all. It should not, however, be viewed as an opportunity to indoctrinate students with the false theology that our country is systemically racist, all things can be described in terms of oppressor and oppressed, or that our capitalistic system must be replaced with the paternalistic system of socialism.

Sadly, we believe these proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum Standards fail to teach students what has made America great, but instead has followed the path of various historical revisionists who only want to degrade and slander the greatest country on earth. Our country's history is not perfect in terms of economic and human rights, but that does not require altering Social Studies curriculums to embrace a highly distorted or biased view that the United States is dominated by white supremacists and racists. Rather than encouraging division and victimhood among our diverse populations, Social Studies curriculums should encourage students to realize we are all Americans and we all have opportunities for economic advancement based on the principles of family, education, and work.

At least 26 states have either adopted or are considering various policies/legislation that would restrict the teaching of CRT or limit how teachers can discuss racism and sexism. New Mexico should join these other 26 states in rejecting this Marxist inspired theology and not allow a rulemaking process (which is overseen by an unelected bureaucracy which is likely sympathetic to this ideology) which requires no action by the State Legislature to supersede the will of the majority of New Mexicans who oppose the imposition of CRT-inspired theories upon our students.

We have objections to a significant number of the new proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum Standards, however, the specific items listed below are the most problematic and which demand PED's most careful review to ensure substantial changes or outright eliminations are made:

- In Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies --- Proposed 6.29.11.23(A)(1)(d) and 6.29.11.23(A)(3)(b): These standards require students to assess how social policies and economic forces "offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity..." and investigate how society should address "systemic inequity." Such language is classic CRT as it creates and perpetuates the false premise of so-called privilege and systemic inequity. Rather than teaching division and racism, these standards should focus on unity and establishing a shared commitment to the ideals of equality and opportunity. Further, we would suggest that the entire Ethnic, Cultural and Identity Studies curriculum be scraped and a completely new set of standards be drafted to ensure there is no CRT-inspired theology included in any way.
- For Kindergarten and Other Elementary Grades --- Proposed 6.29.11.8(F)(3)(a), 6.29.11.9(F)(4)(a), and 6.29.11.10(F)(4)(a): These standards encourage kindergarten, first grade and second grade students to "take action" to address local, regional and/or global problems. While this standard may have an altruistic intent, it could result in a situation where these young students are exploited for various political or public policy reasons by adults who want to create the impression their cause is so just that even elementary students support their idea. These young students are highly impressible and their "support" for any effort to address problems can easily be manipulated by teachers and others for their own political/policy benefit. Students who are five, six, or seven years old should never be placed in a situation where they would serve as props in a photo-op organized by activists. These standards should be eliminated.
- Throughout the entire Social Studies curriculum for grades K-8, there are "Anchor Standards" entitled "Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Standards" which create a platform to focus on the differences, rather than the similarities, among various groups of people. It also provides an opportunity, such as in Proposed Standards 6.29.11.11(E)(2), 6.29.11.15(E)(7), and 6.29.11.15(E)(12), for a teacher to impose a singular notion of "justice and fairness," "unequal power relations," and "past and current injustices," although such terms are highly subjective and open to many interpretations. As with many aspects of these curriculum standards under the ethnic, cultural, and identity rubric, this area is rife with mandates that impose a certain set of values and beliefs that are not universally shared by all New Mexicans. Any attempts to lead students towards a specific value system should be completely eliminated from these standards as they can provide students with a biased understanding of complex events.
- High School U.S. History --- Proposed 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(b), 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(f), 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(d), and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(e): Although the stated themes related to these standards are "U.S. Origins" and "Early America: The American Revolution and the Constitution," there are five specific standards whose primary focus is slavery, yet there are no standards on why America fought to gain its independence from England and only two standards regarding the crafting of the U.S. Constitution and its impact on the United States. This "preoccupation" with slavery during the formation of America is consistent with the false assertions of revisionist historians who claim America was founded on the principles of slavery, the so-called 1619 Project. This distorted and absurd assertion has no place in any high school history curriculum, especially when the struggle for religious and economic liberties in early America, as well as why it was essential to extract America from the dictates of a foreign monarch are never considered within the context of these standards. There are numerous other standards within High School U.S. History [Proposed 6.29.11.21(A)(2)(k), 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(f), 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(g), and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(h)] that echo this apparent obsession with slavery as the economic driving force during our nation's westward expansion. It is solely another effort to indoctrinate students with a radicalized social and political agenda.

- High School U.S. History --- Proposed 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(i): This standard calls on students to “evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the U.S.” Such a requirement sounds eerily similar to the principles of CRT in terms of stressing “equity” and “just economic system.” Plus, who gets to define what these terms mean and what specific actions/steps satisfy whatever definition is utilized? Once again, rather than teaching students the principles embedded within our current capitalistic/free enterprise system, there is an obvious effort to encourage students to support some idealistic (socialism) economic system that may never be healthy for the country. This standard should be eliminated and replaced with a standard that provides students with a balanced discussion of the U.S. economic system.
- High School U.S. History --- Proposed 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(m), 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(z), and 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(ll): All of these standards relate to how gender and sexuality norms were changing during Reconstruction and the 1920s, as well as the activism and experiences of the LGBTQIA+ community during 1968 - 2008. We fail to comprehend the rationale for why high school students are required to learn about how gender and sexuality norms were changing during various historical periods and how is this perspective essential to a student's understanding of U.S. history during these two periods. In addition, why does every student have to examine the activities of the LGBTQIA+ community during a 40 year period? If individual students have an interest in LGBTQIA+ history, those students can conduct independent research in those related subjects. However, to require all students to do so, appears to be just another example of trying to mold students towards acceptance of a personal or social agenda that is highly controversial.
- High School U.S. History --- Proposed 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg): As we have shown above, these proposed K-12 Social Studies Standards are filled with examples of students being mandated to learn about a wide range of progressive/liberal ideals and agendas. Yet, maybe the most egregious example of this indoctrination is the standard which requires the examination of past, present, and future gun violence in the U.S. While understanding the relationship between crime and violence is a worthy subject of inquiry, it is not surprising this standard makes no reference to the constitutional rights afforded citizens to bear arms nor is there any discussion required as to how the proliferation of gangs, drug cartels, terrorist organizations, and other criminal enterprises have resulted in more gun violence within our society nor is there any requirement to help students understand that violence is perpetuated by individuals and not inanimate objects. This standard requires an extensive rewrite to ensure students are provided the “full story” on gun violence as noted above.

We assume proponents of these “reworked” proposed Social Studies standards will argue that CRT is not mentioned any place within these standards and that CRT concepts are not being imposed on New Mexico students. We would strongly disagree (as we pointed out in several bullet items listed above) and would respond that, of course, CRT is not explicitly mentioned within the standards as doing so would generate tremendous opposition from countless parents, taxpayers, administrators, and teachers who are opposed to this radical ideology. Further, any explicit reference to CRT would most certainly doom these proposed standard from ever being approved and implemented. However, the continual and not-so-subtle inclusion of various words and phrases, such as “inequity,” “oppression,” “unequal power relations”, “racism,” and “injustice” are implicit admissions by the drafters of these proposed standards that CRT and it’s flawed vision of America is exactly what they are trying to impose through these Social Studies Standards.

Nonetheless, it is not just the CRT references we find objectionable, it is also the overall progressive/liberal slant or bias these standards are clearly designed to impart during the teaching of Social Studies in grades K-12. Within the proposed standards, there are numerous examples of classic progressive/liberal doctrine being promoted and all of these instances need to be either redrafted or eliminated to ensure New Mexico’s students are not subjected to a slanted view of our nation’s/state’s history and how our government and economic systems work. Specific examples include:

- Examine and evaluate the rules, laws, and authorities that keep people “safe” in New Mexico, but, of course, no mention of which rules, laws and authorities that keep New Mexicans “free.” [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.12(A)(1)]
- Describe how inequity in the U.S. laid the foundation for conflict that continues today. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.13(A)(3)(b)]
- Evaluate how society’s responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.15(E)(3)]
- Compare the patterns of exploration, destruction and occupation of the Americas by Spaniards. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.15(D)(3)(g)]
- Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.15(E)(8)]
- Examine how and why diverse groups have been denied equality and opportunity both institutionally and informally. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.16(F)(3)(f)]
- Describe how the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacist organizations in the U.S. arose with the intention of maintaining the oppression of specific groups through informal institutions. Of course, no reference is made in any standard regarding the violence and intimidation provided by radical left groups like Antifa, Black Lives Matter, Weather Underground, The Earth Liberation Front, etc. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.16(D)(5)(c)]
- Demonstrate ability to use relevant historical evidence to synthesize information regarding the impact of nuclear weapons on people around the world. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.20(D)(2)(e)]
- Examine the short- and long-term effects of CIA involvement in Latin America, yet there is no requirement to explain to students how communist rule in Cuba has been negatively impacting that country for decades. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(x)]
- Examine the evolution of McCarthyism from the Red Scare to COINTELPRO. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(aa)]
- Explore the movement against police brutality. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(kk)]
- Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.21(A)(3)(mm)]
- Analyze US government policies to reduce climate disruption. [Proposed Standard 6.29.11.21(A)(4)(t)]

We believe the proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum Standard, in their current form, fail to provide students with a clear and balanced understanding of why the United States of America and the State of New Mexico should be admired for its many positive attributes. Therefore, we strongly urge PED's leadership to make substantial revisions to the proposed K-12 Social Studies Curriculum Standards to ensure our students are provided an opportunity to not only learn the fundamental principles on which our republic was founded, but also gain a respectful appreciation of our country's political and economic systems.

We also concur with the request being made by numerous New Mexico public school districts that the public comment period related to these proposed standards be extended to July 1, 2022 in order to give parents, educators, and other interested citizens sufficient time to review and comprehend the many detailed standards contained in this proposal.

Finally, we also strongly encourage PED to submit these proposed standards to the State Legislature for formal hearings to further expand awareness throughout New Mexico as to what and how students will be taught Social Studies in the years ahead.

Thank you for giving our concerns, comments, and suggestions your most serious consideration.

Respectfully yours,

James G. Townsend
House Republican Leader

Rod Montoya
House Republican Whip

Rebecca Dow
Caucus Chair

Randall S. Crowder
State Representative HD 64

Alonzo Baldonado
State Representative HD 8

Ryan T. Lane
State Representative HD 3

Candy Spence Ezzell
State Representative HD 58

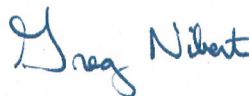

Cathrynn N. Brown
State Representative HD 55

Martin Zamora
State Representative HD 63

Rachael A. Black
State Representative HD 51

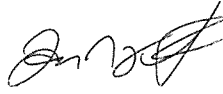

Greg Nibert
State Representative HD 59

Randall T. Pettigrew
State Representative HD 61

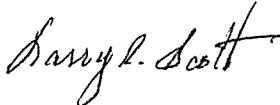

Gail Armstrong
State Representative HD 49

James R.J. Strickler
State Representative HD 2

Jack Chatfield
State Representative HD 67

Larry Scott
State Representative HD 62

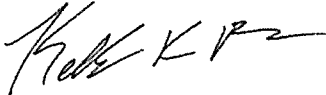

William R. Rehm
State Representative HD 31

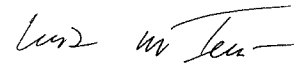

Jane E. Powdrell-Culbert
State Representative HD 44

Stefani Lord
State Representative HD 22

Kelly K. Fajardo
State Representative HD 7

Luis M. Terrazas
State Representative HD 39

Zachary J. Cook
State Representative HD 56

Joshua Hernandez
State Representative HD 60

Jason C. Harper
State Representative HD 57

[EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT on PED PROPOSED SOCIAL STUDIES STANDARDS

Njeri Nuru-Holm <n.nuru-holm@csuohio.edu>

Tue 11/9/2021 1:20 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Lou Levin <loulevin@yahoo.com>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Policy Division and All Whom It May Concern:

Thank you for your excellent work to update the Social Studies Curriculum for the State of New Mexico, which was last revised in 2009. Thank you also for the opportunity to provide the Public Education Department (PED) with public comment on the key document Proposed Social Studies Standards (PSSS) for the State of New Mexico. As a retired faculty member and university vice president, I understand and have seen first hand the result of k-12 education on the academic and social preparedness and wellbeing of students entering the diverse collegiate environment. I now serve on the Executive Committee and the Education Committee of the Santa Fe Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). We have thoroughly studied and generally endorse and applaud the proposed new standards, which are designed to prepare all New Mexico children for success as responsible citizens in our highly diverse state, nation and world.

This past weekend a resolution in support of the PED PSSS was approved at the 70th Annual Conference of the New Mexico NAACP. That resolution is the result of focused hours and days of reading, research and deliberation at the Branch and State levels. Thank you, in advance, for considering that resolution, which you will receive under separate cover.

In addition, detailed editorial comments are being sent to you from the Santa Fe NAACP and from several of our members. All of our comments are intended to further strengthen the very good PED PSSS document. My individual editorial comments and recommendations appear below, and are organized by grade to facilitate your consideration.

First Grade

Theme 1. 1.8. At end of sentence add "across cultures".

Theme 2. 1.13. Insert "...effects on diverse local..."

Fourth Grade

Theme 5. 4.24 Insert "...why diverse individuals..."

Fifth Grade

Theme 4. 5.27 Insert at end of sentence "...territories and how the U.S. acquired those territories..."

Theme 5. 5.30 I think "in main identity groups" is nebulous. Specification needed.

Theme 5. 5.31 Insert "...how diverse groups"

Sixth Grade

Theme 2. 6.29 Delete "the" before people.

Theme 6. 6.51 Insert "...exchanges with diverse groups..."

Theme 6. 6.54 Insert "...between diverse groups and..."

Seventh Grade

- 7.11 At end of sentence add ", including race, gender, disability, national origin"
- Theme 1. 7.14 (Is voting access implicit in "voting"?)
- Theme 1. 7.20 Insert "...to define the cultural and economic demographics of..."
- Theme 1. 7.24 Modify "...activities, resources, progress and sustainability."
- Theme 1. 7.25 At end of sentence add "for diverse groups"
- Theme 4. 7.58 Insert "...political, economic and..."
- Theme 5. 7.70 Change "culture" to plural "cultures".
- Theme 6. 7.78 Delete ")" after "the area"
- Theme 7. 7.86 Change "movement" to "migration"???

Eighth Grade

- 8.12. Insert "...groups and individuals have..."
- 8.13. Insert "...multiple and diverse viewpoints..."
- 8.21. Insert "which negative stereotyping..."
- 8.22. Insert "...opportunities diverse people..."
- Theme 1. 8.27 Insert "...human characteristics and..."
- Theme 4. Change "...by the role of religion..." to "by religion"
- Theme 5. 8.56 Insert "...narratives and whose rights were..."
- Theme 6. 8.61 At end of sentence add "and slave narratives".
- Theme 7. 8.67 Insert to begin sentence with "Describe the institution of slavery and indentured servitude and identify..." unless this should be included under Theme 8.
- Theme 8. 8.71 Insert "...general, the US Civil War, and..."
- Theme 8. 8.76 Is this where a student should understand the Underground Railroad or might that that be included under 8.79?
- Theme 9. 8.79 Insert at end of sentence ", including Jim Crow laws."
- Theme 9. 8.80 Insert "...people and groups may..."
- Theme 9. 8.83 Insert "...the historical, contemporary..."

HSCivics

- 9-12.Civ.36. Insert "...greater intercultural understanding..."

HS Economics

- 9-12.Econ.17. Insert "...their individual and group economic..."
- 9-12.Econ.25. Insert "...trends, policies and practices impact..."
- 9-12.Econ.41. Insert at end of sentence "living across diverse groups."

HS New Mexico History

- 9-12.NMH.11. Insert "...regional, national, and..."
- 9-12.Theme 6. NMH.47 and 48. Something is wrong here. Should this be a single sentence?

HS U.S. History

- Theme 14. 9-12.US.128. I think the official title is Americans with Disabilities Act. Please double check. I suggest that U.S. History should include: identify and analyze major trends, issues and advances in health care and health disparities past, present and future (e.g. access, experimentation w/o consent, and social, economic and health care disparities).

HS World History

No changes

Thank you, again, for the opportunity to provide public comment on the Proposed Social Studies Standards (PSSS) for the State of New Mexico. Education of our children is the best investment we can make with the highest return for our future.

Sincerely,

Njeri Nuru-Holm, Ph.D.
Santa Fe NAACP
Executive Committee
Education Committee

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] New SS Standards

Shonnie Standefer <shonnie@yucca.net>

Tue 11/9/2021 1:36 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr John Sena,

I am a retired New Mexico public educator and I have stood up for, and defended public education over the years time and time again. If these new social studies standards are adopted for our New Mexico students, I will know longer stand up for public education here in New Mexico. In fact, I will encourage parents to either homeschool or send their children to a private or Christian school to protect them from this propaganda and brainwashing that is very apparent in these new social studies standards. Schools should be places where parents send their children to be EDUCATED not indoctrinated!

I'm so embarrassed that New Mexico is LAST in the states in education, but instead of focusing on improving education and giving students the tools they need to be successful and productive adults, we are going to brainwash them so that our country can be more divided than it is today! What a crime against our children! DO NOT ALLOW THE GARBAGE FROM THESE NEW SS STANDARDS TO INFILTRATE OUR SCHOOLS AND THE MINDS OF OUR CHILDREN!

Sincerely,

Shonnie Standefer
Portales, NM

[EXTERNAL] Feedback

Noel Nunez <nnunez@cesarchavezcharterhs.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 1:48 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (13 KB)

Social Studies Feedback.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Good Afternoon,
Here is my feedback.
Sincerely,

Noel Núñez
Director
Deming Cesar Chavez Charter High School
315 E. 1st Street
Deming, New Mexico 88030
Work (575) 544-8404
Fax (575) 544-8755

Mr. John Sena
Policy Director
New Mexico Public Education Department
300 Don Gaspar, Rm 121
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Dear Mr. Sena:

My name is Noel Núñez and I am the Executive Director at Deming Cesar Chavez Charter School. I support the Public Education Department's proposed update to the New Mexico Social Studies Standards. The inclusion of Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies will provide for a more inclusive and of the Inquiry strand to promote higher level thinking.

As a school leader, it is vital to teach equity to our students while simultaneously allowing students to connect to their personal identities. As equity continues to be a priority for all, I support that these standards are reflective beginning in Kindergarten and moving through 12th grade as it is important to teach students to continually connect and develop their identities as they themselves develop.

The addition of inquiry standards allows our students to reach a higher standard of critical thinking as they move along through their educational careers. As can be seen in the standards, allowing students to identify biases while using primary and secondary sources, we are teaching our students to develop their own views and make connections to real-time, real-world events and issues. This provides alignment with common core standards and will enrich our students learning for more of the school day.

I believe these standards are a significant upgrade to those currently in place and provide much needed inclusion and rigor. I would again like to reiterate my support of these standards and look forward to implementing them in the upcoming years

Best Regards,

Noel Núñez

[EXTERNAL] New NM Social Studies Standards/Curriculum

Susan E Kingston <skingsto@bu.edu>

Tue 11/9/2021 1:57 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>; Susan E Kingston <skingsto@bu.edu>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear Mr. Sena
Policy Division
New Mexico Public Education Department,

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the current proposal of new Social Studies Standards/Curriculum for New Mexico students.

As a former junior high, high school, and university teacher, I AM VERY SUPPORTIVE of the new curriculum, the first revision in 20 years. The investment of time and effort by expert educators from across the state and nation is impressive. The resulting curriculum, with its emphasis on historical themes such as "power, class conflict, social justice" and "divergence from a singular Eurocentric script" is encouraging. Our students need the intellectual tools and historic context to make wise and informed decisions about the future of our democracy.

I strongly support the adoption of this new and promising social studies curriculum.

Sincerely,
Susan L. Kingston
MA/ University of Chicago
Fulbright Scholar/University of London

[EXTERNAL] K-12 Social Studies Standards

Louis Knowles <louknowles47@hotmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:11 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Friends: I cannot say I have read all of this material, but I am clear that I support the effort to update social studies to reflect both the bad and the good of American history. For too long, we have avoided coming to terms with the toxic legacy of slavery and racial discrimination. Every decade new information comes to light about racist practices and incidents that were carefully hidden from view for a long time. Our children need to be taught the truth about what has taken place in order that they may better understand the calls for reparations and affirmative action programs.

Given that there is a great deal of opposition to changing the standards, perhaps you should consider a longer period for comments. Maybe every legislator could be called on to hold discussions in their district in an effort to clarify a lot of misunderstandings that are promulgated by right wing media outlets.

As the parent of two high school students in Albuquerque public schools, I share the widespread concern about the quality of education now being provided. However, I disagree with the idea that we should go back or stand still in our social studies curricula. Rather, we should move ahead to give our children an education that will prepare them to live and prosper in a very diverse country where many groups have felt the pain of discrimination and racism.

Sincerely,

Rev Dr Louis L Knowles,
3428 Parsifal St Ne
Albuquerque NM 87111

cell: 646 370 0621

[EXTERNAL] Citizen Feedback on the Social Studies Standard

Suzey Gao <snlgao2020@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:12 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Erik Olson <erolson@uwalumni.com>

📎 1 attachments (557 KB)

Feedback_to_PED_on_Social_Study_Standards.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Dear PED members,

My name is Suzey Gao. I am a U.S. citizen living in Albuquerque and have young children who are attending K-12 schools. I have spent many hours reading through the proposed New Mexico Social Studies Standard. As a parent, I found many proposed topics are absolutely embedded with the Critical Race Theory ideologies. Below I am listing all the CRT related topics (red text) and my comments (blue text) to remove these poisonous topics from indoctrinating all the children. The comments are also attached as a pdf file. Please consider these changes. We the parents have the right to participate in deciding what topics to be taught to our children at Public Schools. Remember PED and Public schools are funded by our tax dollars.

Thanks,
Suzey

Citizen's Feedback on New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Red texts are from the draft of New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Blue texts are citizen's feedback.

1.12. Examine and identify cultural differences within a community.

→ Why do we want to emphasize differences to divide young kids (1st graders)? It's good to recognize different cultures in a community, but the emphasis should be that, no matter what cultural background we come from, we are all proud American citizens.

5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

→ This is a classic example to indoctrinate children about the ideology of communism, because a teacher can teach children about getting equity without hard work but free distribution of wealth. There may be significant inequity in the US history. However, this has changed in today's US. Today, US is the land of free. All people are born equal and have the right and ability of pursuing individual success, liberty, and happiness. What about "Describe how inequity in the US laid the foundation for conflict in US history and how people have the right and ability of pursuing individual success, liberty, and happiness in today's US granted by U.S. Constitution?

7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.

→ This “unequal power” concept is classic ideology of the Critical Race Theory (CRT). What about focusing on “Demonstrate how diversity impacts the development of group identities and cultures”?

7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.

→ Though this “past and current injustices” concept is up to interpretation, it can also be a recipe to indoctrinate young kids about hatred and division, which are classical ideology of the CRT. This should be removed completely.

8.20. Identify facets of personal identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

→ This again divides people into different identity groups, which is the classical ideology of CRT. We need to stop dividing people according to their identities. People should not be judged or divided by their identities. What about focusing on “Discuss the importance of personal responsibility and integrity irrespective of a person's identity”?

8.83. Use an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.

→ This appears to encourage the transgender ideology to indoctrinate the young generation. Please stop indoctrinating the young generation with this unnatural ideology. This should be removed completely.

9-12.Civ.15. Evaluate efforts to adapt and redesign the U.S. Constitution and political institutions over time.

→ This is definitely the radical left's ideology because they hate U.S. Constitution. The radical left does not want we the people to have freedom and rights. For we the people, the U. S. Constitution ensures our individual freedom and rights. The U. S. Constitution is what our Founding Fathers lost their lives to fight for. The PED (Public Education Department) appears to want to teach our next generation to reject/hate the U.S. Constitution. It's completely un-American. We should be focusing on “Discuss how the U.S. Constitution protects the freedom and rights of we the people and how to ensure the U.S. Constitution to prevail”.

9-12.US.129. Explore the movement against police brutality

→ This is definitely part of the radical left's “defund the police” agenda. This “police brutality” ideology is to stop law and order and let criminals be in charge of the law-abiding citizens' lives. Please stop teaching this harmful ideology. Police officers are here to protect law and order and the safety of law-abiding citizens. We should be “Discuss the importance of law and order and the service and sacrifice of police force”.

9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.

→ This is a great assault on our 2nd Amendment right. Once we the people have no guns, we will be in the communism regime 100%. We are currently witnessing what is happening to the people in Australia after their guns were taken away. Gun violence does not come from the law-abiding citizens, but come from ill-minded people and/or criminals. The criminals can always get guns through black markets.

9-12.US.135. Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans.

→ This is again the classic CRT ideology. This is to indoctrinate our children that the U.S. is unjust and unequal, which is completely false. The U. S. is the land of free where we are all born equal and any person has the right and ability to pursue individual success, liberty, and happiness, irrespective of their identity. Please stop such divisive indoctrination.

9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.

9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups

→ This again teaches division and inequity, part of the CRT ideology.

9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

→ The “privilege or systemic inequity” is absolutely the CRT ideology. This will definitely indoctrinate our children that U.S. has systemic racism and certain race privilege, which is completely poisonous. All kids are NOT racist until they are taught so. Please stop teaching this poison to our kids. This should be removed completely.

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

→ This “systemic inequity” is absolutely part of the CRT ideology. This implies that the U. S. has systemic inequity, which is completely false. As commented above, the U. S. is the land of free where we are all born equal and any person has the right and ability to pursue individual success, liberty, and happiness, irrespective of their identity. Please stop such divisive indoctrination.

Citizen's Feedback on New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Red texts are from the draft of New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Blue texts are citizen's feedback.

1.12. Examine and identify cultural differences within a community.

- Why do we want to emphasize differences to divide young kids (1st graders)? It's good to recognize different cultures in a community, but the emphasis should be that, no matter what cultural background we come from, we are all proud American citizens.

5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

- This is a classic example to indoctrinate children about the ideology of communism, because a teacher can teach children about getting equity without hard work but free distribution of wealth. There may be significant inequity in the US history. However, this has changed in today's US. Today, US is the land of free. All people are born equal and have the right and ability of pursuing individual success, liberty, and happiness. What about "Describe how inequity in the US laid the foundation for conflict in US history and how people have the right and ability of pursuing individual success, liberty, and happiness in today's US granted by U.S. Constitution?"

7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.

- This "unequal power" concept is classic ideology of the Critical Race Theory (CRT). What about focusing on "Demonstrate how diversity impacts the development of group identities and cultures"?

7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.

- Though this "past and current injustices" concept is up to interpretation, it can also be a recipe to indoctrinate young kids about hatred and division, which are classical ideology of the CRT. This should be removed completely.

8.20. Identify facets of personal identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

- This again divides people into different identity groups, which is the classical ideology of CRT. We need to stop dividing people according to their identities. People should not be judged or divided by their identities. What about focusing on “Discuss the importance of personal responsibility and integrity irrespective of a person’s identity”?

8.83. Use an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.

- This appears to encourage the transgender ideology to indoctrinate the young generation. Please stop indoctrinating the young generation with this unnatural ideology. This should be removed completely.

9-12.Civ.15. Evaluate efforts to adapt and redesign the U.S. Constitution and political institutions over time.

- This is definitely the radical left’s ideology because they hate U.S. Constitution. The radical left does not want we the people to have freedom and rights. For we the people, the U. S. Constitution ensures our individual freedom and rights. The U. S. Constitution is what our Founding Fathers lost their lives to fight for. The PED (Public Education Department) appears to want to teach our next generation to reject/hate the U.S. Constitution. It’s completely un-American. We should be focusing on “Discuss how the U.S. Constitution protects the freedom and rights of we the people and how to ensure the U.S. Constitution to prevail”.

9-12.US.129. Explore the movement against police brutality

- This is definitely part of the radical left’s “defund the police” agenda. This “police brutality” ideology is to stop law and order and let criminals be in charge of the law-abiding citizens’ lives. Please stop teaching this harmful ideology. Police officers are here to protect law and order and the safety of law-abiding citizens. We should be “Discuss the importance of law and order and the service and sacrifice of police force”.

9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.

- This is a great assault on our 2nd Amendment right. Once we the people have no guns, we will be in the communism regime 100%. We are currently witnessing what is happening to the people in Australia after their guns were taken away. Gun violence does not come from the law-abiding citizens, but come from ill-minded people and/or criminals. The criminals can always get guns through black markets.

9-12.US.135. Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans.

→ This is again the classic CRT ideology. This is to indoctrinate our children that the U.S. is unjust and unequal, which is completely false. The U. S. is the land of free where we are all born equal and any person has the right and ability to pursue individual success, liberty, and happiness, irrespective of their identity. Please stop such divisive indoctrination.

9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.

9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups

→ This again teaches division and inequity, part of the CRT ideology.

9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

→ The “privilege or systemic inequity” is absolutely the CRT ideology. This will definitely indoctrinate our children that U.S. has systemic racism and certain race privilege, which is completely poisonous. All kids are NOT racist until they are taught so. Please stop teaching this poison to our kids. This should be removed completely.

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

→ This “systemic inequity” is absolutely part of the CRT ideology. This implies that the U. S. has systemic inequity, which is completely false. As commented above, the U. S. is the land of free where we are all born equal and any person has the right and ability to pursue individual success, liberty, and happiness, irrespective of their identity. Please stop such divisive indoctrination.

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Christine Dubois <c.dubois@laschools.net>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:19 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I have some major concerns about the proposed Social Studies standards. For reference, I am a 6th grade teacher and responsible for teaching Social Studies to all 6th graders at my school. Currently, I have no curriculum from which to teach Social Studies. Everything I use is something I created, found online, or bought from sources like Teachers Pay Teachers. The current standards are already difficult to teach without a curriculum. I can't fathom teaching these new standards without a formal curriculum.

Concerns:

First, there are 54 proposed Social Studies standards for 6th grade. To put that into perspective, there are 48 Common Core State Standards for math in 6th grade. Teachers are always provided a curriculum from which to teach these math standards. 54 proposed Social Studies standards is just way too many; it will mean that nothing can be taught in depth or to an extent that could produce real understanding in our students. The thought of somehow teaching 54 standards without a curriculum is incredibly daunting.

My second major concern comes from the complete lack of curriculum, professional development, and emphasis that our state has placed on Social Studies since I began teaching 8 years ago. Unless these new standards come to us WITH a curriculum, they will be nearly impossible to teach. Some of them are so niche that they could be a thesis to a college level dissertation. I don't have the background knowledge to teach students about "the distribution of resources among classes in the feudal hierarchy of European and Asian societies (Standard 6.41)". A quick Google Search of those key terms returned ONLY college level sources from which to get this information from. That means that I would have to read and interpret college level history classes in order to teach this one standard to my 6th grade students. I will never have the time to do this. And unless these standards come with a pacing guide, I will be left clueless about how to sequence the standards and how long to spend on each of them. Without a curriculum, most of these standards are useless to me and my students.

I think some of the standards are fantastic; I love that students would get to study their own identities and family culture. I am thrilled that there is emphasis placed on using primary and secondary sources. But the rest of the standards ping-pong between being incredibly niche and complex, to overwhelmingly vague. Take standard 6.20 for example: "Identify how differences and similarities between diverse groups impact perspectives." Which groups? During which time period? What perspectives? I don't have any idea of how I would begin to teach this.

In general, I agree that the Social Studies standards need updating. I do not think we need 54 standards in 6th grade, and I do not think teachers are equipped to teach the standards as they are written. If the state is to move forward in adopting these standards, they MUST provide all teachers with a curriculum. Do not expect teachers to create resources in order to teach these standards; nobody will benefit from that, least of all our students. Place emphasis on giving Social Studies teachers professional development; in the same way that Science teachers get training each year. Teach us to teach these standards, give us a curriculum, and narrow down the scope of the standards. Choose quality over quantity!

Thank you for reading,

--

Christine DuBois, M.Ed.

6th Grade Teacher

Aspen Elementary

Aspen Learning Resources

Ms. Christine's Page

Confidentiality Notice: This e-mail, including all attachments is for the sole use of the intended recipients and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message.

This email has been sent from a verified laschools.net user.

[EXTERNAL] CRT in schools

ERNEST HARPER <ernieordoris@comcast.net>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:39 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I know the argument is that what is proposed is not "CRT". However, as a lifelong citizen of NM, I want my reps to know that under no circumstances is CRT or anything similiar acceptable in our school system. I graduated from Western High School (Silver City), NMSU (BSEE), and UNM (MSEE).

Stick to the facts and teach children to think for themselves. We are all created equal and equally loved by our Heavenly Father. What we become has nothing to do with inequities, oppression, unequal power, racism, etc. Instead it has everything to do with effort and hard work.

Respectfully, Ernest M. Harper, lifelong NMexican

[EXTERNAL] PED Social Studies Proposal

Linda Yates <linnie26@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:53 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To the PED of New Mexico;

I have done some research on the proposed changes and additions to the Social Studies curriculum in the State of New Mexico. I certainly can say that I do not understand all of the proposed changes.

I see some of the recommendations are reasonable but when I see the 'identity' and 'group think' focus being promoted I find it very dismaying. I think critical thinking is important to make good informed decisions. I do not think CriticalThink based on race or identity has any place in our schools.

Why the emphasis on our differences?. We belong to the human RACE. Dividing us into groups actually weakens us and pits us against each other.

Should we know our history? Of course. Should we focus only on injustices, perceived or not? To bring divisiveness into our children's lives is an insult to every American who strives to be honest, hard working and fair.

Regarding Power vs Oppression. Who is trying to gain power here? If we are divided there will be strife and a new power will manifest itself. Who will be the powerful then? Who will be the oppressed?

Unless it is the Power of God there will be oppression.

The children of New Mexico deserve a better education than they are getting now. I do not believe this change will cause the proficiency in the basics to improve. Please focus on reading, math and science skills. Make our schools better!

Linda Stoller Yates

[EXTERNAL] Proposed Social Studies Standards, public comment, opposed to CRT aka Community Equity building

Jodi Feuille <jodifeuille@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:54 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a parent of two elementary students in RRPS, I whole-heartedly am opposed to the teaching and promotion of critical race theory (aka "equity" lessons/ Possibly disguised as Anchor Standard 21 Community Equity Building.) I am opposed to other forms of government-sanctioned or NMPED-facilitated racism in our school district and ask that you uphold the foundational American principle that all people are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with unalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

I ask that you please further explain your Community Equity Building curriculum in your meeting and in writing to all parents of enrolled public school age children.

And that time will be allotted for discussion to provide parents, guardians, and residents with a meaningful opportunity to participate, review, and provide input on any of your clarified proposed guidelines relating to diversity, equity, or inclusion training for school district employees.

The tenets of "critical race theory" (disguised as Equity building) undermine a free society and sound education and otherwise exacerbate and inflame divisions on the basis of sex, race, ethnicity, religion, color, national origin, or other criteria in ways contrary to the unity of the nation, the founding principles of the nation, and the well-being of the citizens of New Mexico.

I know the following to be true and do not believe should be incorporated into our children's education curriculum:

"CRT /aka Equity" teaches or promotes that social problems are created by racist or patriarchal societal structures and systems, espouses the view that one race is inherently racist, sexist, or intentionally or inadvertently oppressive, espouses the view that one race is inherently responsible for the intentional or inadvertent oppression of another race; and it promotes that one's race or sex is superior to another race or sex, and that a person should be discriminated against because of the race or sex attributed to them or be treated differently based on that classification; and

"Critical Race Theory /aka Equity" promotes a person's moral character is determined by the race or sex attributed to them; and it teaches the race or sex attributed to a person makes them responsible for past transgressions of that race or sex, that a person would feel discomfort, guilt, anguish, or any other form of psychological, physical, or any other kind of distress on account of the race or sex attributed to them, and that the work ethic or devotion to duty and obligations is inherently racist.

None of this nonsense above should be pushed on our children. If it is, we will be withdrawing our children from NM public education for good as will MANY like-minded parents, from all races. Thanks for allowing my input.

--

Jodi Feuille
Parent of Sandia Vista Elementary students

Resident of Rio Rancho, NM
512.659.2201 ph

[EXTERNAL] NM Social Study Standards

Karl Kiser <ksquared77@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 2:56 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello,

Social Study standards are periodically modified. The current proposed revisions have a strong equity focus and provide a more accurate view of US history. However there exists a group of people who find the revisions threatening and loudly protest these standards.

I reject this viewpoint and strongly support the new standards. We must show that all our history is not good and contains significant warts. Many older historical narratives literally whitewash actual facts and perpetuate stereotypes and racism. This must stop.

Regards,

Karl Kiser

PS

My ethnic background is western European. I have ancestors who owned slaves and fought for Virginia in the Civil War. I feel no guilt for the actions of my ancestors but I also do not view many of their actions in a favorable light.

[EXTERNAL] RE: New Social Studies Standards

Tiffany Abbott <tiffhamedu@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 3:02 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Whom It May Concern:

As a parent, an educator as well as a community member, and a life long resident of New Mexico, I do NOT support the proposed changes to the NM Social Studies Standards.

The repetition and the focus on identity and groups especially for the primary grades is worrisome. The new standards are either overly ambiguous by design, with no measurable way to mark progress or growth, or overly stated, (not a standard but actual assignments). One would have to review the materials that would accompany these standards in order to get a whole view of what is going to be asked of the students and how these standards are to be implemented, this is being rushed through without thinking of the impact. New Mexican kids are still struggling due to learning loss from the disruptions during 2019/2020 and 2020/21 school years, is now really the time to add more onto the plates of the teaching staff?

And a word on equity, since it was mentioned so many times in your standards - is it equitable to hold this "public hearing" during a time when the people most affected by this (teaching staff, administration, families) are working or unavailable? Furthermore, is it equitable to change said "public hearing" from an in person to an online platform, via zoom knowing that many New Mexicans have limited resources when it comes to technology and internet access -- What were the results from the the survey collecting information about internet and device access for students sent our this September 2021 yield? One would wonder exactly how equitable your decision to hold this online actually is.

I would like to reiterate that I do NOT support the proposed changes to the NM Social Studies Standards.

Tiffany Abbott
Edgewood, NM

[EXTERNAL] History and Civics that reflect the history of All our Citizens

Linda Tratechaud <lindamaetratechaud@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 3:50 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To Educators and Policy Makers,

I am a 59 year old product of the Albuquerque Public School system. I graduated in 1980 with a solid education based on what happened to white males over the previous several centuries. Everyone else was peripheral, including women!

When I got to college, I wondered why there needed to be "Women's History", "African American History", and "Chicano History". I thought, "Isn't History just History?" I didn't know, what I didn't know, and what I didn't know was A Lot!

Even as a college educated person, I didn't know about the rise and then demise of African American's during Reconstruction. I only learned about the Tulsa Massacre a few years ago. These are Very recent parts of our history that are again playing themselves out in a current rising culture of racism.

I've learned more about the complexities of our Countries History from Louis Gates Jr and Ken Burns on PBS than I ever did in my biased education. As well, I have read more books about and by indigenous and people of color since the murder of George Floyd. It is difficult to hear about ugly parts of our collected History, but unless we face the more challenging and unacceptable parts of our History, we will never heal and grow to be the great Country that we can be for all Americans.

I support New Mexico ditching the biased Texas textbooks and teaching New Mexican children history that is age appropriate And truthful. A history that includes the stories of all people—after all—that is what makes our Country so rich and unique. Let New Mexico be a leader in Education and not allow fear and fakery to take the lead.

Sincerely,

Linda Tratechaud-Doezema

LindaMaeTratechaud@gmail.com

LindaMaeTratechaud.com

Sent from my iPad

[EXTERNAL] CRT Public Policy

Charlene Wetzel <charlenewetzel@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 4:09 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Mr. Sena:

I pay taxes and I do not want my tax dollars to support this Un- American indoctrination of children in America. Childrens' values should come from their parents -NOT Government.

Note: when I went to school we started each day with the Pledge of Allegiance, and the Lords' Prayer. And teachers had paddles. Students had a dress code. We operated from Respect. I attended an inter-city school -we- looked at the content of the character -not the color of someones' skin. Racism is anti God.

The goal of Critical Race Theory isn't just the takeover of your school district. The goal is a Race-based Socialist State. The takeover of the students' minds is a means to an end. Race-based Socialism.

Critical race theory (CRT) makes race the lens through which its proponents analyze all aspects of American life. CRT underpins identity politics, an ongoing effort to reimagine the United States as a nation driven by racial groups, each with specific claims on victimization. Ultimately, CRT weakens the public and private bonds that create trust and allow for civic engagement.

Critical race theory (CRT) is a descendent of critical theory (CT), a school of philosophy that began in Frankfurt, Germany, in the 1920s and 1930s at the University of Frankfurt's Institute for Social Research. It became known as "the Frankfurt School." It was one of the first, if not the first, Western Marxist schools patterned after the Marx–Engels Institute in Moscow.

- Teachers should use instructional content that creates a shared sense of national identity, teaching that America belongs to all Americans, and that this nation and its progress is worth celebrating
- Teachers should impart the foundational principles of this country: intrinsic equality of all humans, equal protection under the law, liberty, self-reliance, and hard work; teach history impartially, with differing views considered in a balanced, non-politicized curriculum; and explain how government works at different levels, and how a citizen can affect the workings of government.

Regards,

Charlene Wetzel
10732 Galaxia Pk Dr NW
Albuquerque ,NM 87114

[EXTERNAL] Comment on Proposed Social Studies Standards

Jim Jackson <nmpajacksonj@yahoo.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 4:26 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

My name is Jim Jackson and I have been a resident of New Mexico for 50 years. I write in strong support of the proposed standards for Social Studies in New Mexico public schools. It is important that all of our students, K through 12, learn about and understand the diversity as well as the commonalities of our society and our state in a manner that is appropriate to their grade level and maturity.

When national news coverage recently highlighted the “boarding home” policy that ripped so many Native American children from their homes and communities, this seems to have come as news (in the sense of a surprise) to many people – because few if any people learned about this in school. Should we continue to pretend this never happened? Should we not mention it in school because someone might feel guilty about it? Isn't it better to have today's students learn what happened and discuss how it might have affected (and may still affect today) attitudes and behavior?

It is unfortunate that this issue has become so politicized and turned in to such a divisive issue by those who criticize the proposed standards as "divisive". This proposed approach to our history and society is not “divisive”. If we want to recognize, encourage and accept diversity in our multi-cultural state, we need to acknowledge and discuss history and the different impact that our public policies and social behavior have had on different communities. Students (and their families) don't need to “feel guilty” about what has happened in the past, and the new proposed standards are certainly not intended to make or encourage them to feel that way.

I encourage the PED to accept the thoughtful recommendations of the group that developed the proposed standards and adopt them as drafted.

Jim Jackson

[EXTERNAL] BAN CRT!!!!!!!!!!!!

cao holly <caoholly@hotmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 4:39 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Citizen's Feedback on New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Red texts are from the draft of New Mexico Social Studies Standards

Blue texts are my feedback.

1.12. Examine and identify cultural differences within a community.

→ Why do you want to emphasize differences instead of common ground? we are all proud American citizens.

5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.

→ This is a classic example to indoctrinate children about the ideology of communism, because a teacher can teach children about getting equity without hard work but free distribution of wealth. There may be significant inequity in the US history. However, this has greatly changed in today's US. Today, US is the land of free. All people are born with equal opportunities.

7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.

→ We support "diversity" based on people's talents, thoughts, culture background etc... not on skin color or race because people have no choice when they were born. Using skin color and race to divide people you are ACTUALLY a racist!!!

7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.

→ What is your definition of "injustice"? We, American citizens, should all abide by law. NO ONE is above law!!

8.20. Identify facets of personal identity, determine how they want to present themselves to the world as a person belonging to an identity group, and brainstorm how to address negative perceptions.

→ Stop dividing people using their identities. Again it promotes division and hatred!!

8.83. Use an artistic medium or multimedia project to describe the contemporary and current significance of Juneteenth.

→ I, as first Asian generation of legal immigrant, know about the history as well as discrimination of the Chinese, Japanese Americans. Their histories should be equally addressed!!!

I love Dr. King's speech "I have a dream". America, one of the most diverse countries in the world has progressed greatly since the Civil Rights movement. Many people of color were elected into public office, even U.S President!!!

9-12.Civ.15. Evaluate efforts to adapt and redesign the U.S. Constitution and political institutions over time.

→ This is definitely the radical left's ideology because they hate U.S. Constitution. The radical left does not want we the people to have freedom and rights. The NMPED tries to teach our next generation to hate this country and the U.S. Constitution. It's completely un-American. We should be focusing on "Discuss how the U.S. Constitution protects the freedom and rights of we the people and how to ensure the U.S. Constitution prevail".

BTW, this is NOT the appropriate purpose of using taxpayers' money.

9-12.US.129. Explore the movement against police brutality

→ This is definitely part of the radical left's "defund the police" agenda. This "police brutality" ideology is to encourage crimes and let criminals roam on the street, our neighborhood. Police officers are here to enforce law and order and protect law-abiding citizens. We should teach our kids to RESPECT law enforcement officers!!!

9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.

→ This is a great assault on our 2nd Amendment right. Gun violence does NOT come from the law-abiding citizens. How the criminals/illegals get guns? The investigation should be done on that.

9-12.US.135. Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans.

→ This is to indoctrinate our children to hate our great country! The U. S. is the land of free where we are all born equal and any person has the equal opportunities to pursue individual success, liberty, and happiness, irrespective of their identity.

9-12.WH.36. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.

9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups

→ This country provides equal opportunity for all. Equal opportunity does not mean equal outcome!!!

We as parents, should encourage our kids to study hard, work hard, have strong work ethic, instead of blaming failure to their identities. Parents are their children's first teachers and responsible parents should teach their children the value of hard work.

9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.

→ The “privilege or systemic inequity” is used to divide people. This will definitely indoctrinate our children that U.S. has systemic racism and certain race privilege, which is completely poisonous. All kids are NOT racist until they are taught so.

This SHOULD be removed completely.

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

→ Again the CRT ideology uses identity, systemi inequity to label and divide people . If this country has systemic inequity, can you explain how Obama was elected President TWICE and so many black peopel were elected into public offices?

The proponents of CRT stands for fear and for indoctrination. They aruge against free speech and critical thinking. They aim to shut down conversation. They are proponents of toxic Marxism and segretating divisiveness.

We believe in freedom of speech, freedom of thoughts and freedom for parents to hold the responsibility of teaching morality to their children. We belive that skin color, race and ethnicity should have NO bearing on our laws or on individual achievement.

[EXTERNAL] Rule 6.29.11 NMAC Social Studies Public Comment

Johnnie S. Cain <jcain@portalesschools.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 4:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

Cc: Steinhaus, Kurt, PED <Kurt.Steinhaus@state.nm.us>; Warniment, Gwen, PED <Gwen.Warniment@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (4 MB)

Social Studies Comments Final.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Please accept the comments of the Portales Municipal School Board of Education in regards to the proposed Social Studies Standards.

Comments are attached.

--

Johnnie S. Cain
Superintendent
Portales Municipal Schools
501 S. Abilene
Portales, NM 88130
(575) 356-7000

To: Kurt Steinhaus, Secretary Designate, New Mexico Public Education Department

From: Portales Municipal School Board of Education

Re: New Mexico Proposed Social Studies Standards

Date: November 8, 2021

The Portales School Board of Education respectfully submits the following comments to the Public Education Department during its rule making process for the proposed Social Studies Standards. In preparing these comments administrators met with district social studies teachers who provided suggestions they felt would be beneficial. The Portales School Board of Education held a public work-session on October 18, 2021 in which community members, administrators, parents, students, and teachers were invited to review and comment on the proposed standard. Board members, administrators, and community members provided suggestions that are included in the comments that follow.

Overarching Concerns:

Over the past many years, New Mexico has worked to create an inclusive state made up of diverse peoples, cultures, races, and identities. Teachers have worked to ensure that all students regardless of their differences were taught to respect and include everyone. Many of the proposed standards tend to force students to separate themselves or identify as different or into different groups. Although people are made up of different groups, cultures, races and identities, forcing early elementary school students to make these distinctions in kindergarten, first, second, or third grade is not appropriate and may possibly create animosity between these so-called identity or affinity groups prior to students really understanding these differences. Questions of culture, race, ethnicity, or other identities should be addressed by parents with their children in the early years of elementary school. Differences, although should be acknowledged if broached by students, should not be something they begin to identify before they have an understanding of these differences. Elementary students should be taught to get along with every other person regardless of any difference in ethnicity, skin color, sexual orientation, or disability.

Definitions should be clear within the standards and not left to an individual teacher's or textbook's understanding of a term. Some of those terms that stand out are: Diverse group, Affinity group, equity, inequity, and even identity.

According to the Merriam-Webster Dictionary, diverse is defined: 1: differing from one another: UNLIKE, people with diverse interests. 2: composed of distinct or unlike elements or qualities. a diverse population. Group is defined: 1: a number of people or things that are together or in the same place; 2: a number of people who are connected by some shared activity, interest, or quality.

Using these definitions, it would seem that a diverse group would be a number of people together who differ from one another. This is not an obvious distinction as used within the texts of the proposed standards but appears to be individual groups of like people instead of individual groups with different peoples.

A major difficulty with the seventh grade and even high school New Mexico History standards are not necessarily the standards themselves, but resources. There is one standard textbook that has been used for decades with revisions over time, but written for the 7th grade students. There is a lack of textbooks and primary sources for high school New Mexico History, yet many standards require their use. PED must make a concerted effort to support new resources for New Mexico History.

United States History has typically been taught over two school years. Exploration to the end of the Civil War has been taught in 8th grade, while Reconstruction to present has been the instruction for student in high school. The new standards appear to make U.S. History a subject that is to be taught from exploration to present in high school. Currently, it is very difficult to cover the needed topics and standards in high school from Reconstruction forward. With the new standards, there is a possibility that another entire school year may need to be devoted to U.S. History which may make it difficult to include the various required credits for graduation. This could mean students will need to take 4.5 full years of history to include U.S. History, World History, Government/Economics, and New Mexico history for .5 credits assuming that an additional year will need to be added to adequately teach the new Social Studies standards in U.S. History.

Throughout the 8th grade and high school standards, students are asked to make claims. Most of these claims assume that the claim asked for within the standard can only be interpreted in that way and do not provide the opportunity for the student to present a counterclaim. Biased claims, based upon the opinions of the authors of these standards must be revised to include alternative viewpoints unless there is incontrovertible evidence that the author is correct in that standard.

Throughout the high school proposed standards are several assumptions and biases that appear to be written whether intentional or otherwise that seem to reflect a so-called Progressive view of history and society instead of the more main-stream or centrist view. Topics regarding guns and violence in the U.S. do not provide for 2nd Amendment rights protected by the U.S. Constitution. These standards also address social issues regarding sexuality, homosexuality, “othering,” that arguably make these standards statements of fact instead of the possible biased opinion of some scholars or writers of these standards. Although schools have a responsibility to ensure that schools are inclusive of all people regardless of their religious beliefs, sexual preferences or identity, race, or sexual identity, these are issues that should not be taught as the “truth” by teachers or the government, but are issues that should be discussed and learned in the home.

Formatting should be the same throughout the standards. Pronouns should be limited as the standards are for teacher reference and including pronouns makes them confusing, ie: themselves, their, should be “students” or “the student or students will...”

Below are additions, comments, or deletions this District recommends to be made to individual standards throughout the draft. The continuation of this narrative mentions the standards by number with suggestions and a short narrative explaining why the District believes these changes should be made. The second document shows the standards side by side with recommended changes or edits to the standards the District would like to see changed.

K.1; 1.1: Although something important, this standard might be discussed, but appears to be a lofty goal for students of this age.

K.2: 1.2: Same as K.1, Rather difficult for students of this age.

K.3; 1.4: Students in K are just learning to read and write, first grade students are learning to read and just beginning to read to learn. As with each of the above-mentioned standards, these are not appropriate at this age. Would be more appropriate at 3rd or 4th grade when students are reading to learn and writing more reasoned responses.

K.4; 1.5; 2.5: Delete. Students in these grades must rely on a teacher to determine what local, regional, or global problems to address. These problems will be those the teacher sees fit to address and not something that aligns with parental or community standards.

K.10: Replace with current K-4 Benchmark III-B Standards:

1. Recognize and name symbols and activities of the United States, New Mexico, and tribes to include:

a. United States symbols to include the flag, bald eagle, monuments

b. New Mexico symbols to include the flag, Smokey Bear, State Bird, chili

c. tribal symbols and activities to include Feast Days, pottery, arts, storytelling

2. Recognize patriotic activities including The Pledge of Allegiance, The Star-Spangled Banner, salute to the New Mexico flag, and New Mexico state song.

K.22: Delete language after “Communicate a positive of view of themselves.” As discussed above would be better to state “Students will communicate a positive view of themselves.”

K.23: Delete reference to groups, instead: “Students will describe ways in which they are similar and different from other people.”

K.25: Delete references to groups, instead: “Students will describe their family history and culture.”

K Anchor Standard “Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Standards 19. Diversity and Identity”

Include from current standards, K-4 Benchmark I A - “Identify the customs, celebrations, and holidays of various cultures of New Mexico.

K Anchor Standard “Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Standards 19. Diversity and Identity”

Include from current standards, K-4 Benchmark II-B – “Identify family customs and traditions and explain their importance.”

1.3: Same as previously discussed in K.1, K.2,1.2, K.3, 1.4, determining whether a primary source is primarily fact or fiction is something more appropriate for students reading to learn instead of learning to read.

1,23; 1.24; 2.26; 2.28 ; 2.29: Define “groups” and “identities.”

1 Anchor Standards “Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Standards 19. Diversity and Identity”

Include K-4 Benchmark II-E – “Identify characteristics of culture (e.g., language, customs, religion, shelter)

3.14: Replace “diverse groups” with “different groups.”

5.12: Delete or phrase differently. The term “inequity” is open to the teacher’s opinion.

5.29: How is this to be done? Should this be a standard for older students?

5.30: Define “main identity groups.”

6.7; 8.5: Needs to be better defined. Assumption is that it is asking students to understand the difference between map projections. However, does it also include actual bias based upon those same map projections? This should be better explained or written to include the difference of physical differences in map projections and possible distinctions in how one might view the world culturally/financially/size based upon the view of the projection.

7.11: Define “group identity.”

7.28: Define “social identities.”

7.50: Delete. 7.72 is a better standard for basically the same idea. Needs to better identify “culture.” Does this try to bring a distinction between racial cultures, religion, country of origin, skin color, American as opposed to European, etc?

7.60: Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures. What is this standard asking for? It seems to imply that diversity creates unequal power relations. If New Mexico is teaching diversity is a good thing and needs to be celebrated, how can this create unequal power relations? Needs to be more specific to demonstrate that there have been unequal power relations in New Mexico and how that affected the development of different groups, cultures, and tribes.

7.61: Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices. This appears to be a standard based upon opinion and not something that might be widely held as fact that there are current injustices. Possibly, instead of stating as fact, could be used to explore what students may believe are current injustices and how they impact their lives. Might include the negative treatment of people in the past and present, but also demonstrate the positive advances made over the past century.

7.78: Include word “sources” “primary and secondary sources”

8.68: As written does not provide for students to “claim” or “discuss” that there might be other hypothesis or arguments that contributed to the start of the Civil War.

8.78: This standard is not a statement of fact but of opinion. Remove the word “systemic.”

9-12.NMH.18: Poorly written and confusing pronoun. Difficult to understand what the intent is.

9-12.NMH.35, 37, 38 and many more: Pronouns should not be used. Instead use “New Mexico.”

9-12.NMH.47. Demonstrate historical causation by using 9-12.NMH.48. multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the Civil Rights era in New Mexico. Are these one or two standards? Poor proofing or each needs to be finished with the reason for the standard.

9-12.US.53: Rephrase.

9-12.US.56: Rephrase. This standard implies as fact that the economic system in the U.S. is not efficient, equitable, or just. Standard 8.4. requires students to evaluate primary and secondary sources for the author’s bias, perspective of the creator, and relevance to the topic. Stating 9-12 US.56 as unequivocal fact makes 8.4 an important standard to learn. Opinions should not be included as standards.

9-12.US.97: Define “othering.”

9-12.US.104: Rephrase to eliminate bias.

9-12.US.123: Delete. Makes an assumption that “conservatism” has been a liability or created negative issues for diverse groups of people. An examination of the differences between liberal and conservative political points of view may be appropriate, but to imply that one has had a greater negative impact to diverse groups is inappropriate and biased.

9-12.US.130: Delete or clarify to ensure this is only an examination of the times and facts and is not a condemnation or endorsement of a chosen lifestyle.

9-12.US.132: Biased and raises a possibility for indoctrination for or against 2nd Amendment guarantees. Delete after: “Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers.”

9-12.US.135: Raises assumptions that are biased and alludes that not everyone in the U.S. has a fair chance to succeed. Delete remainder of sentence after “Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America.”

9-12.ECI.16: Political view that is a controversial statement regarding systemic issues that rise more to the level of opinion. Revise: Assess how social policies and economic forces affect social, political, and economic opportunity.

9-12.ECI.18: Revise, not a statement of fact. “Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations.”

9-12.ECI.21: Remove the term “systemic.” Implies an assumption as fact.

Portales Municipal Schools Recommended Edits to the Proposed Social Studies Standards

K-5

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
K.1. Recognize a compelling question.	Delete. Assignment, should be a reading standard. Not age appropriate for students just learning to read.
K.2. Identify the relationship between compelling and supporting questions.	Delete. Assignment, should be a reading standard. Not age appropriate for students just learning to read.
K.3. Construct responses to compelling questions using examples.	Delete. Assignment, not a standard. Not age appropriate for students just learning to read.
K.4. Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems.	Delete. K.5 provides the same opportunity and does not rely upon the teacher to determine an issue.
K.10. Identify the local, state, and national symbols (e.g., flag, bird, song)	K.10. 1. Recognize and name symbols and activities of the United States, New Mexico, and tribes to include: a. United States symbols to include the flag, bald eagle, monuments b. New Mexico symbols to include the flag, Smokey Bear, State Bird, chili c. tribal symbols and activities to include Feast Days, pottery, arts, storytelling 2. Recognize patriotic activities including The Pledge of Allegiance, The Star-Spangled Banner, salute to the New Mexico flag, and New Mexico state song.
Include as additional standard (Source: K-4 Benchmark I-A, Kindergarten)	K.26. (Add to standards.) Identify the customs, celebrations, and holidays of various cultures of New Mexico
Include as additional standard (Source: K-4 Benchmark II-B, Kindergarten)	K.27. (Add to standards.) Identify family customs and traditions and explain their importance.
1.1. Explain why a compelling question is important.	Delete. Assignment, should be a reading standard. Not age appropriate for students just learning to read.
1.2. Generate supporting questions related to compelling questions across the social studies disciplines.	Delete. Assignment, should be a reading standard. Not age appropriate for students just learning to read.
1.3. Determine if a source is primary or secondary and distinguish whether it is mostly fact or fiction.	Delete. Assignment, not a standard. Not age appropriate for students just learning to read.
1.5. Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems.	1.5. Delete. Same as K.4.
Include	1.25. (Add to standards) Identify characteristics of culture (e.g., language, customs, religion, shelter)
2.5. Take group or individual action to help address local, regional, and/or global problems.	2.5. Delete. Same as K.4 and 1.5.
2.28. Describe ways we are similar and different from people who share identities, and people who do not.	2.28. Students will describe ways in which they are similar and different from other people .

3.14. Use a timeline to analyze connections among historical events, including how human settlement and movement impacted diverse groups of people.	3.14. Use a timeline to analyze connections among historical events, including how human settlement and movement impacted different groups of people.
3.27. Express a positive view of personal identities without making someone else feel badly.	3.27. Students will express a positive view of themselves without making someone else feel badly.
3.28. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other people and groups.	3.28. Compare and contrast cultural identity with other cultures.
5.12. Describe how inequity in the United States laid the foundation for conflict that continues today.	Delete. Inappropriate for 5th grade as perceived "inequity" is open to teacher's opinion.
5.30. Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions of people in main identity groups.	5.30. Demonstrate knowledge of family history, culture, and past contributions.

Grades 6-8

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
6.7. Identify inherent bias in maps.	6.7. Identify inherent bias in map projections.
7.11. Examine the relationship between stereotypes, bias, and group identity	7.11 Examine the relationship between stereotypes and bias. (Define group identity.)
7.21. Select a province of New Mexico and research its distinguishing characteristics.	7.21. Select a region of New Mexico and research its distinguishing characteristics.
7.28. Evaluate how society's responses to different social identities lead to access and/or barriers for various demographic groups in relation to various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.	7.28. Describe the obstacles and how people have overcome these obstacles in various societal institutions, including but not limited to education, healthcare, government, and industry.
7.49. Describe the relationship between their cultural heritage(s) and their personal identity/identities.	7.49. Students will describe the relationship between their cultural heritage(s) and their personal identity/identities.
7.50. Identify what students want the world to see when their culture is on display, and how to address negative perceptions.	Delete. Use 7.72 instead.
7.60. Demonstrate how diversity includes the impact of unequal power relations on the development of group identities and cultures.	Delete. Not a standard but an opinion. Could be an assignment.
7.61. Brainstorm ways in which New Mexicans might heal from past and current injustices.	Delete. Not a standard but an opinion. Could be an assignment.
7.72. Discuss how individuals want to be perceived when their culture is on display and conclude how to address stereotypes.	7.72. Discuss how individuals want to be perceived by others and how to address stereotypes.
7.78. Analyze primary and secondary to explain what impact Mexican Independence had on (the area) that would become) New Mexico.	7.78. Analyze primary and secondary sources to explain what impact Mexican Independence had on the area that would become New Mexico.

7.103. Identify, explore, and describe the traditions, rites, and norms of the groups to which the student identifies as belonging; and explain how these traditions, rights, and norms may have changed over time.	7.103. Identify, explore, and describe the traditions, rites, and norms of the culture to which the student identifies as belonging; and explain how these traditions, rights, and norms may have changed over time.
8.5. Identify inherent bias in maps and analyze how they impact cultural memory.	8.5. Identify inherent bias in map projections and analyze how they could influence national and cultural perceptions.
8.16. Create historical fiction texts that accurately portray historical people, places, events, and ideologies of the time in order to examine history from the perspective of the participants.	8.16. Accurately portray historical people, places, events, and ideologies of the time in order to examine history from the perspective of the participants.
8.30. Support a claim about how knowledge and perspectives of Indigenous peoples of North America, and Indigenous Peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems.	8.30. Research how knowledge and perspectives of Indigenous peoples of North America, and Indigenous Peoples around the world, have the potential to inform solutions to global problems.
8.46. Use primary and secondary sources to evaluate an instructor-generated claim about the significance of the 7 Years' War (French and Indian War).	8.46. Analyze the significance of the 7 Years' War (French and Indian War).
8.68. Use text evidence to support a claim about how conflicts over slavery led the North and South to war.	8.68. Research how conflicts over slavery led the North and South to war and identify other issues raised that created an impact on citizens of the North or South to support a war.
8.78. Discuss the impact of significant legislation and judicial precedents in formally perpetuating systemic oppression during the Reconstruction Era.	8.78. Discuss the impact of significant legislation and judicial precedents in former slave states that perpetuated oppression during the Reconstruction Era.

9-12 Civics

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
9-12.Civ.38. Evaluate how fundamental American principles have been interpreted over time and how they currently shape policy debates.	9-12.Civ.38. Evaluate how fundamental American principles have been interpreted over time and how they currently shape policy debates.
9-12.Civ.40. Analyze historic inequalities and evaluate proposed solutions to correct them.	9-12.Civ.40. Analyze historic inequalities and evaluate proposed solutions to ensure representation for all citizens in the United States form of government.
9-12.Civ.32. Analyze civic virtues and principles, and the role of the people in creating good governance at various levels.	9-12.Civ.32. Analyze civic virtues and principles, and the role of the people in creating a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people" at all levels of government.

9-12 NM History

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
----------------	-----------------

9-12.NMH.18. Demonstrate knowledge of their family history and cultural background and can describe how their own identity is informed and shaped by their membership in multiple identity groups.	9-12.NMH.18. Demonstrate knowledge of each student's family history and cultural background and describe how each student's own identity is informed and shaped.
9-12.NMH.26. Determine the role of race and racism in the acts of land redistribution during the territorial period.	9-12.NMH.26. Determine the issues that affected some people's access pertaining to the acts of land redistribution during the territorial period.
9-12.NMH.35. Summarize the impacts that artists have had on our state, and why so many artists choose to live in New Mexico.	9-12.NMH.35. Summarize the impacts that artists have had on New Mexico, and why so many artists choose to live in New Mexico.
9-12.NMH.37. Analyze the causes and effects of the Dust Bowl in New Mexico, and how it changed or eliminated communities in our state.	9-12.NMH.37. Analyze the causes and effects of the Dust Bowl in New Mexico, and how it changed or eliminated communities in this state.
9-12.NMH.47. Demonstrate historical causation by using	9-12.NMH.47. Demonstrate historical causation by using multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the Civil Rights era in New Mexico .
9-12.NMH.48. multiple perspectives to conduct historical analysis of the Civil Rights era in New Mexico (47 and 48 should be together????)	47 and 48 should be together.

9-12 US History U.S. History standards prior to Reconstruction are traditionally taught in 8th grade and should either be included in 8th grade or removed from high school unless a high school does offer the full course.

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
9-12.US.50. Compare and contrast global historical reconciliation and reparations efforts (Denazification, Australia Mabo Case/Terra Nullius) with Reconstruction.	9-12.US.50. Analyze the Reconstruction efforts and determine their short- and long-term affects.
9-12.US.53. Identify the ways in which gender and sexuality were changing and unchanged during the 19th century.	9-12.US.53. Identify the ways in which gender roles have changed since the 19th century.
9-12.US.56. Evaluate what an efficient, equitable, and just economic system would look like in the United States.	9-12.US.56. Evaluate the the economic system of the United States in relationship to equity, equality, and efficiency.
9-12.US.104. Analyze state-sponsored persecution and "othering" including anti-Semitism and homophobia	9-12.US.104. Analyze how the perceptions of racism, sexism, and the "othering" of people groups have changed over time.
9-12.US.116. Examine the evolution of McCarthyism from the Red Scare to COINTELPRO.	9-12.US.116. Examine Cold War issues such as McCarthyism and the Counter Intelligence Program.

9-12.US.123. Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of conservatism in the United States on diverse groups of people.	9-12.US.123. Assess the short- and long-term social and political impacts of different eras in the United States on diverse groups of people (i.e. progressivism, seperatism, World War I, Great Depression, World War II, Cold War, Postwar Boom, Civil Rights, Vietnam War, Era of Social Change, environmentalism, populism, conservatism, liberalism, globalization).
9-12.US.130. Examine the experiences and activism of the LGBTQIA+ community during this period, including the AIDS epidemic, social movements, resistance, and hate crimes.	Clarify to ensure this is only an examination of the facts, times, and events and is not a condemnation or endorsement of a chosen lifestyle.
9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers and the consequences of gun violence on American society past, present, and future.	9-12.US.132. Examine the history of guns in America as compared to other world powers in context with the 2nd Amendment.
9-12.US.134. Examine anti-immigrant sentiment in the United States over time and the experiences of diverse immigrant groups past and present.	9-12.US.134. Examine the experiences of diverse immigrant groups past and present in the United States.
9-12.US.135. Create an action plan for a more just and equitable America for diverse groups of people including Native Americans and African Americans.	9-12.US.135. Examine social justice movements throughout history designed to improve conditions for Americans including Native Americans and African Americans.

9-12 Economics

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
9-12.Econ.24. Critique inequalities that exist in economic systems.	9-12.Econ.24. Compare and contrast economic systems including socialism, communism, and capitalism.

9-12 Ethnic, Cultural, and Identity Studies

Draft Standard	Proposed Change
9-12.ECI.13. Recognize and value my group identities without perceiving or treating others as inferior.	9-12.ECI.13. Recognize and value all cultures represented in the community without perceiving or treating any culture as inferior.
9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces offer privilege or systemic inequity in accessing social, political, and economic opportunity for identity groups in education, government, healthcare, industry, and law enforcement.	9-12.ECI.16. Assess how social policies and economic forces affect social, political, and economic opportunity.
9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations among identity groups.	9-12.ECI.18. Examine the impact of historical cultural, economic, political, religious, and social factors which resulted in unequal power relations

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and society address systemic inequity through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

9-12.ECI.21. Investigate how identity groups and others attempt to improve society through individual actions, individual champions, social movements, and local community, national, and global advocacy.

[EXTERNAL] Citizen feedback on NM Social Studies Standards cbates74@comcast.net <cbates74@comcast.net>

Tue 11/9/2021 4:41 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

I've read through the proposed NM Social Studies Standards. As a parent of three children I feel that this is a pathetic attempt to disguise teaching critical race theory in our schools. If this proposal is passed I along with many parents will be pulling our kids out of APS. This type of propaganda does nothing but divide the population it does absolutely nothing to bring people together or advance any particular group. Labeling and entire race as abusers while labeling another entire race as victims destroys communities. The only thing that has been accomplished so far with this is that now it is perfectly acceptable for members of certain races to do interviews and go on talk shows and call for the complete destruction of another race and unfortunately it's seen as acceptable and even applauded.

Our children don't need to be divided they must be united. They must be taught that anyone regardless of race, gender, ideology, or creed can be anything that they want to be and can accomplish all of their dreams if they are willing to work hard. This type of program is destroying society.

I was born and raised in New Mexico. My Great Great Great Grandparents are pictured in the museum in Old Town. I'm raising my kids here and I along with many others will not sit back quietly and let you try to destroy our culture.

Thank you

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards feedback

Ben Brown <bennethon@protonmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 5:24 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

To whom it may concern,

I reviewed the draft for the proposed Social Studies Standards. They are frankly disgusting and Un-American. The proposed standards frequently encourage the children to focus on their racial differences. What is the purpose of this? Why would we want to encourage the children, at such a young age, to focus so heavily on their race? Are you trying to make the children into little racists? I simply do not understand the reasoning behind this kind of instruction. It is as if you are intentionally trying to cause division between the children. It is unfathomable why you would want to do this. Instead, why not focus on our common American heritage?

I am also concerned about the frequent inclusion of leftist politics in general throughout the proposed standard. Gun violence? Police brutality? Why not teach the children the positive aspects of police? How about we teach the children why the founding fathers included the second amendment? (If you're not aware, the second amendment exists so the people can protect themselves from government tyranny.)

The entire proposed standard reads like communist propaganda.

Signed, a concerned American,
Benjamin Brown

[EXTERNAL] Oppose the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11

Julianne Stroup <jstroup@torcschools.net>

Tue 11/9/2021 6:42 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

📎 1 attachments (82 KB)

TCMSD Petition for Social Studies Standards 2021.pdf;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

John Sena,
Policy Division,
New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED),
300 Don Gaspar Avenue,
Room 121,
Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

RE: Reject the Proposed Social Study Standards of 2021 NMAC 6.29.11

Dear Mr. Sena,

On September 28, 2021 the Truth or Consequences Board of Education signed the unanimously approved Petition requesting PED grant NM School Districts adequate time to review, research and provide comment to the Proposed draft of the Social Studies Standards. I have attached a copy for your information. We received correspondence from PED stating they would not give us time and that it was important these new standards be put in place as quickly as possible. PED's unwillingness to postpone this hearing and give school districts adequate time to address these standards tells me that this hearing is only a formality and the PED has already made up its mind these social studies standards will be approved and made permanent.

I do not believe that in High School U.S. History, students should be required to examine the past, present, and future of gun violence in the U.S. Of course, there are no standards provided to discuss the constitutional rights of gun owners, or that individuals, not an inanimate object, are responsible for gun violence in America or how gangs, drug cartels, etc. have resulted in greater gun violence in our society. 6.29.11.21(A)(1)(gg). This is just one example of many of the proposed changes that attempt to indoctrinate our children with socialist ideology that I oppose.

Government funded bias has no place in our classrooms. I emphatically reject the overall progressive – even socialist- bias that these standards are intended to impose on our children.

Sincerely,

Julianne Stroup
Board Secretary
Truth or Consequences Municipal Schools
575-497-0352

Petition of the
Truth or Consequences Municipal School District Board of Education

Whereas, in June of 2009, the Public Education Department of the State of New Mexico (“PED”) adopted comprehensive Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “Existing Standards”);

Whereas, the PED has prepared a draft of new Social Studies Standards for New Mexico for kindergarten through the 12th grade (the “New Standards Draft”) and only recently has made the New Standards Draft available for review;

Whereas, social studies and the standards of social studies that are to be taught to the students of New Mexico are of critical importance;

Whereas, the Existing Standards are 26 pages in length and the New Standards Draft is 129 pages in length and contains numerous material additions and revisions to the Existing Standards;

Whereas, substantial time, resources, research, and efforts of school administrators and teachers, including social studies teachers, will be necessary to properly evaluate, carefully consider, and thoughtfully offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, other stakeholders, including parents and others in the community, need time to review and provide comments regarding the New Standards Draft;

Whereas, due to the events of the past year and a half, almost all of our students are behind in their education, including some who are behind as much as a year;

Whereas, school districts in New Mexico are continuing to address numerous Covid 19 issues;

Whereas, the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel are working overtime to help our students achieve their proper grade level, handle the myriad complexities resulting from the Covid 19 pandemic, and perform their regular jobs, which has resulted in considerable stress and fatigue;

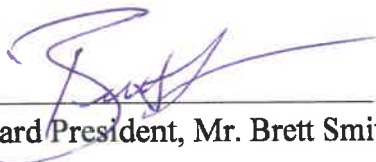

Whereas, due to the extreme workload of the school administrators, teachers, and other district personnel, they do not have the time to adequately read, evaluate, research, and offer possible revisions to the New Standards Draft at this time and during this school year;

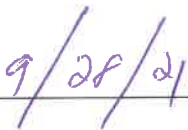

Whereas, the Truth or Consequences Municipal School District Board of Education (the "Board") deems the proper vetting and critical review of the New Standards Draft to be of the utmost importance;

Now therefore, the Board, by approval by its members, hereby petitions the PED to grant the school districts in New Mexico and the public a time period extending to July 1, 2022, to adequately review, research, and provide comments and proposed changes to the New Standards Draft.

Respectively submitted,

Truth or Consequences Municipal School District Board of Education

Board President, Mr. Brett Smith

Date

[EXTERNAL] 6.29.11 NMAC

Donna Johnson <dljohnson4650@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:28 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

As a parent and grandparent, I vehemently oppose the proposed Social Studies curriculum 6.29.11 NMAC, commonly known as Critical Race Theory.

Teaching our children about racial diversity is not only disturbing but entirely out of line for ANY school to teach. This is the responsibility of PARENTS, not schools.

This type of curriculum is not education but rather indoctrination. Myself and an overwhelming number of parents absolutely will not tolerate this and will remove their children entirely from public schools should this be instituted. In fact, I will make it my primary mission to encourage as many parents as possible to pull their children out of public education.

I urge you to table this ludicrous plan to initiate this vile program and request a response.

Donna Johnson

[EXTERNAL] Social Studies Standards

Lesley McKinney <lesleymck@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:32 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hello!

I am writing to say that I support the Social Studies Standards as written.

Thank you,

Lesley

[EXTERNAL] changes in public education curriculum

Paul Trone <ptrone82@gmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:40 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

STOP with the insanity of extreme liberal ideology in our public schools! Would the left like it if the conservatives help complete power and pushed extreme right propaganda in the schools... CRT advances NOTHING, except MORE racism... NOT less. DO NOT PROMOTE THIS PROPAGANDA at the expense of our children and our country!

STOP IT. if you don't, I believe that the left will lose control in the leadership of our state. The general public knows that this is total garbage.

Paul

[EXTERNAL] social studies cir.

Dennis Sanderson <dcs1sjs2@hotmail.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 8:55 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

i am a 73 year old, white male, father of two children, one of whom has 4 children of his own. I have an M.B.A with emphasis in finance and am retired following a 40 year professional career. In all levels of formal education I was poorly educated in matters of so-called race. I am well aware of there being only one race, the human race, and that we are all children of a loving God. Words cannot express how strongly I believe in the new recommendations for social studies education in New Mexico. It is critical that our children in New Mexico learn the truth of the history of the country and of our multi-cultural state, and that means being honest with what has and is happening in our country that has disadvantaged people of color and advantaged people with white skin.

Please be firm with effecting these changes and improvements because we owe it to children of all ages and "races" to be honest with them. If that means certain children are troubled by part of what they discover and learn, then it probably also means that the same children can grow to be adults who understand the dynamics of our society.

Respectfully,

Dennis C. Sanderson

.

[EXTERNAL] Public Comment on Social Studies Standards

DONALD D VASSER <wordofhope_1@msn.com>

Tue 11/9/2021 9:37 PM

To: FeedBack, Rule, PED <Rule.FeedBack@state.nm.us>

 1 attachments (18 KB)

Social Studies Standards.docx;

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Attached are comments concerning the proposed Social Studies standards. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Debbie Vasser

I have read all the Social Studies standards, and quite frankly, find them troubling. Several of the stated guiding principles are of concern.

For instance, the statement “Incorporating major historical themes such as power, class conflict, struggle, geo-political impact, social justice, equity, and diversity” really frighten me. I am 66 and these concepts sound like the language of the Communist Party that threatened to take our country by taking our educational system. If standards such as these pass throughout the country, the Marxists have done what they said they would do decades ago.

“Ensuring divergence from a singular Eurocentric cultural script ensuring equitable inclusion of accurate historical stories reflecting indigenous, Hispano/Latino, Chicano, Mestizo, Genizaro, African American and other cultural perspectives” is another statement I find troubling. I appreciate that Americans come from many different backgrounds, but the purpose of history is to teach the facts of what happened to form the nation in which the student now resides, and to teach how the government of said nation works. I find information concerning these important areas of American history and Civics to be quite lacking in these standards.

The statement “Utilizing historical events from a future focused orientation” almost sounds like you have a desired future for these students, and you are picking and choosing historical facts to encourage the formation of the future nation which you desire for them.

“Developing a future focused orientation that allows students to be critical thinkers in considering historical context in mending, healing, and transforming future interactions.” This principle, combined with 8.23: “Synthesize historical and local knowledge to take age-appropriate action towards mending, healing, and transforming the future” causes me to question the goals of the writers of these standards. Do the writers consider the United States of America, as founded, to be defective, and thus are seeking to effect change through the educational system? This is not the role of the educator! The educational system is to give students the tools needed (reading, writing, math, historical facts, scientific facts, etc.) so that the students can then combine these facts with their own thoughts, values, beliefs, and histories in order to come to their own conclusions about how to deal with issues which do and will confront them.

My concern is reinforced as I read in the introduction: “It will also require an articulated district curriculum which connects students to the social world through informed instructional experiences led by teachers who are committed to active civic participation.” I question the world view of those who inform the instructional experiences. I also question what is their vision of the civic participation in which the students will be motivated to be involved. I know that teachers are super influential in students’ lives, and that the curriculum, which we have yet to see, also greatly guides their thinking. Since these standards seem to be designed to get students to question what now is and advocate for something better, I am extremely interested in knowing the world view of the teachers leading this type of instruction, and the world view of those writing the curriculum.

There was much that concerned me as I read these standards. I have tried to summarize my concerns in the following points.

1. Instead of teaching American history, they seem to encourage students to question American history. I find an alarmingly small amount of information concerning extremely important American history, such as facts concerning the colonies, the founding of the United States, the founding documents that assure our freedom, the impact of religion on the development of our nation, progress brought about through inventions and the industrial revolution, and the way in which our government system allows change to be brought about through laws, just to name a few. It seems the standards are so involved with getting the students to question, critique, compare and contrast, discuss the interactions, etc. that there is not much emphasis given to teaching the facts of our history, the way our government works, and the unique freedoms granted us in this great country.

2. It seems there is not time given to teaching E Pluribus Unum—“From the many—One”. Instead, the students are encouraged to see themselves as members of groups—and have group identities. This troubles me because the oldest technique for conquering a nation is to divide and conquer. It seems the students are not encouraged to see themselves as Americans—members of a great nation that has worked through its problems and sacrificed to help others within and without the nation. They see themselves, rather, as people having various group identities. Often the groups are at odds with each other. This is not a good way to teach children the history of their nation in which they have unique freedoms which allow them to live, believe, act according to their consciences, and to make something of themselves, no matter their backgrounds. It seems that there is a glaring omission of discussion of such things as character, the work ethic, forgiving others, selflessness, etc. If you are encouraging students how to interact socially, these qualities need to be emphasized. Again, my age enables me to remember when students were constantly being reminded “Character counts.” Dr. King wanted his children to be judged by their character. Now it seems that character is not even mentioned. Equity and social justice have replaced character. That is not right.

